CALENDARS.

Instructions to Editors.

The Master of the Rolls desires to call the attention of the Editors of Calendars to the following considerations, with a view to secure uniformity of plan in the important works on which they are engaged:—

He is anxious to extend, as far as is consistent with proper economy and despatch, the utility of the Calendars of State Papers now publishing under his control: 1st. As the most efficient means of making the national archives accessible to all who are interested in historical inquiries; 2nd. As the best justification of the liberality and munificence of the Government in throwing open these papers to the public, and providing proper catalogues of their contents at the national expense.

The greater number of the readers who will consult and value these works can have little or no opportunity of visiting the Public Record Office, in which these papers are deposited. The means for consulting the originals must necessarily be limited when readers live at a distance from the metropolis; still more if they are residents of Scotland, Ireland, distant colonies, or foreign states. Even when such an opportunity does exist, the difficulty of mastering the original hands in which these papers are written will deter many readers from consulting them. Above all, their great variety and number must present formidable obstacles to literary inquirers, however able, sanguine, and energetic, when the information contained in them is not made accessible by satisfactory Calendars.

The Master of the Rolls considers that, without superseding the necessity of consulting the originals, every Editor ought to frame his Calendar in such a manner that it shall present, in as condensed a form as possible, a correct index of the contents of the papers described in it. He considers that the entries should be so minute as to enable the reader to discover not only the general contents of the originals, but also what they do not contain. If the information be not sufficiently precise, if facts and names be omitted or concealed under a vague and general description, the reader will be often misled, he will assume that where the abstracts are silent as to information to be found in the documents, such information does not exist; or, he will have to examine every original in detail, and thus one great purpose will have been lost for which these Calendars have been compiled.

H 672. Wt. B 450.

As the documents are various, the Master of the Rolls considers that they will demand a corresponding mode of treatment. The following rules are to be observed:—

1st. All formal and official documents, such as letters of credence, warrants, grants, and the like, should be described as briefly as possible.

2nd. Letters and documents referring to one subject only should be catalogued as briefly as is consistent with correctness. But when they contain miscellaneous news, such a description should be given as will enable a reader to form an adequate notion of the variety of their contents.

3rd. Wherever a letter or paper is especially difficult to decipher, or the allusions more than ordinarily obscure, it will be advisable for the Editor to adhere, as closely as is consistent with brevity, to the text of the document. He is to do the same when it contains secret or very rare information.

4th. Where the Editor has deciphered letters in cipher, the decipher may be printed at full length. But when a contemporary or authorised decipher exists it will be sufficient to treat the cipher as an ordinary document.

5th. Striking peculiarities of expression, proverbs, manners, &c. are to be noticed.

6th. Original dates are to be given at the close of each entry, that the reader may know the exact evidence by which the marginal dates are determined.

7th. Where letters are endorsed by the receivers and the date of their delivery specified, these endorsements are to be recorded.

8th. The number of written pages of each document is to be specified, as a security for its integrity, and that readers may know what proportion the abstract bears to the original.

9th. The language of every document is to be specified. If, however, the greater part of the collection be in English, it will be sufficient to denote those only which are in a different tongue.

10th. Where documents have been printed, a reference should be given to the publication.

11th. Each series is to be chronological.

12th. The Prefaces of Editors, in explanation of documents in the volume, are not to exceed fifty pages, unless the written permission of the Master of the Rolls to the contrary be obtained.

 Editors employed in foreign archives are to transcribe at full length important and secret papers.

PREFACE.

THIS our third volume, giving abstracts of the English Public Records relating to Ireland from 1285 to 1292 inclusive, differs in several material respects from either of the two previous volumes. Though of considerably greater bulk than the first, it contains upwards of two thousand articles less than it, and nearly twelve hundred articles less than the second volume. Nevertheless the matter contained in our present volume is, we venture to think, neither less useful, nor less interesting, nor less important than that in either of the other two volumes. The reason of these peculiarities arises, we believe, from the multiplicity of details in the Irish Exchequer Rolls, of which we have here upwards of thirty-three.

In dealing with such a vast and generally unconnected mass of matter it is difficult to decide where to begin; but perhaps we cannot do better than follow the plan adopted in the two previous volumes, and consider the entries under general heads. We propose to do so in the following order:—1. Accounts; 2. Alienor, the Queen Consort; 3. Appointments; 4. Castles; 5. Chancery; 6. Church; 7. Cities; 8. Escheatry; 9. Exchequer; 10. Fees; 11. Free warrens; 12. The Holy Land; 13. Inquisitions and Extents; 14. Ireland, the Irish; 15. Justiciaries; 16. The King; 17. Lands; 18. Legal documents; 19. Liberties, franchises, customs, murages, exemptions; 20. Markets and fairs; 21. Merchants, trade, wool, wines, &c.; 22. Mines; 23. Mint and exchange;

24. Monasteries; 25. Petitions; 26. Welsh and English vassals or mercenaries serving in Ireland; and 27. Miscellaneous.

1. Accounts form a prominent feature of this volume, and of these the accounts of the Irish Exchequer are very numerous. These Irish Exchequer Rolls or documents we purpose to consider under the general head of "Exchequer." There are only four rolls of accounts of payments. Besides these there are two treasurers' accounts (Nos. 42 and 169); but the editor has found no justiciary's accounts, properly so-called, though it is plain from several passages in this volume that such formerly existed.

2. That Alienor, Queen Consort of Edward I., had some connection with Ireland is abundantly proved in this and the preceding volume. The issues of the barony of Donoil [now probably the parish of Donohill, co. Tipperary] were paid to her (p. 66); and she owned timber works at Glencree, co. Wicklow (641, 741, 769, and 796). Shortly after her death a commission issued to Richard de Geyton of custody of all her lands and tenements in Ireland (849); and Christiana de Mariscis having let to her for life the manor of Kilkea and a moiety of the vill of Castledermot, the King ordered them to be restored to Christiana de Mariscis (835).

3. Of appointments we have the following:—the office of Treasurer of the Exchequer committed to Nicholas de Clare (117); the King confirms the commission made to John de Hacche, junior, of custody of Rolls and writs in the eyres next to be taken by Irish justices (929); appointment of William de Estdene as Treasurer of the Exchequer, Dublin (1089); John of Kent to the Chancellor of England praying for custody of the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer, Dublin (1185); grant to William de Idesdale of the office of marshalship of the Exchequer, Dublin (114); grant to Geoffrey le Brun of the office of chamberlain of the Exchequer, Dublin (750); the King commits during pleasure to William de Vescy the custody of the office of justiciary of Ireland (768); grant to Walter de Kenlegh of the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer, Dublin (826); commission to Thomas Cantok of the office of Chancery of Ireland (1037); appointment of Henry de Ponte to the office of Chamberlain of the Irish Exchequer (1084).

We have moreover several nominations or appointments to the office of sheriff in various counties:—Commission to Thomas de la Roche for 5 years of custody of the county of Cork (123 and 654); the same county committed to the same for 4 years (1048–1050); commission to the same for 7 years of custody of the county of Connaught (120); the King having learnt that Robert de Wyk is useful for his service in Ireland commands Nicholas de Clere, Treasurer of Ireland, to commit to Robert the county of Kerry, to hold during the King's pleasure, or that of the justiciary of Ireland for the time being, and during good behaviour, yearly rendering at the Exchequer of Dublin as much as other sheriffs were wont to render (602); commission to Robert de Stapleton of the county of Tipperary (734).

4. Castles. We find entries of fees of constables, Welsh vassals, supplies of wine, payments for fortifications, grants, and other entries in reference to the following 10 or 12 castles:—Athlone (27 entries), Ballymackinegan, Dungarvan (3), Kilfeakle, Killorglin, Limerick, Randown (30 entries), Roscommon (43), Waterford, castles in Connaught, &c. Of entries relating to Dublin castle we have fewer than in the former volume, but some of them may be singled out as follows:—Pillars of marble were taken from its hall and carried to Dunbro, near Coolock, which was Stephen Bishop of Waterford's manor (p. 113); payment of 40*s.* to Peter chaplain of the castle, when keeper of cutting of the King's coins there (pp. 70–71); payment to Hecham Duclerk for 6 hogsheads of wine bought of him for the King's use to supply the castle (p. 71); petty kings and malefactors escaped (p. 15), and an Irish chaplain liberated from it (90); receipt of 3*s.* 3¾*d.* from Thomas Burel for arrears of his account of works of (p. 61); payment to the same for works at the same (p. 75); mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to cause William Burnell, constable of the castle of Dublin, to have in the forest of Glencry 12 oak trees fit for timber to construct his house of Glenecapyn (581); payment to [chaplain] celebrating service in castle (1116); rent or issues of the King's mill near (p. 100, p. 141, &c.); chests of Archbishop of Tuam containing secret documents broken open in (p. 257, p. 293); Theobald le Butler held and in capite at Bray by the service of finding an armoured horse at the gate of the castle, when the King's service is summoned (p. 315); and King John granted in frankalmoign to the church of St. Thomas the Martyr of Dublin a tenth of the salmon coming to the King's kitchen in (p. 381).

5. The Chancery of Ireland. Its state; the Chancellor receives 40*l.* a year for his fee besides issues of the seal; Walter de Fulburne appointed Bishop of Meath, now Chancellor; small return from Chancery writs during his time or that of his predecessor, Adam de Fulburne; there is now only one clerk in this department, John Esturmy, who knows little of Chancery; Chancery writs reproved in the Common Pleas as wanting in matter and form; and the justices of that court supplicate the King to provide better thereupon; clerks of Chancery in Ireland take excessive fees for writing writs (p. 10); writ of Liberate to the Treasurer and chamberlains for payment to John Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland, of 40*l.* for expenses of custody of the seal of the King's Chancery of Ireland from April 8, 1289, on which day William de Beverley, late Chancellor, died, until March 31, 1290 (642); further writ for payment to the same for the same, from March 31, 1290, until March 9, 1290–91, on which day the Archbishop delivered the seal to William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland (946); the King commits during pleasure to Thomas Cantok the office of Chancery of Ireland (977); writ of Liberate directing the treasurer of the Exchequer, Dublin, to pay to Thomas Cantok, Chancellor of Ireland, 20*l.* of his fee (976); the rolls and memoranda touching the office of Chancellor to be delivered to Thomas Cantok, to whom the office of Chancellor had been committed (1037);

Letters of Geoffrey de Geynville to the Chancellor of England, complaining that the Chancellor of Ireland troubles and molests him by Chancery writs against his franchise and the charter of first feoffment of his wife's ancestors (1186); and memorandnm of instructions by the King to the Chancellor of Ireland (1178).

6. Documents relating to the church are very numerous and interesting in this volume. The following are specimens of some of them:—

The Archbishop of Armagh appropriates to himself vacancies and demands of licences, and appoints bishops in sees against the kingly dignity, to the great loss of the King and against his liberties, because the Apostolic See conceded to Kings of England that the church of Ireland should be regulated and subjected to the kingly dignity, as is the church of England. Writs have been levied against Armagh in the premises. The Archbishop in consequence threatened to interdict the land.

The King had custody of the vacant see of Dromore; but was expelled from it, and the Archbishop of Armagh conferred the temporalities on Thiermath now Bishop of Dromore. A writ is levied against Armagh touching the see. Some say that the escheator can never go to the (Northern) bishoprics on account of the Irish. It would be expedient to the King that Irishmen should never be archbishops or bishops, because they always preach against the King, and provide their churches with Irishmen to maintain their language. In like manner the Dominicans and Franciscans make much of that language (pp. 9–10).

Nicholas Archbishop of Armagh to the King. Sends Jordan of Termonfeckin, his servant, to show the grievances which oppress him in Ireland, and prays the King to provide a fit remedy for those grievances (176); pardon to Nicholas Archbishop of Armagh of the amerciaments which he had lately incurred before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, for occupying against the King the temporalities of the see of Dromore and unjustly detaining them (150); pardon to the same of 10 out of the 20 marks in which he was condemned for issues of the see of Dromore unjustly detained from the King. The remaining 10 marks shall be paid at the Exchequer (151); confirmation, notwithstanding the statute of mortmain, of grant made to the Archbishop of Armagh of 17 carucates of land in Drumeskyn, and of the advowsons of Bernemede, Dumbenny, and Kilkerli (686); receipt from Nicholas Archbishop of Armagh of 57*s.* for damages adjudicated to the King (p. 83). Petition of Nicholas Archbishop of Armagh. That the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, had adjudged to the King the temporalities of five sees when vacant, namely, Derry, Dromore, Clogher, Raphoe, and Kilmore, which temporalities the Archbishop and his predecessors were always wont peaceably to take in vacancy. The state of the Archbishop's church is thereby now disparaged not only in its faculties but in its liberties. Wherefore he supplicates the King for a remedy.

Reply. The Archbishop had been answered in the Parliament of Westminster that the King had recovered by judgment the custody of vacant sees in Ireland, to hold as those in England.

That Nicholas Taf, formerly Justice of the Common Pleas, Dublin, had amerced the Archbishop in 40*l.*, charging him with having unduly returned a writ of judgment directed to him; the Archbishop supplicates the King to pardon the amerciament.

Reply. Mandate to the justiciary to certify the cause to the King; and meanwhile let the amerciament be respited.

That the prebends of Armagh being poor, the Archbishop prays, in order to augment those prebends, that he may exchange lands or rents of the demesne of the archbishopric in Uriel.

Reply. Let him save the King from damage in time of vacancy, and the King will take counsel (pp. 251–252).

Licence for the Dean and chapter of Achonry to elect in the room of Denis late Bishop of Achonry (2271, 2281).

Stephen de Codenovre, vicegerent of John Archbishop of Dublin and Dean of Penkridge, England, to the King. Sir Richard de Loges, knight, of the counties of Stafford and Warwick, had on account of his contumacy and offences been bound in the bonds of excommunication. He had contumaciously persisted for 40 days and more in contemning the church of Clones. Wherefore the writer prays the King to issue the customary letters, so that the kingly power may supply the inability of the church (439).

The King to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. Nicholas Archbishop [of Armagh], primate of Ireland, having preferred Matthew canon of Ardagh to the bishopric of that church, and the Dean and chapter of Ardagh having prayed the King to accept this preferment, the King complies with this request and restores the temporalities (574); licence for the Dean and chapter of Ardfert to elect in the room of John late Bishop of Ardfert (253, 254, and 383); licence for the Dean and chapter of Ardfert to elect on the death of Nicholas late Bishop of Ardfert, with royal assent and order to restore the temporalities (423); letters of John Archbishop of Dublin to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells, Chancellor of England, in favour of Stephen O'Bragan elected Archbishop of Cashel (468); grant to Nicholas de Clere, clerk, of the prebend which Richard de Hereford lately had in the church of Cashel, which is vacant and is of the King's gift by reason of vacancy in that archbishopric (515); licence for the Dean and chapter of Cashel to elect in the room of David formerly Archbishop of Cashel (517); the King notifies to Pope Nicholas IV. that he had given the royal assent to the election lately celebrated in the cathedral church of Cashel of Stephen, Archdeacon of Glendalough in the church of Dublin, and canon of the church aforesaid, as Archbishop of Cashel (639); Benedict by the title of St. Martin, cardinal priest to the Chancellor of England, praying him to assist John Bishop of Clonfert so that he may not be impeded in freely prosecuting his journey to Rome (1184); restoration of temporalities to Stephen Archdeacon of Glendalough confirmed Archbishop of Cashel (875); the Dean and chapter of Clonmacnois to the King, praying licence to elect in the room of Gilbert their former elect who had resigned (401); licence for the Dean and chapter of Clonmacnois to elect on the resignation of Gilbert lately elected Bishop of Clonmacnois (414); restoration of temporalities for Brother William O'Duffy elected Bishop of Clonmacnois (726); the archdeacon and clergy of Connor to the King, praying the royal assent to the election of John rector of the church of St. Mary of Corryton, in the room of Peter their late bishop deceased (1031); fine for contempt from Robert Bishop of Cork (251); Robert Bishop of Cork having been amerced before Stephen Archbishop of Tuam, then justiciary of Ireland, in 100*l.* for contempt, and subsequently in 40*l.* because he had held in the ecclesiastical court pleas touching the King's crown and dignity, the King pardons to the Bishop 94*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* arrears of the amerciaments (1000); gift by the King of a prebend in the see of Dublin during vacancy in that see (26); letters of Pope Honorius IV. to the King regarding the election of John de Sanford to the see of Dublin (72); acquittance to Nicholas de Clare, custodian of vacant see of Dublin for 1,010 marks, 12*s.* 9*d.*, of issues of that see (93); the Pope having confirmed the election of John de Saunford as Archbishop of Dublin, the King takes fealty from the Archbishop and restores the temporalities (125); the Dean and chapter of Elphin to the King. Having postulated Brother Gelasius Abbot of the Holy Trinity, of Loch Cé, as Bishop of Elphin, pray the royal assent (132); royal assent to election of Brother Gelasius Abbot of the Holy Trinity of Loch Cé as Bishop of Elphin (155); bull of Pope Honorius IV. directed to the King, and appointing William de Clifford to the see of Emly (273); complaints of Richard Bishop of Ferns to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells that the Archdeacon of Ferns had been summoned before the Exchequer of Dublin in a testamentary cause (49); the chapter of Killaloe to the King, praying licence to elect on the death of their bishop (1173); licence to elect in the room of Patrick late Bishop of Ross (p. 373); royal assent to election of Laurence Canon of Ross as Bishop of Ross (837); mandate for restoration of temporalities to the same on confirmation (838); licence to elect in the room of David late Bishop of Kilmacduagh (680); royal assent to election of Brother Laurence Abbot of Knockmoy as Bishop of Kilmacduagh (759); agreement between Richard Bishop of Lismore and Stephen Bishop of Waterford regarding matters of contention between them (91).

In reference to the see of Meath it may be remembered that Walter de Fulborne, the Chancellor, brother of Stephen Bishop of Waterford and Archbishop of Tuam, is oftentimes mentioned in the previous volume as bishop of that see, though it is stated that he had been consecrated by the Archbishop of Armagh without licence obtained or fealty taken. The Archdeacon and clergy of Meath had previously elected Thomas de St. Leger as Bishop, and the royal assent had been given to the election of the latter. After the second volume had been some time in print the editor found letters of Pope Honorius IV. addressed to the King, which set at rest all doubts regarding the election of Meath, and he therefore hastened to insert at the end of the preface to that volume a rider, drawing attention to this document. Ere giving an abstract of the Pope's letters we must draw attention to some documents preceding them in point of date.

Petition of the clergy of Meath to the King regarding their grievances. The justiciary had admitted that they had been aggrieved against the King's command. Pray that 2 men of note may defend and maintain them in the state in which they were when Thomas de St. Leger, their elect, passed to the court of Rome (140); letters of Robert de Hastings to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells in favour of Thomas de St. Leger, Archdeacon of Kells and elect of Meath (145). John de Sanford [elect of Dublin] to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells, Chancellor of England, praying him to aid Thomas de St. Leger, elect of Meath, in forwarding his affairs in the King's court, &c. (141). [The Archdeacon of Meath] to the Bishop of Bath and Wells respecting the grievances of Thomas de St. Leger, elect of Meath, inflicted on him by the Archbishop of Armagh. Prays letters to H. of Evesham by the title of St. Laurence in Lucina, cardinal priest, and others at the court of Rome to promote and defend the affairs of the elect and the clergy of Meath (142).

The following also bears on the same subject:—

The Abbot of St. Mary of Kells demands in right of his church against John de Dumbelton 1½ carucate of land in Ardmyn and Ballygodan, whereof Laurence de Somercote had unjustly disseised Florence formerly Abbot of that house, the Abbot's predecessor. John says that he is not bound to answer, because he says that the Abbot of St. Mary of Kells is excommunicate, as appears by letters of William Barbedor, official of Meath, the see being vacant, and of Geoffrey of Oxford, Archdeacon of Kells, warning the faithful to avoid the Abbot whom they had excommunicated.

The Abbot produces letters of Nicholas Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of Ireland, notifying that whereas John de Kenley, who bears himself as Archdeacon of Kells, Thomas de St. Leger, Archdeacon of Kells, and William Barbedor, with Geoffrey and Henry of Oxford, their officials, had been themselves bound by his authority in the bonds of excommunication they could not bind others in similar bonds. The Archbishop therefore denounces as of no effect the sentence of excommunication which they had passed against the Abbot of St. Mary of Kells.

Afterwards John says that he is parson of the church of St. Columb to which the tenements belong in right of that church, and that he has that church of the gift of Hugh formerly Bishop of Meath, deceased, and the custody of which during vacancy belongs to the King. He therefore prays whether he ought to answer without the King. Wherefore the plaint is without day (213).

We now come to the above-mentioned letters of Pope Honorius [IV.]:—

"1286, July 12. Pope Honorius [IV.] to the King. "The church of Meath having long ago become vacant by "the death of Hugh Bishop of Meath, the Archdeacon and "clergy of that diocese, to whom by ancient, approved, "and hitherto peaceably observed custom the election of "Bishop has belonged, met on an appointed day and "elected John de Dumbleton, rector of Kells, as Bishop of "Meath. As the rector refused to consent to the election "the Archdeacon and clergy again met and chose three of "the clergy to scrutinise the votes according to the Con-"stitution General of Council. The three, having secretly "and minutely scrutinised the votes of themselves and "the others, published them, when it appeared that the "larger and sounder portion of the clergy had given their "assent to Thomas de St. Leger, then Archdeacon of "Kells, as elect; and so one of the three, in the name of "himself and the others and by their mandate, elected "Thomas Bishop of Meath. But subsequently the Arch-"bishop of Armagh, to whom as metropolitan the election "had been presented, unduly refused, as is said, to con-"firm it. The Apostolic See was appealed to on the part "of the elect, and he had commenced his journey for this "purpose, when this Archbishop, pretending that by "canonical institution it devolved on him to provide the "church of Meath with a bishop, appointed by his own "authority Walter [de Fuleburne], then Dean of Water-"ford, as Bishop of Meath. Afterwards Pope Martin IV.,

"predecessor of Honorius, assigned the Cardinal of Sts. "Marcellin and Peter to examine the matter; and at "length as well the elect as the said Walter spontaneously "and freely resigned into the Pope's hands all their right "under the election. The Pope thereupon, by counsel "of his brethren and of the plenitude of apostolic power, "appoints the elect [Thomas de St. Leger] as Bishop of "Meath, and prays the King to restore the temporalities "to him" (258).

Grant of a prebend in the church of Kilkenny during vacancy of the see of Ossory (323); royal assent to election of Roger of Wexford, Dean of St. Canice as Bishop of Ossory, with mandate to restore the temporalities (326); the Dean and chapter of St. Canice of Kilkenny to the King, notifying that they had by licence elected Michael of Exeter as Bishop of Ossory in the room of Roger of Wexford their late bishop, and they thereupon pray the royal assent (521); licence for the Dean and chapter of Ossory to elect in the room of Roger formerly Bishop of Ossory (518); royal assent to the election made in the cathedral church of St. Canice of Kilkenny of Michael of Exeter, canon of that church, as Bishop of Ossory (535); restoration of temporalities to the same (535); grant to Michael Bishop of Ossory that when depredations are made on him by the Irish he may treat with them, receive amends, or get back his goods by making peace (1068); although the King had caused to be taken into his hand for debts all the goods and chattels of Stephen, late Archbishop of Tuam, together with the vases and other ornaments of his church, yet the King wills that the church of Tuam shall be decorated with the ornaments of the archbishop's chapel. Mandate therefore to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, to deliver in the King's name to the Dean and chapter of that church all the ornaments of this kind taken into the King's hand (511); letters of Pope Nicholas IV. to the King, demanding payment of 3,000 marks for three years' arrears of the tribute (388); plea of land between Stephen Bishop of Waterford and Richard Bishop of Lismore, with concord thereupon (396); inventory of chattels of Stephen Archbishop of Tuam, justiciary of Ireland (406); petition of Thomas de Lynham praying remuneration for making the above inventory (407); the King to John Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. under his special protection John de Camerâ, general attorney and the other attorneys of the Master and Brothers of the Hospital of St. James de Altopascio who had received from the Pope an indulgence to preach and collect alms in churches (1141). We here end our summary of documents relating to the church, and now proceed to—

We may here correct a mistranslation in Vol. II. In No. 2134, lines 4, 7, and 8, of that volume the word Custmanni or Custumanni occurs; the editor, misled by the peculiar form of the word, and an entry which he found in a law dictionary, translated it as "customary tenants;" this is wrong, the word simply means Ostmen, as Eustmanni does, a form in which the same word occurs in this volume.

8. Escheatry:—The first name which occurs in this volume as escheator of Ireland is that of John de Sanford or Saunford. He had been appointed so far back as the 16th of September 1271. His acts as escheator will be found referred to in the index under his name. He continued to act as such until he was elected to the archbishopric of Dublin, an election confirmed by the Pope. Walter de la Haye, who succeeded him as escheator, was appointed on the 6th of August 1285 (119). His acts as such will also be found referred to under his name in the index.

In regard to the escheatry of Ireland generally, we have the following:—

State of the escheatry, p. 9; upwards of 60 returns of issues of the, given in the rolls of receipt, and referred to in the index under the title of escheatry.

Returns of issues of escheatry of the Archbishop of Tuam (p. 167).

9. We now come to one of the largest and most important topics in this volume, the Exchequer of Dublin or Ireland. In p. xlv of our second volume we referred to the important position which this department had assumed in the days of Edward I., and certainly the present volume confirms what we then said, as the index of nearly 4½ columns under the title of Exchequer will fully show. A great portion of this volume is occupied with extracts from the collection known as Irish Exchequer, in the Queen's Remembrancer Department, at the Public Record Office, London. This collection comprises several miscellaneous documents (amongst which are the remarkable complaints or petitions against Nicholas de Clere or Clare, Treasurer of Ireland, roils of receipt and rolls of payment. The first section of the document No. 2, p. 1, in this volume, fully treats of the then state of the Exchequer of Dublin. Nicholas de Clare, with 3 others, had been previously assigned to inquire into the state of that Exchequer [Vol. II., No. 2153], and probably the document in question is the result of their investigation. Unfortunately it is very faint and illegible in parts, so that it is impossible to read it throughout with certainty. The editor had the great advantage of going over all the difficult parts of it in company with a very able reader, the late John Ringwood Atkins, an old and respected officer of the Public Record Office, an Irishman, an accomplished Irish scholar and great linguist, but the combined efforts of the two scarcely succeeded in making out more than the editor alone had himself made out. It was thought better in the doubtful parts of this document to give its own words, so far as they could be deciphered. There is, says this document, placed in the Exchequer a Hospitaller knowing little or nothing, and taking for his fee 40*l.* a year, the bishops who preceded him [namely, Hugh Bishop of Ossory and Stephen Bishop of Waterford] not having taken more. The justiciary, it is said, receives the money to his own use, and only finds victuals for the Treasurer as for the poorest chaplain. The same justiciary, and his brother promoted as Bishop of Meath (who is locum tenens of the Chancellor, always resides in the Exchequer and sits there), are the Exchequer itself. The Irish Exchequer does not act as an Exchequer to audit accounts, but is a fair of hides, wool, and other similar matters. But we must refer to the document itself [pp. 1–7] for what it further says concerning the Exchequer of Dublin. Some degree of bitterness against Stephen Bishop of Waterford, the justiciary, appears to pervade the document.

The Rolls of Receipt of the Irish Exchequer are particularly valuable; they comprise, among other matters, the following:—Names of Irish bishops, abbots, and priors, judges of different kinds, sheriffs, seneschals; abbeys and priories; rents of demesne lands and lands in the King's hands; prisage and new custom of wines; issues of Ireland; issues of fisheries and pools; fines of the Irish, fines for trespass, escape, for having peace, and many other kinds of fines; rent or farm of cities; rent of a mill near the castle of Dublin; issues of the escheatry; amerciaments of measures, and countless other matters. The editor has, of course, given full extracts from these most valuable rolls. In a book entitled "Documents illustrative of English History," printed under the Record Commission by Mr. now Sir Henry Cole, K.C.B., late Secretary of the Science and Art Department, several copies of the documents comprised in the above-named first class are given verbatim et literatim. But when that gentleman wrote there were no official references to the documents, and it consequently became difficult for the searcher to find at once any one of them. References were subsequently added; but quite recently a much simpler method of identifying them has been adopted, so that any one of them required can now be produced with great facility.

Merely drawing attention to the four following documents, and referring to the index, title "Exchequer of Dublin," we close our remarks on this subject.

Appointment of Nicholas de Clere as Treasurer of the Exchequer, Dublin (117); charges, complaints, and petitions against him (see index, Clare, Nicholas de); warrant to sell all his ecclesiastical goods for arrears of his account when he was Treasurer of Ireland, and to take into the K.'s hand all his lay goods and chattels (1098); appointment of William de Estdene as Treasurer of the Exchequer, Dublin (1098).

10. Fees:—Writ of Liberate for payment to John of Kent, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, Ireland, of 10*l.* of the K.'s gift for expenditure in the K.'s service (130); for payment to Walter Bishop of Meath, Chancellor of Ireland, of 20*l.* in part payment of his fee of 40*l.* (p. 369); for payment to William de Barry, justice itinerant in co. of Tipperary, of 40 marks for his service in that eyre and in the eyre of Limerick (p. 370); receipts by John de Hatth' or Hacche for his fees (638, 710, 781, 1007). Having assigned Walter l'Enfaunt to hold pleas, and to follow the justiciary wherever he shall be in Ireland, and granted him 40*l.* a year out of the K.'s treasure, the King commands the justiciary to cause Walter yearly to have that amount by the K.'s writ of Liberate under the seal which the King uses in his Chancery of Ireland (584); receipt by Robert Bagod to Nicholas de Clere, Treasurer of Ireland, for 20*l.* for Robert's fee for 6 months as justice of the King's Bench, Dublin (625); receipt by John Archbishop of [Dublin] to the same treasurer, for 8*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* which the archbishop had lent to Sir Robert de Hastings, knight, due to him for his fee when he was justice in eyre at Clonmel (626); receipt by John Archbishop of Dublin, locum tenens of chief justiciary of Ireland, for the archbishop's fee for half a year (628); receipt by Robert Bagot to Sir Nicholas de Clere, Treasurer of the Exchequer, for 15*l.* 11*s.* for his fee when he was locum tenens of the Treasurer (632 and 782); receipt by Walter de Kenlegh, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Dublin, to the Treasurer in Ireland for 100*s.* of silver for his fee for Easter term (634); receipt by Walter l'Enfaunt to the Treasurer of Ireland for 20*l.* of silver for his fee from Easter until Michaelmas (636); further receipt from the same to the same for 120*l.* of silver for his fee (637); receipt by Nicholas de Berkeley, clerk of the Common Pleas, to the Treasurer of Ireland for 50*s.*, Nicholas's fee for Easter term (648); fees for custody of the valley of Dublin (p. 73, p. 75); fee of Robert Bagod, justice of Common Pleas (1005); fee of William de Vescy, chief justiciary of Ireland (1006); fee of Thomas de Cheddeworth, justice of Common Pleas (1029); payment to William de Iddesdale for executing the office of marshal of Ireland until the age of the heir of John le Marshal (1116); payment to William de Estdene, Treasurer of Ireland, for his fee (1116).

11. Free Warrens:—Grant to Walter de la Haye of free warren in the demesne lands of Kildemydan, in co. of Waterford (82); to Milo de Cruise of Ireland of free warren in his manor of Ballymaglassan (177); to Robert Purcell of free warren in his demesne lands in the co. of Tipperary (225); to John de Saunford, Archbishop of Dublin, of free warren in all his demesne lands in the mountains of the county of Dublin (609); to Otho de Grandison, of free warren in all his demesne lands of Conagh (Coonagh), Glinmontrany, and Glinnogaf (694).

12. Regarding the Holy Land, we have the following documents:—Replies of Pope Honorius IV. to petitions submitted to him by Otho de Grandison, on behalf of the King, regarding the Holy Land (249). Bull of Pope Nicholas IV. setting forth petitions regarding the King's passage to the Holy Land, and the tenth on ecclesiastical rents in England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland (529). Letters of Pope Nicholas IV. respecting a tenth and obventions in aid of the Holy Land in the kingdom of England and Scotland, and in Ireland and Wales (562). Further letters from Pope Nicholas IV. on the same subject (563). The King to the Pope, assenting to articles contained in letters of His Holiness regarding the Holy Land (580). Grant by the Pope to the King, on his contemplated departure for the Holy Land, of a tenth of ecclesiastical profits in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales (873). Bull of Pope Nicholas IV. decreeing how the tenth on ecclesiastical rents and profits in England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, for the Holy Land, shall be levied (650).

13. The class of inquisitions and extents is an important one, as the following extracts will show:—

Extent of the lands of Amory de St. Amand. Value of the manor of Balgornan (170); extents of the lands of Thomas de Clare, Youghal, Inchiquin, Any, Moyavenach, Bunratty, &c. (459). This is a very lengthy and valuable document, but is unfortunately faded and illegible in parts. Inquisition finding that there would be damage if the King granted to the Abbot and convent of Furness 40 acres of land in Colp [co. Meath] (631); writ and inquisition taken at Lisnakill, co. Waterford, regarding a feoffment made by Thomas de Weylaund to John de Weylaund of the manors of Ballyconar and Killoran, co. of Tipperary, and of rent of Ballymackoyl, Ireland (646); writ and inquisition finding that it would not be to the damage of the King or the citizens of Dublin if the King should confirm the charter made by the Prior and Brothers of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland to Henry le Marshall of a house called Liber Hospes (Free Guest) in Dublin (703); writ, inquisitions, return, and extent of lands in Crumlin, co. Dublin (855); writ to the justiciary of Ireland and inquisition finding that the Dominican Brothers had purchased a piece of land in Kilmallock; that they were by order of the Bishop of Limerick ejected therefrom, and that their residence there would not tend to the King's prejudice (967); writ commanding Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, to inquire how much land Robert de Cruise of Naul, lately deceased, held of the King in capite or otherwise; extent of lands which belonged to Robert de Cruise at Naul and Ardmays (1066); writ and inquisition extending the manor of Balycandeny, co. Cork (1117); writs, fine, and inquisition touching the manor of Inchiquin and the vill of Youghal (1142).

14. Ireland, Irish:—In reference to these topics we have the following:—

The state of Ireland, but the portion of the document which relates to this subject is scarcely legible (pp. 14–15).

In a letter of William de Beverley (afterwards Chancellor of Ireland) to John Bishop of Ely, Chancellor of England, it is stated that by default of the chief keeper (i.e., of the Bishop of Waterford, justiciary) and of the ministers of the Exchequer, Ireland is desolated and impoverished, bowed down with the usual pestilence of war. The writer therefore urgently prays that a timely remedy may be obtained from the King (3).

Petition of [John] Archbishop of Dublin. That the King will apply counsel to the state of Ireland, whereof the archbishop had reported to the King by Geoffrey de Geynville and others, and whereof the King can be certified by Geoffrey himself and others of the King's Council in Ireland who are now sitting in Parliament.

[Reply.] The King having been long absent is occupied on arduous affairs of his kingdom; but the King will, as soon as he can, attend to this matter, which he has much at heart.

That the King will appoint persons to audit the accounts of services and fines of Irishmen, which fines the King had by writ assigned for the subsidy of Ireland.

[Reply.] The King had assigned the Archbishop of Dublin, his justiciary, and Robert Bagod to audit that account; the King wills that what is contained in the writ aforesaid be observed, and that the archbishop be saved from expense (p. 250).

The K. commands the custodian of the vacant see of Dublin to deliver all the money accruing from issues of that see in order to be applied to the walling of vills and castles in Wales (5); money accruing from issues of Ireland to be applied to works in Wales (75); all money arising from issues of Ireland to be transmitted for works of Wales (76). The merchants of Lucca, collectors of the new custom of wool and hides, to deliver proceeds of it for works in Wales (77); acquittances for 16,250 marks paid out of the issues of Ireland by Sir Nicholas de Clare, the treasurer, for castles in Snowdon and expenses and works in Wales (829); letters of protection in Ireland for Donald Roth Mac Carthy of Desmond in coming to the K. in England, with a moderate retinue; remaining and returning (61); grant to Philip Cinurghethan, and Simon and John his brothers, of power to use English laws in Ireland (64); grant to 3 persons of English laws in Ireland (153); bond by Kathel O'Conor to the K. for 1,000 marks of silver to have his portion. Promises faithfully to keep the peace (172). Fines from Alice de Cusak for having the son of Magnus O'Conor of Connaught (251 and 287). Fine from Molachelyn McDoneguth, for having peace (251); fines from Richard le Fleming for not producing Corman O'Breslen for whom he gave mainprise, and from Alexander Mac Murrough and Dermot his brother, fine to have peace for harbouring Art Mac Murrough (137 and 287).

Tipperary. Fine from Turlough O'Brien for having peace for himself and his household (475).

Cordially accepting the proposal of John de Bentley, the King's valet, to rescue from the hands of his enemies John de Fuleburne lately taken prisoner in Offaly by Calvak O'Conor and his accomplices, rebels against the King, the King grants to the former licence to attend in Offaly to treat with the Irish regarding John de Fuleburne's liberation (541).

The King assigns John Archbishop of Dublin and Robert Bagot to audit the accounts of the services and fines made with the King by the Irish (589); the King commands Malachy, brother of Calvach', detained in the castle of Dublin for money due to the King, to be released in exchange for John de Fuleburne taken prisoner by Irish rebels and detained in Offaly (585).

The King gives power to Walter de la Haye to treat with the Irish regarding the King's peace (671); the King commands the escheator of Ireland to deliver to Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, the custody of the eldest son and heir of Turlough O'Brien (756); grant to the Abbot of Wetheney that of the 60 marks which he owes to the King for his trespass in harbouring the Irish of Thomond, he yearly render at the Dublin Exchequer 5 marks until the whole be discharged (802).

The King commands the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer to cause the persons who were pledges for Calvath O'Conor to be quit of 1,000 marks (1018).

Licence for John Fitz Thomas to treat with Irish enemies for restoration of peace (1103).

15. Justiciaries:—There are only three persons mentioned as having acted in that capacity in Ireland during the period comprised in this volume; namely, (1.) Stephen Bishop of Waterford and Archbishop of Tuam; (2.) John de Stanford, Archbishop of Dublin; and (3.) William de Vescy. Stephen Bishop of Waterford, Treasurer of Ireland, had been appointed justiciary on the 21st of Nov. 1281 (Vol. II., No. 1883), and having been raised to the archbishopric of Tuam continued to act as justiciary until his death about the year 1288. References to mandates to him or his acts as justiciary will be found in the index under his name as Bishop of Waterford and Archbishop of Tuam. He appears to have continued to act in the two capacities of Treasurer and justiciary until he was succeeded on the 5th of Aug. 1285 by Nicholas de Clare as Treasurer. The following items relating to this justiciary are worthy of notice.

Various reflections on the Bishop of Waterford as justiciary in the documents of the Irish Exchequer (pp. 1–15), reasons why the bishop becomes rich; he is buyer and receiver of nearly all wines coming to Ireland; he sells such as he pleases of the dearest and the worst to the K.; he sends his wines at his own price for supplies of castles on account of the Welsh war; he buys granges of rectors and abbots at a low price; he sends to the King also at his own price his bad corn from the farms of Swords, Santry, and elsewhere (p. 12); he must have a share in contentions regarding lands or custodies; and by reason of his power and his money he has the buying of all lands and custodies. He impleads bishops and others, and acquires lands by defaults. This appears regarding the Bishop of Lismore and the Archbishop of Cashel. He is enriched by the Mint and Custom. No person can be in any office, whether as sheriff or constable, unless by his gift. He is enriched by taking fines from imprisoned mariners; he is also enriched by carrying out works in castles, houses, walls round the Exchequer, mills, &c. By gifts and receipts he received more in land and in the Exchequer than he paid to the Lord Edward (pp. 12–14); contention between him and Richard Bishop of Lismore, with agreement thereupon (91 and 306); grant to him of 500*l.* a year for his expenses in the office of justiciary (122); the King, considering his outlay in repairing castles, quelling wars and other matters, pardons to him the arrears of his account when justiciary and Treasurer of Ireland (121); bond by Stephen Bishop of Waterford to the King for 4,000*l.* arrears of his account when Treasurer of Ireland, with terms of payment (129); his accounts of debts due by him to the K. (59 and 60); in the army against O'Brien who had ravaged the lands of Theobald le Butler in the King's custody (p. 251); letters from the King to Stephen Archbishop of Tuam peremptorily directing him to pay for works and castles in Wales the money which he owed to the King (295); memorandum (or inventory) of chattels found in Ireland belonging to Stephen Archbishop of Tuam, justiciary of Ireland. This is a most curious document. It enumerates articles found in the wardrobe, pantry, buttery, and stables at Tuam, giving the names of 12 of his horses. It also gives a list of vestments, mitres, crosiers, chalices, &c. found in the chapel at Athlone (406).

We have to add that after the Archbishop of Tuam's death the King ordered the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, to deliver to the Dean and chapter of Tuam all the ornaments of the archbishop's chapel.

The Archbishop of Tuam was succeeded by John de Sanford, Archbishop of Dublin, who having acted as the King's escheator in Ireland from the year 1271 was not without official experience. Though belonging to the church he appears like his predeccssor to have taken part in martial enterprises. In No. 559 we have concerning him a most interesting and valuable document comprising important historical information. After giving an account of the circumstances under which he undertook the office of justiciary, this document goes on to relate the various journies which he made through Ireland, from 1288 until 1290, in order to pacify it. It comprises the names of the various places he stopped at, the length of his stay, and his expenses at each place. This valuable document comprises an account of the horses lost by the archbishop on the King's service; and concludes with an account of the King's treasure, amounting to 501*l.* 8*s.* 5*d.* received by Stephen de Ollington on the archbishop's account during the whole time he was keeper, namely, from the 30th of June 1288 until the 11th of November 1290, for necessary expenses in promoting the peace of Ireland. During his progress the keeper was entertained on 5 days by friends (p. 275), and it cannot fail to be remarked that on those days the expenses are considerably curtailed. For instance, on the 2 days when he dined with the Earl of Ulster only 19*s.* 2½*d.* and 13*s.* 3½*d.* are set down for expenses in place of 6*l.* 9*s.* 4½*d.* and 7*l.* 0*s.* 21½*d.* on the 2 previous days. Again on the 2 days when the keeper dined with Theobald Butler, there is only 13*s.* set down for 1 day and 10*s.* 6*d.* for the other.

It is to be observed that there appears to be no regular appointment of the archbishop as justiciary; when mentioned in the above document he is generally called "keeper," and in two of the three following documents he is styled lieutenant or locum tenens of justiciary.

Petition of [John] Archbishop of Dublin to the King, praying to be satisfied and saved harmless, as he had been and will always be ready in the King's service; had received nothing save what he had borrowed from merchants, and what he had advanced out of his own means.

Reply, the Archbishop is answered by writ (p. 250).

Receipt by Stephen de Ollington to the Irish Treasurer for 40*l.* of silver for affairs of the King, and expenses of John Archbishop of Dublin, holding the place of justiciary in going to the castle of Athlone and remaining there to treat with the Irish, to inspect the defects of the works of the castle and bridge, and to expedite public affairs there (653); receipt by John Archbishop of Dublin, lieutenant of the chief justiciary, for 250*l.*, his fee for half a year (801).

William de Vescy succeeded John Archbishop of Dublin as justiciary; his appointment is dated 12th Sept. 1290 (768); and he landed in Ireland in order to assume his office, 11th Nov. following (p. 408); William was to have his expenses as often as he went with the King's army to repel invasion (771); he had respite of all ancient debts due to the King (776); a writ of Liberate issued for payment of wages to 51 Welsh retainers remaining with him; he granted to the King a fifteenth of the moveable chattels of his men and tenants within his Irish liberties (955); 97*l.* were paid to Henry de Ponte for William's expenses regarding the restoration of the hostages of the King of Connaught; 60*l.* for his expenses in a war with Malachy (p. 427); and there were payments to him for his fee and for defending the land with an army (p. 428, p. 429). William de Vescy continued as justiciary up to the latest date mentioned in this volume, and references to mandates given to him and to his acts as justiciary will be found under his name in the index.

16. The King:—We have nothing in this volume to show that during the period comprised in it Edward ever visited Ireland or ever contemplated doing so. But certain it is that he again went to France. For this purpose he crossed over from Dover to that country on Monday, 13th May 1286 [Pat., 14 Edwd. I., m. 9], and remained absent for three years and three months, returning on Friday, 12th of Aug. 1289 [Pat., 17 Edwd I., m. 13]. During his absence Edmund Earl of Cornwall, his cousin, acted as his lieutenant; and hence the large number of instruments relating to Ireland which we find tested by the latter (see index, Cornwall, Edmund Earl of). There is one circumstance during his absence which strikes the editor as remarkable. Documents relating to Ireland appear during that interval to sensibly decrease in number, and they appear to increase on his return. Soon after that period a number of petitions from Ireland were presented to him in Parliament, and among these was one from John Archbishop of Dublin, regarding the state of that country, to which we have already drawn attention (ante p. xxix.). The King's answer is remarkable:—"Having been long absent is occupied on "arduous affairs of the kingdom; but will, as soon as he "can, attend to this matter which he has much at heart." It is probably owing to renewed attention given to Ireland that documents relating to it appear to increase in number after the King's return. For further acts of the King, and the numerous documents relating to him, we must refer to the title KING in the index.

17. The following refer to some of the documents relating to lands in Ireland:—Charter of Christiana de Mariscis granting in fee to the King and Alienor, the Queen Consort, all her knights' fees and advowsons of churches in Ireland, with all the lands and tenements held by her there (279). William Bishop of Emly having restored to Otho de Grandison lands which the latter had let to the Bishop, the King commands the knights, freemen, and tenants of those lands to be intentive and respondent regarding them to Otho's attorney (659). Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, having surrendered

25. Petitions of Ireland:—Of these, besides several separate documents, there are two rolls, with replies, No. 558, styled an Irish roll of Parliament, containing sixteen petitions, and No. 622, containing thirty-two. The petitions enrolled on the first were presented a little more than four months after the King's return from his long stay abroad. Having already specified some of these petitions, we regret that the limited space left at our disposal will only permit us to particularise the following:—

Petitions of David, the clerk of Ireland, complaining that he had been ejected by William de Beverley, deceased, when Chancellor of Ireland, from the church of Bunratty, of which David was rector (p. 248); of Walter l'Enfaunt; had served the King from the time when Sir James de Audley came as justiciary to Ireland; had spent much of his property, and received but little; had not been paid his fee of 40*l.* a year as justiciary; is aggrieved with expenses for the taking of Calvak and MacMurrough, &c., and, moreover, when Walter was in the King's service, and had custody of the King's castles of Connaught, felons against the King burnt his best manor and killed and destroyed his men, &c. (p. 249); of Robert de Hastings, praying delivery of the castle of Mackynegan, which the King had let to him for 20 years; reply, that Robert have his term, but the King does not intend to demise the castle in fee, let Robert hold it for his life if he pleases (pp. 250–251); of Robert de Callan; that having rendered his account to Brother Stephen de Fuleburne, then justiciary of Ireland, of the time when he was with that justiciary in the army against O'Brien (who had ravaged the lands of Theobald la Butler in the King's custody) and delivered the rolls of that account to the said justiciary, the Treasurer of Dublin that now is had distrained him to render that account; and because he had alleged before the Treasurer that he had previously rendered his account and delivered his rolls, the Treasurer had imprisoned him for a year. Reply. Mandate to the justiciary to inquire in the presence of the Treasurer and certify the King thereupon (p. 251); of Richard of Exeter, praying the King's grace regarding rents levied by the escheator in Michaelmas term out of his lands after his father's death, he being of full age; petition refused (p. 252); he also prays grace regarding arrears of his father's fee amounting to 140*l.*, at 40*l.* a year, whereof his father had nothing for 3½ years, and also regarding 100 marks arrears of his fee for custody of the castles of Roscommon and Randown at 20*l.*, and 4*l.* 13*s.* for works of those castles; mandate thereupon to the Treasurer and Barons to inquire; he further prays that the King will retake 7 townships of land held by his father in Connaught, rendering 40*s.* for each carucate;

let Richard hold as his father held; he also prays a charter regarding 30 librates of land in Connaught, granted in fee by the King to his father; let the writs and inquisitions be seen, and Richard have a charter if he ought to have one (p. 252). Of Adam de Fuleburne, executor of Stephen Archbishop of Tuam, that he may be admitted to expound the complaints of Walter Bishop of Waterford, his uncle, regarding himself and John de Fuleburne, Adam's brother, detained in prison among the King's enemies (p. 250). Of Nicholas Archbishop of Armagh. That the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, had adjudged to the King the temporalities of 5 vacant sees; and that he had been amerced, &c. (pp. 251–252); of William Bishop of Emly against the Treasurer of Ireland [Nicholas de Clare] for depriving him of the fruits of his see, distraining him, &c. (pp. 259–264). Of the Abbot of the Port of St. Mary of Dunbrody. Had for 12 years prosecuted without effect against the Master of the Templars in Ireland a plea of Novel disseisin of 5 carucates in le Crok [Crooke, co. Waterford], before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, and before the King and his justices assigned to hold pleas in England. The Abbot finding that he himself is grievously oppressed, and his house reduced to the greatest poverty by procrastination of this plea in various lands, supplicates the King to direct his justices to proceed as quickly as they can regarding it until it be judicially determined. The Abbot cannot keep hospitality or rule his convent if he is to further prosecute this plea against such powerful adversaries as the Templars. This plaint came by the King's order from Ireland to the court of King's Bench in England, in the term of Michaelmas 1287, and was deferred until the King's return from Gascony; it was then by his order respited until the next Parliament after Easter. The plaint touching this petition was adjourned before the King and his Council, and thence before G[ilbert] de Thorneton and his associates, to be determined. The Abbot is told to keep his day there (p. 305). Of Maurice Macotere, residing "at the end of "the world" in Ireland. Prays for the King's letters patent under English seal, that Maurice and his successors may enjoy English liberties in Ireland, as he and his ancestors had done. This appears by the King's letters patent under Irish seal. It would be more useful to the King to have 300 Englishmen than that they should be made Irishmen by false inquisitions against the King's liberty. The King can inspect a transcript of letters inrolled in Chancery, and granted to others in Ireland, whereby the King gained 3,000*l.* in one day in that country.

Tenor of the King's writ granting to Maurice Macotere, and his successors of his progeny, licence to enjoy all liberties enjoyed by the English in Ireland. Given by John Archbishop of Dublin, locum tenens of the chief justiciary of Ireland. Clonmel, December 9, 1289. Let letters patent be made to him in the mode aforesaid. The escheator of Ireland had testified that this would be for the King's advantage (p. 306); of the burgesses of Schendone [Shandon, Cork], who are men of John de Cogan and Maurice of Rochford. That owing to the citizens of Cork, who hold the vill to farm, they dare not trade as they were wont to do. Pray that they are no longer disturbed as they are much impoverished thereby. This complaint has not been submitted to the justiciary. If they cannot obtain remedy from the latter let them come to the next Parliament, and the King will provide a remedy. They are directed by the Council to sue out a writ to the justiciary to hear their complaint and render them justice (p. 307). Of William de Berkamstede; had been in the King's service at Youghal in Ireland as keeper of the new custom for 13 years, by compulsion of the justiciary and treasurer, and had received nothing for his service and labour, though he had been put to great expense by being obliged continually to remain at Youghal in order to deliver the merchants. Let the person who placed him in service sue out a writ to the justiciary to make a return to him (p. 309). Of William de Deveneys, the clerk. The King having enfeoffed him of land in the mountain parts of Ireland, prays that the King will enable him to recover certain Petagii who were wont to stay there, but who, owing to the violent war prevailing, had fled thence, and were dwelling with others. Let the justiciary be ordered to cause William to recover the Petagii; of Nicholas de Winle, clerk and citizen of Dublin, praying that he may be the King's clerk in Dublin and Drogheda, to receive recognizances of merchants of debts due to them according to the statute of Acton Burnell. The seal has not yet arrived in Ireland; when it is sent the King will do what ought to be done (p. 308–9); of Henry le Marshal, citizen of Dublin. Prays confirmation of the charter of a house of "Free Guest" at Dublin, which he has of the gift of the prior of the Hospital of Jerusalem in Ireland. Let it be inquired whether damage will ensue to the King, the burgesses, or city of Dublin, and let Henry thereupon sue out a writ in Chancery (pp. 310–311). Of John de Ufford; Othey is a land of the King in Ireland in the marches of Glindelury [Glenmalure], which the Irish inhabit and hold of the King at 2*d.* an acre a year. As the Irish often misapply and retain the King's rent, John asks the King to enfeoff him of the land, rendering the above rent, customs and services. Let the justiciary be directed to turn the land to the King's profit, by giving it to John or another, as he may think fit (p. 313). Of Theobald Butler praying for the Easter rents of his lands of Ireland and England, and for restoration of those which the escheator only held to rebuild the castle of Dorz [Dooree, co. Tipperary]. He also prays for the position which his father and ancestors held in regard to prisage of wines. They had been butlers in fee of the K. and hence their surname. Further prays that he may render the service, by which he holds land in Bray, of finding an armoured horse at the gate of the castle of Dublin. This service the escheator had converted into money (p. 315).

Of the people of the county of Tipperary. Whereas the sheriffs of Tipperary who hold the county to farm, rendering yearly a certain sum, take from each knight's fee at each of their 2 tourns ½ mark, while they were only wont to take ½ mark from each barony, and now charge the people with their maintenance to the great grievance of the latter, the people pray remedy thereupon. Let a writ issue to the justiciary of Ireland, and let the parties be summoned before him, and full right be done, so that no further complaint come before the King by default of the justiciary (p. 316); of the Abbot and convent of our Lady of the Rock of Cashel. Having been endowed by David Mac Kervyl, Archbishop of Ireland [Cashel], of divers lands and tenements in free alms, they are harassed and impeded by escheators, sheriffs, and other ministers of the King, againt their feoffments. They thereupon pray the King to confirm the archbishop's feoffments, so that they may remain in peace and be no longer harassed. While two of their monks and a brother were in their church of St. Nicholas, people of Ireland came, killed one monk before the altar, beat the other to death, drove the brother from the church, and threw him into the water. As men of religion they cannot prosecute this trespass, and therefore pray remedy of the King. As to confirma- tion the King is not advised to confirm at present. And as to the other complaint let a writ issue to the justiciary of Ireland to call before him the escheator and the parties, and also the justices of the King's Bench, and others of the Council, as the death of a man is concerned, and to do full right, so that no further complaint may be made to the King (pp. 316–317).

There are also a large number of petitions of various kinds scattered over this volume. Many of them found on the Irish Exchequer Rolls, and on the above Rolls of Parliament, are against Thomas de Clere, the Irish Treasurer. All the petitions against the Treasurer will be found fully enumerated under his name in the index. The following are from the Chancery Files and Royal Letters:—

Petition to the King from Hugh Kent of Ireland, liege burgess of Galway, praying for letters patent enabling him and his children to use in life and in death English law in Ireland. It would be to the King's profit that this grant should be made to all who demand it. The King commanded his great Parliament lately held at London that this should be so, for his Council showed to him that it would be greatly for his advantage (1174). It being difficult for the Abbot of St. Thomas, Dublin, to come frequently to the court of England to seek remedies of oppressions, the King commands J. de Kirkeby and W. de Odiham to consider the petitions of the canons of that house, and cause them to have fit remedy (1175).

26. Welsh and English vassals or mercenaries serving in Ireland. That the services of such persons were extensively resorted to appears from the following extracts:—

The Treasurer and Barons to pay out of the King's treasure various sums for their wages to Welsh vassals and vintners remaining in Ireland (548); writ to the Treasurer of Ireland to send to Wales some person in whom he confides to bring over Welshmen to the K.'s service in Ireland, and to pay their passage and expenses (548); the same to pay various sums for their wages to English vassals remaining for the defence of Ireland (548); and to John de Fuleburne 7*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* for freight of 2 ships to bring over Welshmen from Aberconwey to Lusk and Swords; writ commanding the Treasurer of Ireland to pay to John de Foleborne his expenses in going from England into Ireland to conduct Englishmen to the latter country for its defence; then follows an account of wages paid by John de Fuleburne to Welsh and English vassals, constables, and vintners who crossed over from Wales into Ireland, and of freight of ships (548); writ of Liberate for payment of 40*l.* to be sent to Sir John de Fuleburne for the expedition of Welshmen into Connaught against the King's enemies (p. 369); the Treasurer and Barons of Ireland to pay to John de Fuleburne his expenses in seeking for Welshmen and bringing them over to Ireland for the defence of that country (548); the Treasurer and Chamberlains to pay to John de Foleburne 10*l.* for his expenses on the K.'s service in bringing over Welshmen to Ireland (548). Writ of Liberate for payment to John de Strattone, Keeper of the King's wines and Welsh vassals at Randown, of 4*l.* 13*s.* for his wages (p. 370); wages of 48 Welshman and their commanders remaining in Ireland to preserve the peace (1032); payment to Thomas Darcy for wages of Welshmen keeping the peace in Ireland (1116 and p. 492); the justiciary of Ireland to cause John de Foleburne to have payment of expenses in bringing over Welshmen to Ireland (548); writ of Liberate directing the Treasurer and Chamberlains of the Exchequer, Dublin, to pay their wages to 51 Welsh retainers and their commanders remaining with William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland (936).

27. We now come to our last head, Miscellaneous, of which we only can give a few specimens:—

Grants of the pools and fisheries of Limerick (89); the K. gives power to Stephen Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, John (de Saunford), elect of Dublin, Thomas de Clare, and Geoffrey de Genevile, to let the K.'s waste lands in the district of Roscommon, and to enfeoff men thereof, as in their discretion they may think most conducive to the King's advantage (137); Guy, Count of Flanders and Marquis of Namur, being bound to the K. in 10,627*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* as restitution for goods of merchants of England, Ireland, and Wales seized in Flanders by Margaret then Countess of Flanders and Hainault his mother, deceased, and having out of goods of merchants of Flanders arrested, and out of his own money paid the whole of that amount, save the sum of 1,131*l.* 11*s.* 6½*d.*, the K. in order to do away with future dissensions and discords permits that when that sum shall have been paid to the use of the merchants, all letters and muniments whereby the Count and his sureties are bound in the premises shall be void, &c. (188). Nicholas de Clere, Treasurer of Ireland, having committed to Walter de la Haye the custody of the vill of Waterford for the rent previously rendered for it at the Exhequer, the King grants that Walter may hold custody of Waterford during pleasure (229); Thomas Fitzmaurice attorned before the King Matthew de Snowdon and Thomas le Gurney in all pleas and plaints between the King and him regarding the lands of Decies and Desmond (231); mem. of Maurice Fitzmaurice's chattels at his death; Inchiquin, Corbyn, co. Cork, Tipernevin, co. Limerick, Kylaugy, co. Wexford, Ardrathym, Corphin (463); rent of 25 cantreds of Connaught by Richard de Burgh (p. 179); acquittance by William de Valence Lord of Pembroke to Sir Geoffrey de Geynville, the Lady Matilda his wife, and Sir Peter de Geynville their son, for 107*l.* 5*s.* 11*d.* paid by the hands of merchants of the Society of the Ricardi in full payment of 1,200*l.* in which the said Geoffrey, Matilda, and Peter were bound to the said William for the marriage of Gerald Fitz Maurice (456); writ commanding proclamation in Ireland of the articles against clipping and falsifying of money (470); receipt from the county of Carlow of aid for the first army against Glindelori, by John de Houton, the seneschal (475, &c.); the King's writ exonerating William de Prene, the K.'s carpenter in Ireland, for 2 years from payment of rent for lands in Connaught, in consequence of the war then prevailing there (528); Theobald son of Theobald le Botiler, deceased, gives to the King 100 marks to have seisin of his lands in Ireland (808); receipts by Stephen de Olington to the Treasurer of Ireland, &c. for 60*l.*, 43 marks, and 100 marks sterling for the defence of the marches of Offaly and Leys, &c. (647); the King, at the instance of Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, pardons to Robert le Poher and Peter his brother the transgressions and offences committed by them against the King's peace in Ireland. They shall, however, stand their trial if charged in the King's court, and shall conduct themselves well and faithfully in future (714); the citizens of Roscommon being depressed and impoverished by the taking of their goods and victuals against their will and without payment &c., the King commands the justiciary not to permit goods, merchandise, or victuals to be taken from them by the constables or bailiffs of the castle of Roscommon or others in Ireland against their will, unless necessity should demand it in time of war (765); protection for the men of Robert de Brus, Earl of Carrick, in purchasing corn, wine, victuals, and other necessaries in Ireland (945); the custody of Athlone, with its rent, passages, mill, fishery, &c., having been committed to William de Preene, keeper of the King's works in Ireland, the King wills that he be not removed (797); Theobald de Verdun having exacted from the King a large sum of money for arrears of 25 marks a year for the vill of Drogheda and the castle of Blohagh' [alias Blathagh], the King commands the Barons of the Exchequer to search the Exchequer Rolls thereupon (857). Writ of Liberate to the Treasurer and Chamberlains of Exchequer, Dublin, for payment to one of the 4 clerks of the auditors of complaints of 4*l.* 14*s.* for his expenses (866). The King commits to John of London, the King's groom, for his good service, custody of the manor of Malahide, co. Dublin, which belonged to Milo Talbot, deceased (1039). Expenses of Eustace le Power, justice itinerant (1008). Expenses of Walter de la Haye, justice itinerant (1009). Expenses of William Fitz Roger, Prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland, as chief justice in eyre of co. of Dublin (1010). Expenses of Thomas Darcy, one of the justices itinerant in co. of Dublin (1011). Commission to the justiciary of Ireland to inquire whether it would be to the King's damage, or nuisance of Waterford, that the King should grant to Roger le Bigod, Earl of Norfolk and Marshal, licence for his ships to touch at his vill of Ross to trade there. Inquisition finding that loss to the King and damage to the city of Waterford would thereby accrue (1160). The King wills that Thomas Bishop of Meath be present for the future at the King's Councils. Mandate to all of the King's Council in Ireland to admit the bishop and to hold him as one of the King's councillors. Similar letters for the Bishop of Ossory (1153).

Besides the above there is a considerable number of entries relating to the following subjects:—The state of the New Custom (p. 9); its issues (251 quater); the collectors of at Castlefergus are commanded to come before the Barons to render an account (1); amerciaments for measures, the vill of Youghal being fined for not having standard ones (p. 167); commissions of various kinds; letters of protection, of attorney, and safe conduct; and many licences to Irishmen to enjoy English laws in Ireland.

This volume contains documents relating, it is believed, to the ancestors of the Duke of Leinster, the Marquis of Ormond, Viscount Gort, Lord Inchiquin, Lord Talbot de Malahide, Sir William de Capell Brooke, and probably others.

It now only remains to acknowledge the aid given to me by various gentlemen in the progress of my labours regarding this lengthy and often difficult and intricate work. I have most warmly to thank Mr. Walford D. Selby, of the Public Record Office, for frequent assistance in different ways, and Mr. Gustavus F. Handcock, of the same office, for efficient aid in arranging and putting together the very numerous slips for the index. Of gentlemen not officially connected with the Public Record Office, I have to thank Mr. Henry Gay Hewlett, keeper of records of the Land Revenue Office, Mr. Stuart Moore, and W. H. Hart, F.S.A. Mr. William Floyd, a well-known Welsh antiquary, also deserves my acknowledgments for kindly giving me some references which I otherwise should not have found. To Mr. W. M. Hennessy, of the Public Record Office, Dublin, and Dr. Richard Caulfield, of Queen's College, Cork, I have also to return many thanks for most valuable aid kindly given in reference to ancient names of places and persons in Ireland.

EDWARD I.

To the seneschal of Ulster, for the collectors of the new custom and 2 discreet men of the vill of Knockfergus to come before the Barons of the Exchequer on the morrow of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin [Sept. 9], to render an account of that custom of the time for which it is due, and to perform what shall be enjoined to them by the K's. messengers sent to Ireland;

To the seneschal of Wexford for David Mey, Robert le Priur, William Seynde, and Richard Daniel, on the same day;

To the seneschal of Youghal for Bernard de Muntarsy and Nicholas Aty, in the quinzaine of the Assumption;

To the seneschal of Cork, for Walter Pollard and Roger Freysel, on the same day;

To the seneschal of Drogheda towards Uriel, for Hugh Moriz and Philip Wodelok, on the morrow of the Assumption. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 533, T.G. 22,200.]

[About 13 Edw. I.] 2. (1.) State of the Exchequer of Dublin; (2.) the Mints of Dublin and Waterford; (3.) the custom; (4.) the escheatry; and (5.) the Chancery of Ireland; (6.) reasons why the Bishop of Waterford became rich; and (7.) the state of Ireland.

(1.) There is in the Exchequer, placed as treasurer by the justiciary, a Hospitaller, knowing little or nothing, and taking for his fee 40*l.* a year, the bishops who resided there in that office, and were well informed men, not having been wont to receive more. The justiciary, it is said, receives the money to his own use, and only finds victuals for the treasurer as for the poorest chaplain.

There is there a Chancellor of the Exchequer, John de Kenley, the archdeacon, who receives 10*l.* for his fee. He has little or no power to administer the K.'s affairs in the Exchequer by the K.'s seal thereof, because the justiciary transacts summonses and orders by his own seal and ring. The justiciary orders, levies, respites, and does what he likes.

There are there 2 barons, appointed by the present justiciary, there having before his time been only 1. One of these is Elias of Winchester, the other John of Kent. Elias takes 20*l.* a year for his fee, because he resides there through the justiciary; John takes 100*s.* a year because he resides there through the K. They have little or no power or authority. They disavow accounts of the Mints, audits and nearly all other acts in the Exchequer, because the justiciary, and his brother promoted as Bishop of Meath, who is locum tenens of the Chancellor, always resides in the houses of the Exchequer and sits there, are the Exchequer itself. They are everything and without them there is nothing.

There are there 2 ingrossers having rolls, and writing accounts; each of them takes 5*d.* a day while the Exchequer is open, with 20*s.* a year each for their robes; and they have their fee called quietus est. Prothonotarius qui est decasus [?] rotulum servat [sic] Originalia et ille fuit marescallus scaccarii. Habuit tria officia in scaccario que faciunt rotulum et testantur rotulum.

The Barons of the Exchequer of Dublin are never put as witnesses in Exchequer writs, but only the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

There is there a remembrancer of the Exchequer, Thomas of London, who takes 100*s.* a year for his fee, and 1 mark for his robe. He inrols pleas and orders of the Exchequer, and more pleas of merchandise than any other for the K., because pleas which ought to be dealt with in the Common Pleas and county, are there dealt with. They excuse themselves because pleas are there held by writs of England. [The Irish Exchequer] does not act as an Exchequer to audit accounts, but is a fair of hides, wool, and other similar matters; they plead there of lands and tenements; and whoever pleases to pay money can have a writ of the Exchequer, and compel his adversary to come before the barons. If penalties are contained in letters obligatory between contracting parties, the barons adjudicate between the litigants; nevertheless the barons divide the penalties with the treasurer.

Item, the barons aforesaid admit recognizances in the Exchequer with the sureties who make themselves principal debtors; and so an inrolment is made on the remembrancers' rolls; and they deliver not only debtors but such sureties to the marshal of the Exchequer. The latter thus obtains ½ mark a day from debtors and sureties, whether the debts are of clerks of the Exchequer, or of merchants litigating by the K.'s writs of the Exchequer, or of persons giving money to have the K.'s writs to litigate there. And it seems to some that it would be sufficiently severe if by virtue of such a recognizance execution might be levied of the goods and chattels of the principal; and sureties are not discharged by payment of the principal. And some say that debtors ought only to be delivered to the marshal to give ½ mark a day for clear debts of the K., arrears of account or debt, and not for debts acknowledged in the Exchequer to the use of merchants and others who plead there by the special prerogative of a letter.

Item, the clerk writing summonses of the Exchequer receives 2 marks a year for his wages; W[alter] the doorkeeper receives for carrying summonses ½ mark a year, and sometimes more, as appears by particulars; he also receives 20*s.* a year for doorkeeping, and 3*d.* a day from the Exchequer by the K.'s letters patent when prince. It is contained in these letters that he ought to have custody of the houses and curtilage of the Exchequer, but he has them not because the justiciary and his brother, locum tenens of the Chancellor, reside there throughout the year, receiving the emoluments of the curtilage.

There is also a marshal there, now appointed by the K. until the age of the heir of John Marshal, but the marshal before him, W[illiam] le Deveneys, who was ingrosser and keeper of the Originalia, received, as he was both payer and receiver, 100 marks a year out of the issues of the office of marshal. He is still bound to answer for the issues of the same. Some persons offered 20*l.* a year for the office of marshal. The order of incoming writs in that office is very poor, for they are not divided by years nor in yearly bundles.

Mem. that in the Exchequer of Dublin there are only annual rolls of the time of King Henry, the K.'s father, and not before.

Recent evidence of the K.'s fees and rights, and of privileges and memoranda of the Exchequer, was contained in a great book called Domesday. This book having been carried into the castle by Henry de Ponte, clerk of the justiciary, and placed at the head of his bed, was burned through bad custody, with others which ought to have remained in the Treasury. The justiciary says that many of his writs of Liberate carried thither by the said Henry were burned.

In the Exchequer of Dublin, at the audit of accounts, they make strange allowances without writs by order of the justiciary, as to the Dominicans and Franciscans, and the sheriffs for custody of counties, provided they are profitable.

They allow the K.'s writs directed to the justiciary, the treasurer, and chamberlains in debts before the barons, as appears in the writ allowed for Perceval of Lucca and his associates for 5,000 [sic].

Item, "without writ" appears in the audited accounts of the chamberlain; and to Robert de Ufford 100*l.* for his passage.

At the time when Sir Arnald de Berkeley was in the Dublin Exchequer allowances were made after a due manner, and rolls were drawn up with due deductions; but now by removal of clerks by the justiciary from day to day, to the K.'s great loss, the rolls are diminished without deductions.

Peter de Balimor, the keeper of the first roll, was compelled by the justiciary to write the account of the Mint. He avowed that he did not know how to audit the account while the justiciary dictated, and ordered it in his own way. For refusing to do this and for asking the justiciary in what account he wished the justiciary's debt of 3,603*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.* to be placed, wherewith he was charged by the keepers of the Mint, the justiciary removed Peter from that place, and on the arrival of the K.'s messengers he was placed in the county of Dublin.

Almost no one can be in any office in the Exchequer, nor in any shrievalty or custody of a castle, unless he gives or sells land to the justiciary, or bestows on him a moiety of his fee. This is so in regard to William le Deveneys, who was removed by the justiciary from the office of remembrancer, and afterwards having sold [to the justiciary] his land near Dunbro he was made prothonotary, marshal, and keeper of the Originalia, which offices ought nowise to be in one person, not as in his own person unless chamberlain . . . . . Exchequer. This is so in regard to Walter Uncle and the profits of the county of Tipperary, who every year gives more in horses than he answers to the K. for the issues of the county ; and so in similar cases.

. . . . de receptis clericus thesauri Henry de Ponte scribens tallias et facit eas who takes . . . . whether the Exchequer is sitting or not, 6*d*., and for his robe 20*s*. It was through him that the book called Domesday and at the same time other secret documents of the K. were burned.

Mem. that this Henry first makes tallies of moneys paid into the Exchequer, and writes them from payments before he enters the latter in rolls. This is objectionable, because he ought first to have entered the payments, and made the tallies from the roll; and the tallies ought to be delivered by view of the chamberlain. In like manner in his own proper roll soluciones pecuniam portantibus et ibidem solventibus similiter ille. Liberaciones facte antequam liberaciones ille sint redacte in rotulis. Et est modus contrarius quia prius deberet cum camerario redigere in rotulis et postremo solvere.

Et est memorandum quod auctoritate brevium domini regis deberent solvi denarii quibuscunque exceptis necessariis expensis . . et liberacionibus diurnis praesente camerario liberaciones tales testificantes non autem auctoritate . . . . brevium incipientium ex querela talis Mandamus vobis, seu Mandamus ut pluries, etc. . set auctoritate brevium incipientium Liberate, quod nullo modo faciunt justiciarii ten . . sunt in scrinis suis quamquam videntur a clerico suo nec a camarario qui conjungitur Thesaurario . fac', et illa brevia non sunt dossata nec in thesauria posita, et sic in nullo valencia. Precipit justiciarius qui est Thesaurarius quod solvat tali tantum, et tali tantum cum causa paranda sua sine causa . . sine breve de Prestito et [ita] Camararius scribit ut dicitur ei. Recipit justiciarius qui est Thesaurarius pecuniam r . . in propria in castris et mes' retinendo eam in gard' sua dicit clerico suo quod . . . . . receptas in rotulis suis et facit tallias et sic factum est, camarario denarios non vidente. Similiter Liberat justiciario qui est Thesaurarius pecuniam fere totam sic, et precipit quod tales liberaciones minime . . rotulis.

Item quum vult facere literas suas patentes, justiciario sic solvente, quum vult tallias de Scaccario, quum . . . . . ut patet in Abbate de Dewisky quamvis nullum warrantum facit sic solventibus . . facit ipsos inpingere in rotulis suis tali Tantum de denariis justiciarii. Hic non est ordo. Hic non . . . aliqua veritas. Hic non est testimonium. Hic non est warrantum. Debuerit sine morari . . . . . facere poni in rotulis, allocari perplenas soluciones, vel per tales soluciones compotum fieri . . . . . script per terminos et per annos convenientibus rotulis camerarii et rotulis Thesaurarii et . . . . sine brevibus. Una deberet esse tocius terre recepta. Et nullas alias fieri nisi . . . . . nec justic' nec Thes' nec operac' suis . . . . . .

When the K.'s money is received in the Exchequer the justiciary orders one of his officers to seek it and . . . . . without writ; no chamberlain dares to say a word.

Sometimes the justiciary orders his clerk and the chamberlain to enter on the rolls so much money paid . . . . ; it is not known what has been done, for sometimes it is so, other times not.

The treasurer and chamberlain ought conjointly to keep the treasure and have separate keys, so that one without the other [cannot] have access to the treasure, and to the rolls as to the money; but so it is that when . . . . of the K. was deposited within the inclosure towards the Treasury the justiciary caused a . . . . to be made so that he could descend from his chamber and carry away the treasure, and so he did; the chamberlain does not know . . . it is evident that the K. has not the treasure; the justiciary causes it to be carried whither he pleases and no chamberlain knows.

As to the rolls of the justiciary and Chancellor qui per mortem auctorizanc' eos querunter ut repon . . . it is found that the justiciary has retained those rolls in his chamber for two years at his will . . . . of the rolls of Fromund le Brun, the Chancellor.

Peter de Balimor is chamberlain in the Exchequer of receipt; he takes 10 marks a year and ought to be . . . exonerator of treasure, keeper of the K.'s treasure with the treasurer, receive and pay with the treasurer, or the clerk of the treasury; he has no . . . . as is said above; but he keeps the counter-tallies, and with the marshal makes allowances in the accounts of sheriffs and bailiffs . . . tallies; because in the principal and in the lower Exchequer there is only one chamberlain.

The justiciary not only takes excessive fines and does not deliver at the end of the year . . . . fines and amerciaments to be levied in the Exchequer by way of summons under the K.'s seal of the Exchequer, but he retains . . . . and decreases, and resumes at his will rolls delivered into the Exchequer in order that he may moderate or . . . . . Mem. of John Comyn inculpated regarding Irish receipts, who obtained pardon of a fine by . . . . made. Mem. also of William de Cauntinton, Henry of Rochfort, and others.

[Rider.] In roll 9 of the K. under Dublin these words are found:—Hugh de Kersey and Laurence, bailiffs of the city of Dublin, owe 100*s*. for pledges for one another, but they ought not to be summoned therefor, for Stephen Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, pardoned them, as is contained in the roll of memoranda of Hilary term, a. r. 10.

Although the justiciary has power to receive the Chancery writs of Allocate, pardon and Livery and by . . . . . allowances and payments ought to be made, he nevertheless causes it to be remembered on the rolls of the Exchequer that he pardoned such a person only, and by such . . . allowances are made on the roll.

For surpluses which persons have by the roll before the barons, the justiciary orders that so much money be paid . . . Exchequer of receipt without writ.

The justiciary said that for all the time he was justiciary the Chancellor and treasurer tantum se extendebant . . . sua; quod per preceptum suum sicut per breve debebant fieri omnia et impleri. Et quod minus bene actum fuit . . Fuerat Thesaurarius antequam recepit officium Justiciarii in the time of Robert de Ufford, as in making payments tali tantum ei tali . . causa inserenda in Rotulo, as appears on the rolls of payment of Easter term, a. r. 8. The reason was that he had gone to Connaught and other lands in Ireland to expedite affairs of the K., and meanwhile his clerks did not work discreetly or manage matters as was becoming.

The justiciary caused to be audited before the barons the account of Thomas of Shrewsbury, the chamberlain, saying that the chamberlain ought to render [account] and not the treasurer, as appears in the account of the same Thomas, which is unaudited because they ought to render them together. The chamberlain ought to charge the treasurer with receipts, and on his testimony to discharge him by virtue of writs Set utrum de Alloc' . . . . teneatur Thesaurarius videatur quod extendit fines alloc'. Onerat se in pluribus justiciarius pro debitoribus super . . . nec possunt videri per magna tempora talia onera, quod onerat se sic patet in Dublin'.

The justiciary would not permit that any "Originals" should be made of the service of Confy whereby his tenants might be charged and discharged in the Exchequer; and nevertheless the moneys arising out of that service were paid into the Exchequer de . . . . . scaccario solventibus liberate, which is absurd to say. Nor would the justiciary allow in vis' face . . . . of that service, because the services had been granted to Thomas de Clare. Sic nunquam erunt tallie . . . . . plene levata domino R' nec Thome, nec potest aliquod exemplificamentum esse . . . . .

Debut se onerasse et exonerasse per breve regis desicut tallie facte, et aliqui denarii de illo servicio . . . . aliis quam predicto Thome, as appears in the Liberate Rolls for Michaelmas a. r. 7–8, where . . . . . merchants of Lucca, whereof 67*l.* 10*s.* are of the service of Konfy.

The justiciary would not allow any "Originals" to be delivered at the Exchequer of the capitation of MacMorough and Art, whereby the K. ought to have had much money, nor would he charge himself in the view made of those moneys. For this capitation the seneschal of Carlow made a fine with the justiciary for 60*l.*, the seneschal of Kilkenny for 60*l.* Wexford, Kildare, and the county of Dublin paid for each carucate of land 2*s.*

He would not allow any "Originals" to be delivered at the Exchequer of moneys granted out of the four counties of Leinster, and by abbots of the Cistercian order, and the county of Dublin, to pacify the land of Offaly, whereof Kilkenny paid 60*l.* in gross, Carlow 40*l.*, Wexford, Kildare, and the county of Dublin 2*s.* a carucate, and the abbots of the Cistercian order 100*l.* The justiciary would not charge himself in the view with one penny.

The seneschals of the four counties say that the Prior of Kilmainham, who was locum tenens of the justiciary . . . . with the persons aforesaid of Offaly for 200 cows to the K.'s use, and he scarcely spent 10 marks; wherefore we wonder . . . . . why these moneys are not answered for. But the justiciary says that he gave and assigned these moneys nul' verum . . . . suis ut dicunt fidedigni Johanni Comyn et aliis quibus per maritagium vel vendicionem terrarum . . . .

Mem. that there were many payments made and granted by the counties of Leinster for the said Art and his brother, whereof there are no "Originals," nor does the justiciary charge himself therewith, because during their life a proclamation was made . . . . and levied as above; and after their death they having come to peace fuerat levatum . . . . . sciri summa unless by solemn inquisitions.

The justiciary did not deliver into the Exchequer any "Originals" of the carucates of land of . . . . . for levelling a pass in the counties aforesaid, and for which alii duos solidos de car . . . . Wortheny debebant prostravisse dictum passum, nec fecerunt; et dicitur a fidedignis . . . . . nam partem pecunie; with which money he did not charge himself in the view.

The justiciary did not deliver at the Exchequer any "Originals," nor charge himself in the view of his account with [corn] of persons dead and living, taken into the K.'s hand by reason of the Welsh war, pro quibus bladis aliquando fieri fec' de pacutis denariis et aliquando non, ut patet in Pascas' et in ecclesia de Kelbrid.

*M[a] de bonis rector' que valebant centum marcas sic capte in manus Regis et destructe, asportate apud Dunbro . . libi; post modum petitis denariis a justiciario dixit quod per sacramentum bonorum inquireret valorem; facta inquis . . de m'; iterum dixit quod novam inquisitionem vellet de eisdem; et appreciavit ad 66 marcas et sic plus tunc; pre' . . Justic' quod daretur ei breve de Liberate de recetta pro eisdem bladis 35 marcas recepto breve a Camerario . . * et cancellarius pro visu* [?] de Mide resumpsit breve a manu Camerarii et liberavit novum breve de liberandis tantum 25 marcas.

Mem. that the justiciary in his last account rendered had a surplus of 176*l.* 10*s.* 8½*d. et illos denarios quia se capit de thesauro sine breve, ut patet in termino Sancti Johannis anno septimo; nec aliquid annotat super computum.*

(2.) State of the Mints of Dublin and Waterford, and money coined at Roscommon.

There are found in the Exchequer, Dublin, three accounts audited of the Mint, and discovered by the barons, clerks, and all persons of the Exchequer. Let them be seen because it is evident that no one save the justiciary has profit out of those Mints.

The first account rendered by Richard Olof is from Wednesday

* Words in margin almost illegible.

next before the feast of the Holy Trinity, a. r. 6 [June 8, 1276], until the feast of the Apostles Philip and James, a. r. 7 [May 1, 1279];

The second, rendered by Walter Vured, is from the feast of the Apostles Philip and James, a. r. 7, until the feast of the Ascension, a. r. 8 [May 30, 1280];

The third, rendered by Henry de Ponte and James Donati, conjoined with Walter Vured and Humphrey le Gann, keepers of dies and founders, is from the Ascension, a. r. 8, until the feast of St. Matthew the Apostle, a. r. 9 [Sept. 21, 1281].

View of the account of the Mint of Dublin, from Saturday next after Christmas, a. r. 9 [Dec. 28, 1280], until June 4, a. r. 10 [1282] made in England, and under the K.'s seal transmitted to Ireland to the Abbot of Thame and his associates, in order that by that view the justiciary might be charged with the moneys contained therein which he had received. Andrew de Spersholt and James Donati, keepers of the Mint, make the view. A transcript thereof remains in the Dublin Exchequer, and was delivered by the abbot to the justiciary there, quia cedit loco compoti.

View of account of the same Mint from June 4, a. r. 10 aforesaid, until the feast of Michaelmas, a. r. 12 [1284], made by the Abbot of Thame and his associates for Andrew aforesaid, and Thoresius Donati in lieu of James Donati, a transcript of which remains in the Exchequer aforesaid. A solemn inquisition was taken by the K.'s order regarding Andrew and James aforesaid.

Many writs were made to distrain the keepers of the Mint of Waterford, who would not come to make a view. In the end one came and the other not, nevertheless the justiciary, as appears, charges himself with the money received from them.

Mem. that in Ireland almost all speak and testify de pluribus cambiis factis et de denariis ultra modum ad 1*s. Regi; primo de denariis magnis electis de veteri moneta cambiatis, pro cujus libra* 16*d. Item recepit parvam monetam ad scaccarium et in cameris de debitoribus Regis per pondus et dealbacionem; quam quidem parvam monetam defensam ne reciperetur, postmodo ut solveretur precipit, propter exercitum Regis versus Walliam, et ita lucrum in receptis, lucrum in solucione; et hoc fuit antequam curreret electa et tritata moneta de veteri.* Afterwards old money having been altogether prohibited he caused new money to be made. It was called Scalding, Bishop's money, or Stephening, from the name of the bishop. All old, small, and worn out money ought thus to have come into the Mint, whence infinite profit. Of the profit nothing is found, and nothing touches the bishop save only in an account of Percival of Lucca. Afterwards came Alexander, and he made this right money which is current and is answered for as aforesaid. By such a Mint alone any one might grow rich. By receipt of small money by weight with white money, and payment of it to the creditor in place of large and good money, any one might grow rich. It cannot be known what is thus received or paid, because receipts and payments occurred now in the Exchequer and now in the chambers.

The keepers of the Mint are subservient to him, and indebted to him for their robes. The directions they gave in making the view were:—"Take the view according to what I deliver to you "and not otherwise." Thus said Thorosianus of Waterford, the Lombard.

He, it is said, is subservient to the justiciary. Ireland is much oppressed and nearly destroyed by the changes of Mints; so say the people of that country.

Mem. of the houses erected on the soil of the Bishop of Waterford, [by] the justiciary, out of the K.'s money, for the use of the Mint.

(3.) State of the custom of Ireland granted to the K., namely, for each sack of wool containing 42 pieces, standard measure, ½ mark; each 300 woolfels, ½ mark; each last of hides, 1 mark.

The merchants of Lucca, as controllers, render an account of this custom from May 4, a. r. 3 [1275], when it was granted, until Michaelmas, a. r. 8 [1280]; men of divers ports from the feast of Michaelmas aforesaid until the feast of All Saints, a. r. 10 [Nov. 1, 1282]; and Thorosianus, merchant of Florence, associate of Hugh Pape, farmer thereof. Amount, 1000*l.* A view was made before the said abbot and his associates from the said feast of All Saints, a. r. 10, until the same feast, a. r. 12 [1284]. The custody of the custom is now recommitted to the merchants of Lucca aforesaid as controllers.

The K. was deceived to the amount of 500 marks in making a commission to the merchants of Florence for 1,000*l.* a year, for the merchants of Lucca answered for the same custom at 1,800*l.* for 1 year, namely, in a. r. 8. Other years are not complete, and the custom can be committed to farm for 2,000 marks. Such a loss is not to be endured.

It is publicly said that the justiciary shares the profit of the custom with the merchants of Florence, and that the merchant having his money in the society is safer.

Mem. of Fifhide receiving 10 marks a year, &c.

Mem. of skins without the wool on, horns of stags, and of calves more than a year old. Custom is demanded for the former. Let the first grant be seen.

(4.) State of the escheatry.

. . . . . as well of bishoprics as of lands at the Exchequer of Dublin, and well and laudably conduct themselves . . . . . nor was it necessary to move regarding this office.

. . . . . the extents thereof are entered in a roll. Let it be seen what marriages there are and their value.

. . . bishoprics in Ulster subject to Armagh, as Clogher, Derry, Raphoe [Rathbotensis], Kilmore [Thirburnensis]. The K. never had custody by the death of bishops as he has in other bishoprics subject to Armagh . . . . all others of Ireland; nor had the K. ever any custody in them; nor was licence to elect demanded. But the Archbishop of Armagh appropriates to himself vacancies, and demands of licences, and appoints bishops therein against the kingly dignity, to the great loss of the K. and against his liberties, as is said. Because it is conceded to the kings of England by the Apostolic See that the Church of Ireland should be regulated and subjected to the kingly dignity in the premises as is the Church of England. [Quia indultum est Regibus

Angliæ per sedem apostolicam quod ecclesia Hiberniæ sit regulata et dignitati regie subjecta in premissis ut est ecclesia Anglicana.]

Writs have lately been levied against Armagh in the premises. It would be expedient that privileges should be seen, if any there are, because the archbishop threatened to interdict the land on account of the petition aforesaid.

There is in Ulster a bishopric called of Dromore subject to Armagh, whereof the K. had custody by John de Saunford his escheator after the death of a bishop of that place, as appears by an inquisition thereupon; let it be seen. The K. was expelled from this custody; and the Archbishop of Armagh, without the K., conferred the temporalities on Thiermath, now Bishop of Dromore. A writ is levied against Armagh touching this bishopric. Some say that the escheator can never go to the bishoprics aforesaid on account of the Irish, and so those bishoprics are more easily passed over. Et talibus ut archiepiscopo non est facta gratia per . . . . . de eo quia nunquam venit apud Dubliniam per literam Regis, set ultra modum fovetur et sustentatur per . . . . . provided his brother in the church of Meath. And it would be expedient to the K. that no Irishman should ever be an archbishop or bishop [?], because they always preach against the K., and always provide their churches with Irishmen . . . so that an election of bishops might be made of Irishmen, to maintain their language; and not of others . . . fundendam linguam. In like manner the Dominicans and Franciscans make much [faciunt multa] of that language.

Mem. of distraints made in the seneschalship of Ulster on Crociæ belonging to the K. by, &c., as appears in a letter.

(5.) State of the Chancery of Ireland.

The Chancellor receives 40*l.* a year for his fee besides issues of the seal. W[alter] de Fulburne appointed as Bishop of Meath, now holds the office of Chancellor. Little is answered for to the K. for having writs during his time, or during the time of Adam de Fulburne, who before W[alter] aforesaid held the place of Chancellor after the death of Fromund.

Mem. that in the Chancery aforesaid there is now only one clerk, John Esturmy, who knows little of the Chancery. Writs issuing are reproved in the Common Pleas and elsewhere as wanting in matter and form; there is a very great want there of clerks knowing the form of Chancery; and therefore the justices of the Common Pleas have supplicated the K. to provide better in these matters.

Mem. that in Ireland not only clerks of Chancery but clerks of the justiciary take excessive fees for writing writs.

After the feast of Michaelmas in this year a great many writs of Liberate were made, and . . . . . Inrolments of these writs were found in the bag of Fromund le Brun, the Chancellor. Similiter de denariis pacatis per justiciarium anno 11 et 10 multis, ut Humfrido de Hasteng et filio suo et aliis; est inp . . . . . facta . . . . . , rotulus post festum Sancti Michaelis de liberacionibus predictis cum brevibis superiore modo factis.

Mem. de predicto Johanne Esturmy, clerico qui pro habenda litera de cancellaria et signacione collacionis facte per priorem de Kilmayman, tenentem locum justiciarii, de prebenda quadam in ecclesia Tuamense dedit 20*s. ut idem Johannes fatebatur.*

Mem. that the view of account of the justiciary for 6 years whereof an account is due non est f . . . . . .

First because the accounts rendered by him as treasurer for a. r. 3, 4, 5, and 6 before . . . . . were rendered by certain compilations made by him, the treasurer, not testified by the chamberlain . . . . . found, which form the auditors did not dare to adopt or admit, and no account . . . . . anything delivered into the wardrobe, nor for maintenance of any war unless in one place . . . . . .

Secondly. Because the treasurer having been charged by the rolls of receipt for 6 years, whereof an account is due, and having been 3 times asked if he wished to charge himself with any receipts out of the Treasury, whereof he had made no mention, answered that he did not, and that he should not be led to conceal anything. Afterwards by turns he charged himself with 10,000 [marks?] received without the Exchequer, and even yet he does not know how to charge himself, for he still takes inquisitions in counties and seneschalships of his receipts thereof, by his writ.

3rdly. He charged himself in the great Exchequer for debtors, as appears in Dublin. Of these he made no [mention?] in the view. He might have acknowledged in the memoranda of the Exchequer such matters as cannot be seen in a writ. . . . . He received in so many places and such different ways that for a long time the charge cannot be known.

[Rider.] [The expenses of the justiciary must be guarded against on account of the underwritten receipts:—

Mem. that in the term of Michaelmas, a. r. 12–13, there were delivered to S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford 200*l.* by writ of the K. dated a. r. 9; and there were delivered to the same in the same term 300 marks by writ of the K. dated as above.

Mem. that S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford received 100*l.* for his expenses in going through divers places in Ireland to the Parliament, a. r. 6, besides the office of treasurer.

Mem. of writs of Liberate made under the seal of Ireland; they ought not to be made there unless by the K.'s writ of England. Because it was commanded that such should be made by view of N[icholas] de Karevile.]

Item. many prests were made to the said treasurer to the K.'s use, some inrolled in the Exchequer of receipt, others paid by writs of Liberate, others by writs of Allocate, nor can . . . . . his involvements . . . . . with which he ought to be charged and with which not.

The chamberlain's Rolls as well of receipt as of payment are so cancelled, so defaced, so [concealed?] that it cannot be known by them what is ordinary, what extraordinary.

Item justiciarius fecit compilacionem quandam de receptis et liberatis de 6 annis predictis . . . . . R'sine visu camerarii, sine testimonio sine brevibus admittere Dominus Rex potuit . . . . . liberare Abbati de Tham' et sociis suis noluit justiciarius deferendo Domino Regi Q. . . . . portare dinerium suum per se, et non per alium.

Mem. quod per liberaciones Scaccarii et rotulis earumdem non potest sciri quid per breve, quid sine breve . . . . prestiterit, quid est solutum de denariis Regis, quid de denariis Episcopi; quid est ordinarium, quid memorandum.

(6.) How the Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, becomes rich.

The justiciary is buyer and receiver of nearly all wines coming to Ireland. He buys them for the K.'s use and places them in cellars. He sends to the K. and sells such as he pleases; dearer to the K. and of the worst. He did likewise to Sir Robert de Ufford.

His wines being for sale by his own vendors he will not permit other merchants to sell their wines; and so of corn.

By reason of the Welsh war he now buys granges of rectors, abbots, and others at a low price.

He sent to the K. at his own price his bad corn from the farms of Swords, Santry, and elsewhere.

He sends his wines at his own price for supplies of castles; other victuals in like manner to Roscommon, Randown, Augvi, Roscrea, and elsewhere.

Credible persons say that the account of Clemenzun, his merchant, who undertook to sell the justiciary's wines as if they were the K.'s was so settled that he demised his manor of le Rath near Maynooth.

Item of moneys which he paid to merchants, for wines, corn, meat, and other articles taken for the K.'s use, he retains part and pays part as is said, and they give the example of Arnold de Romayn, merchant of Gascony, and other merchants who do not dwell in the land; and of those who do dwell in the land and commonly come thither, he takes, they say, 2 hogsheads, 3 hogsheads, more or less, in order that they may have their payments; and they give as an example Domengun le Fraunceys and others.

* In margin. See the erased Rolls of Hil., a. r. 8.

There can be no contention regarding land or custody in Ireland but the justiciary must have a share in it, and so by reason of his power and his money he has the buying of all lands and custodies.

By grievous amerciaments and charges he imposes the necessity of selling on those who will and those who will not sell, and on those having custodies afterwards remitting the sale; and nearly all say this.

He impleads bishops and others, and by procured defaults he acquires lands in fee and for his life. This appears regarding the Bishop of Lismore and the manor of Arfinan, and also regarding the Archbishop of Cashel, from whom he had 50*l.* a year and 100*l.* in lands and tenements.

He is enriched by the Mint, by the custom as is noted above.

No person can be in any office, whether as sheriff or as constable, unless by his gift. This appears by Walter Uncle, his brother, the sheriffs, and others.

He is enriched by taking fines from imprisoned mariners, charging them with having badly preserved corn in ships carrying it to the K. in Wales. And it was his own unused corn coming from Swords and Santry.

He is also enriched by carrying out works in castles, houses, walls round the Exchequer, mills, which he causes to be erected without view; he makes one work under another, so that the cost of one or the other cannot be known. By these works he pays into the Exchequer a large sum of money. Credible persons say that he thus becomes enriched beyond measure.

Mem. of the pillars of marble taken from the K.'s hall in the Castle of Dublin and carried to Dunbro. Item of the chains of the vill of Dublin, the locks and the timber carried thither.

Mem. of the custody of the land and heir of Richard de Feipou in Santry, seized by the justiciary and afterwards delivered to Theobald de Verdun by letter, which came before the abbot and his associates; also of the custody of the land and heir of Reginald de Dene, which the justiciary holds, and of the money still due to the executors of William de Dene which is not paid, because Sir Ernisius de Berkeley inquired regarding William's receipts. By gifts and receipts he received more in land and in the Exchequer than he paid to the Lord Edward. The barons nevertheless could not find the rolls of that receipt. If anything was obtained from the Chancery of England on account of that debt it ought to be recalled until better inquiry shall have been made regarding the premises.

The justiciary in the view of his account exonerates himself in a different way, and more largely than it behoves, as in regard to 1,500*l.* from Bendinus, the merchant, by his letter which is annulled by the justiciary's letter, because Bendinus restored the money.

Item regarding 1,000 marks paid into the K.'s wardrobe which the clergy and people granted to the K. as a loan in aid of the expedition into Wales, with which money or loan he did not charge himself.

Item of many moneys paid by writs of Liberate, as for corn, wherewith he did not charge himself; let the example of Pascas' be produced, &c. Of moneys by writ of Liberate to John de Saunford, the escheator. He did not receive the moneys, but the clerks of the justiciary.

He sometimes charged himself by rolls, sometimes by writs, sometimes by word of mouth, sometimes more largely by word of mouth than was found in rolls; sometimes in less by word of mouth than was found in rolls, as to the Abbot of St. Thomas, Dublin, which money he said he wished to re-demand.

Mem. of the following matters:—the Dominicans and Franciscans each of whom receive out of the K.'s Exchequer 35 marks a year without warrant; tallies made by sheriffs to innumerable persons throughout counties and seneschalships who ought to clear themselves; some of the sheriffs are dead and others removed from their bailiwicks; the K.'s moneys almost wholly carried away from the Exchequer by the justiciary, excepting debts which are certain, if any; the justiciary who had substituted in his place the Prior of Kilmainham who ordered inquisitions to be made throughout counties and seneschalships, se ponebat justiciarius, et quod certificet infra quindenam Sancti Martini de omnibus conqueri volentibus; videatur breve.

Mem. of the inquisition which the justiciary made regarding himself in the Exchequer, and of knights leaving the vill lest they should have to apply their seal; of those who were indebted and paid [?], of whom W[illiam] de Bentesdal prayed that he should apply his seal. *Et Mem. de pergameno largo de quo dub' nul, ut frater Com' Hereford, W. Mem. de mensura terræ et qualiter homines terræ diversimodo gravantur per . . . . . [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 530, E.B. 2544. Very faint, and illegible in many parts.]

[About 13 Edw. I.] 3. W[illiam] de Beverley to J[ohn] Bishop of Ely, treasurer of England. By default of the chief keeper [defectus custodis capitanci] and of ministers of the Exchequer [in Ireland] the K.'s land there is desolated and impoverished, bowed down with the universal pestilence of war. The writer therefore urgently prays that a timely remedy may be obtained from the K. in any way the treasurer may deem most advisable. As for what concerns the bishop's affairs, respecting which he had sent Walter Belot to Ireland, the writer had prosecuted and prosecutes them with effect. The money due to the bishop in Ireland at the time when he was rector of Aughebo, for which he had received from the debtors a solemn recognizance in Chancery, and whereof a portion had been paid to the writer not without delay, remains for the most part unpaid. Two of his horses, regarded as palfreys, were taken and carried away by the Irish in the last plundering and burning at Aughebo. One of them afterwards fell into the hands of Sir Gilbert de Bouhun, Knight; had written to him by the K.'s writ to bring it to the court and deliver it to the writer in the bishop's name, but he had refused. It is therefore expedient that the bishop should write to Sir Gilbert to restore it. [Royal Letters, 2055, partly decayed in margin.]

[About 13 Edw. I.] 4. Robert de Ufford to the K. John de Dunhevet had complained that having received from Robert when justiciary 100 marks and

100*s.* to pay the wages of horse and foot soldiers, and having according to Robert's testimony paid the money for that purpose, the amount is now exacted from him by the present justiciary. The K. desiring to be certified thereupon Robert notifies that when the land of Offaly was in a state of war, whereby many losses, dangers, and grievances were caused to the whole people of Ireland, and that country was much disturbed, John came to him and said that if Robert would find him 30 soldiers mounted on war horses, and 200 foot soldiers, and would stand by his side to assist him in certain places and on certain days, which he named, he would subject to the K.'s dominion, and reduce to the K.'s peace, all that rebel land. Robert answered that the counsel appeared to him good and sound; and told him to choose which he would have, either so many horse and foot soldiers, or the money required to maintain them. John answered that he chose the money, and asked for 100 marks and 100*s.* Robert demanded security as the event was doubtful, and John found as sureties Sir Nicholas de Dunhevet and Sir Walter l'Enfant, Knights. The money having been paid to John, Robert with a strong force came to the places named at the appointed time, but John did not keep his promise, and neither came nor sent to Robert. The latter on John's failure collected a large force of armed men and with much labour and expense subjugated the land of Offaly and reduced its men to the K.'s peace. This done he caused John to be summoned before the Exchequer, and claimed the money paid to him. John and the sureties appeared, the latter complaining that they were over burdened by so heavy a security. Robert demanded larger security and John found separate sureties for every 10 marks. Robert on his departure handed over the money to the justiciary to be levied to the K.'s use. [Royal Letters, 2054.]

1284–1285. Jan. 1. 5. The K. commands Nicholas de Clere, custodian of the vacant archbishopric of Dublin, to deliver to John de Candeure all the money accruing from the issues of that archbishopric, as the K. wishes it to be applied to the walling of certain vills and castles in Wales. The K. will cause the amount to be allowed to Nicholas in his account. Bristol.

Jan. 2. 7. The K. had learnt by inquisition taken by Stephen Bishop of Waterford, that it would not be to his damage but rather to his advantage if he granted to John de Stretton in fee-farm at 12*l.* a year, payable at the Exchequer, Dublin, the 3 carucates of waste lands near the new castle of Mackinegan which he holds for a term at 6*l.* a year, provided he built upon and inhabited that land.

1284–1285. Mandate to the said bishop or his locum tenens to commit that land to John by letters under the K.'s seal of Ireland to hold in fee-farm at 12*l.* a year, subject to the condition aforesaid. Bristol. [Fine Rolls, 13 Edw. I., m. 17.]

Robert does not come, and he was the plaintiff, therefore he is essoined without day. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No 88, Rot. 17 dors; and No. 89, Rot. 4.]

Hilary. 11. Thomas de la Cornere puts in his place James de Mari, Thomas Maunsel, or John de Westok, against Roger Waspayl, of a plea of land, and removes John Cowe. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 88, Rot. 20.]

He does not appear. Judgment that the land be taken into the K.'s hand. And as no extent has been taken of the land, mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to cause it to be extended. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 88, Rot. 12.]

Hilary. 13. Recognizance by Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, of Ireland, and Nicholas de Segrave, to Baroncinus Galteri, Roland de Podio, Richard Guy, and their associates, merchants of Lucca, for 50 sacks of good wool of Ireland, by the great sack, whereof each sack ought to contain 42 stone, and each stone 13 pounds in weight. The said Richard and Nicholas have received the whole price of the 50 sacks, namely, 300 marks sterling, and they are bound to deliver the sacks to the merchants at Kerlungui, in Ireland, at the following terms, namely, at the feast of the Nativity of St. John [June 24] next ensuing, 25 sacks; and at the same feast in the following year, 25 sacks. And unless they do so they grant that the Barons of the Exchequer may levy the value of the sacks out of their lands, tenements, and chattels. [Memoranda, Q.R., 12–13 Edw. I., Rot. 14 dors.]

Hilary. 14. The K. pardons to Thomas de Berkeley 200 out of 700 marks in which he is bound to the K. for a fine made by Thomas Fitz Maurice for his marriage, and the amount of which the K. had assigned to Baroncinus Walteri and his associates, merchants of Lucca. Of the remaining 500 marks the K. grants that Thomas may render 100 marks at each Exchequer until the whole be discharged. Mandate to the Barons of the Exchequer to cause Thomas to be quit of 200 marks, and to cause him to have the terms aforesaid, for the residue. [Memoranda, Q.R., 12–13 Edw. I., Rot. 4 dors.]

Jan. 20. 15. The K. wills that Christiana de Mariscis may turn to profit her land of Lossemak in Ireland, of the fee of Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, and owing suit at his court of Lourech', which Stephen Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, had extended at 7 marks a year. Although that land ought to remain to the K. and Queen Alienor, according to the agreement made between them and Christiana. Canterbury. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 29.]

Feb. 9. 16. Stephen Bishop of Waterford to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells, praying him to obtain the K.'s charter regarding the commission for 10 years which Stephen had made to Robert de Stapleton and Roger his brother, of the counties of Cork and Waterford, where the former possesses lands. Believes that this would tend to the K.'s profit. After the K. had recovered against Thomas Fitz Maurice his seisin of the shrievalties of Cork and Waterford Robert had resigned his right under the K.'s commission to the county of Connaught. Waterford. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 39, Bundle A.]

I., No.* 39, Bundle A., Norman French.]

Feb. 9. 18. S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells. After the K. had recovered seisin against Thomas Fitz Maurice of the counties of Cork and Waterford, Robert de Stapleton resigned the right which he had, it is said, under the K.'s commission, to the county of Connaught, and Stephen, out of consideration for the Bishop of Bath and Wells, committed to Robert, and Roger his son, for a term of 10 years, the counties of Cork and Waterford in which he holds his lands. Stephen thereupon prays that the Bishop of Bath and Wells will obtain for Robert and Roger, or either of them, the K.'s charter upon the commission of the counties. Waterford. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 39, Bundle A.]

Mandate accordingly to the Dean and chapter. Burgh. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 27.]

Easter. 28. Complaint of Stephen Talun and Juliana his wife. Walter le Hauberger and Christiana his wife, had demanded against them before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, 40 acres of land in Stachgrenan as Christiana's right; and by verdict of a jury taken by consent between them had recovered that land. Stephen Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, on complaint of Stephen and Juliana, caused the record and process of the plaint to come before him, and having examined them, caused seisin to be restored to Stephen and Juliana, as it seemed to him that the justices of the Common Pleas had not rightly proceeded in their judgment. The K. then on complaint of Walter and Christiana caused as well the record of the plaint before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, as the record and process of the plaint before the justiciary of Ireland, to come before him in England; and commanded the justiciary to summon by Scire facias the said Stephen and Juliana to come before the K. himself to hear the said records and process and do what was just. The said Stephen and Juliana not having appeared, the examination of each record was proceeded with. And as by inspection of the records sent by the justiciary it appeared to the K.'s court that the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, had rightly and in form of law proceeded to judgment, seisin of the land was restored to Walter and Christiana. Stephen and Juliana afterwards came before the K. at Carnarvon complaining that Walter and Christiana had surreptitiously and by suppressing the truth caused them to be ejected, for they had not been summoned by Scire facias to be before the K.; and they said that after judgment rendered by the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, the said Walter and Christiana by fine before the said justices acknowledged the land aforesaid to be the right of the said Stephen and Juliana and restored it to them. Afterwards the said Stephen and Juliana produced a fine as follows:—

Final concord made in the K.'s court at Drogheda on Sunday next before the feast of the Apostles Sts. Simon and Jude, a. r. 10 [Oct. 25, 1282], before Stephen Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, Richard of Exeter, and Nicholas Taaffe, between Stephen Talun and Juliana his wife, complainants, and Walter le Hauberger and Christiana his wife, deforciants, of 40 acres of land in Stachgrenan, whereof there was a plea between them in the same court, to wit, that Walter and Christiana aforesaid acknowledged that land, &c. to be the right of Stephen and Juliana, and remised and quit claimed it from them and the heirs of Christiana to Stephen and Juliana and the heirs of Juliana. And for this acknowledgment, remise, surrender, quit claim, and concord, the said Stephen and Juliana gave to the said Walter and Christiana a sore hawk.

Afterwards the parties agreed by licence as is contained in the fine aforesaid, and the said Stephen and Juliana acknowledge thereupon that they owe to the said Walter and Christiana 5 marks, and unless they repay them they grant that the justiciary of Ireland may issue a Fieri facias against their lands.

Judgment that Stephen and Juliana have seisin. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 90, Rot. 20.]

Easter. 29. It is granted by the justices that Thomas le Messager may prosecute for Gerald [Fitz Maurice], who is under age, against Agnes de Valence, of a plea of Mort d'Ancestor. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 90, Rot. 38.]

April 25. 39. S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, to the K. Had received the K.'s letters herein set out in full, and dated Bristol, Dec. 29, a. r. 13 [1284], commanding him not to meddle on pretext of the recent English statute of mortmain with 160 acres of land in Logher, which Brother John Wycher, canon and procurator of Lanthony, near Gloucester, had purchased to the use of the priory from Walter le Jeovene, Alicia his wife, Alexander Barbedor and Isolda his wife; but to allow the prior to recover his former seisin therein through his procurator. The bishop in reply states that he had not taken the 160 acres of land aforesaid into the K.'s hand on pretext of the above statute, but because the lands are held of the abbey of St. Mary of Duleek, and are of the demesne of that abbey, the custody whereof in time of vacancy belongs to the K., because the abbot holds in capite, and had complained to the justiciary of the [procurator's] intrusion. The K. would lose accruing wards and marriages if the prior should continually possess the land. Dublin. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 39, Bundle A.]

[Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 530, J.R., 22,260, much decayed in parts.]

1285. May 1. 46. The K. commands the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, that having received from Geoffrey de la Prise, executor of William de Monmouth, 100 marks, they cause him to be exonerated regarding 150 marks, amount of a fine to obtain administration of William's goods and chattels. The K. had commanded the justiciary and Treasurer and Barons of Ireland to levy the remaining 50 marks out of William's goods and chattels in Ireland Westminster. [Close, 13 Edw. I., m. 9; and Origin., 13 Edw. I., m. 8.]

May 2. 47. Power to the Abbot of Denleye to receive the attorneys of Emelina, who was the wife of Hugh de Aston, in the plaint before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, between Emelina, plaintiff, and Ralph of Norwich and William le Deveneys, tenant, of 1 carucate of land and 9 marcates of rent in Balimony and Baliboth'. Mandate accordingly. Westminster. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 39, Bundle A.]

May 5. 48. Letters of simple protection for 2 years for Richard Stede, burgess of Youghal [Ioghell']. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 24.]

[May 14.] 49. R[ichard] Bishop of Ferns to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells. Considering the latter the firmest pillar of ecclesiastical liberty, with grief writes to inform him of an insolent and novel attack on that liberty in Ireland. Nicholas, his Archdeacon of Ferns, having been executor of Adam de St. John, and having long since administered his assets, Sir William Waspayl, Knight, in the name of the Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, by his mandate, and relying on his patronage, had caused the archdeacon to be summoned before the Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, and exacts from him 86*l.* of silver. Although the archdeacon by his attorney had maintained that he ought not to answer in that court in a testamentary matter, and the bishop had urgently prayed that the matter might be remitted to him, the barons proceeded in the cause, compelling the attorney to answer to William for the money, which the latter alleges he had paid to Reginald de Dene by distress of the Exchequer. The said Reginald is in the custody of the justiciary, and had married the daughter of the latter's sister. As this cause is merely testamentary, and belongs of right to ecclesiastical investigation, and the Bishop of Ferns had always been ready to exhibit full justice to this knight and other complainants regarding the archdeacon, prays the Bishop of Bath and Wells to provide a remedy in the premises, and preserve unimpaired the liberty of the Church. This cause had, as he had learnt, been brought into the ecclesiastical court before the Bishop of Leighlin, in whose diocese the knight alleges that the archdeacon had administered the assets of the deceased, and had been carried to final sentence, until the bishop having died the suit abated by William's negligence. Monday in Pentecost week. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 39, Bundle A.]

May 14. 50. The Abbot of Deeleye to the K., notifying that he had, pursuant to the power given to him, received the attorneys of Emelina who was the wife of Hugh de Aston in a plaint before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, between the said Emelina, plaintiff, and Ralph of Norwich and William le Deveneys, tenants, of 1 carucate of land and 9 marcates of rent in Balimony and Balybother. The names of the attorneys are Hugh and Adam Oglauth. Darley. Monday next before the feast of St. Dunstan. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 39, Bundle A.]

May 17. 51. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. The Prior and convent of Weeme, Cork, of the Augustinian order, having notified that their church is vacant by the death of Brother R., late abbot thereof, and prayed licence to elect; the K. grants licence accordingly, commanding them to elect an abbot who shall be devout, fit to rule their church, and useful and faithful to the K. and to Ireland. Power to the justiciary to give the royal assent in lieu of the K. to the election, and on confirmation to restore the temporalities, previously, however, taking from the elect letters sealed with his seal, and that of the chapter, that this grace shall not tend to the K.'s prejudice, nor be converted into a precedent. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 20.]

May 18. 52. Brother M. canon of Weeme, Cork, having announced to the K. [the death] of Brother R. his late abbot, letters of licence to elect are granted to him. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 21.]

May 20. 53. Protection and safe-conduct for 2 years for William of Leicester, merchant, in going to Ireland with his merchandise, remaining and trading there, and returning thence. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 19.]

Trinity. 54. Ireland, Dublin. It appears by a record sent before the K. by the justices of Ireland, which record is to be found among those of Michaelmas, a. r. 12–13, that Roger Waspayl had demanded by writ of right in the court of the liberty of Carlow, against Thomas de la Cornere, one messuage and six carucates in Typercathan, and two carucates of land, &c. in Balymacdoveran; Thomas comes into the same court and thereof vouches to warranty William Fitz Warin of Montchensey, who comes by his attorney and warrants accordingly. Roger thereupon says that Roger his ancestor was seised in his demesne as of fee in the time of Hen. III., the K.'s father, by taking of esplees, &c.; from Roger the right descended to Henry as his son and heir; from Henry, who died without heir of his body, the right descended to Roger, as his brother and heir; and from him to Roger, the present plaintiff, as his son and heir.

William vouches to warranty Roger le Bigot, Earl of Norfolk and marshal of England, William de Valence and Joan his wife, Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, Agnes de Vescy, and Alienor, Maria, and Margaret, daughters and heirs of William de Moun, under age, John de Boun of Midherst, under age, John Fitz John de Moun, of Donestor, under age, Matilda de Mortimer, Humphrey de Boun, Earl of Hereford, John de Hastings, and Milicent de Montalt. Because some of these are under age, William produces a charter of William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, whereby he granted to Hubert de Montchensy for his homage and service the vill of Typercathan with its appurtenances, as fully as Roger Waspayl ever held it. Warranty by the Earl and his heirs.

And Roger says that William cannot avail himself of this charter because he himself holds of the seisin of Roger aforesaid, his ancestor, and that the earl or his heirs never were in seisin of the tenements in fee, in demesne, or in service; and of this he puts himself on the country. William likewise.

Wherefore the justiciary of Ireland is commanded to inquire thereupon in the presence of the parties, and to send the inquisition to the K. by the quinzaine of Easter, wheresoever, &c. The same day is given to the parties in banco.

Thereupon Thomas de la Cornere comes and says that he had paid at Carlow to the said Earl, Roger le Bygot, 4*s.* for scutage, wherefore the Earl is in seisin of the scutage and suit in the county court of Carlow from month to month in the name of William de Montchensy.

And William says that Roger is in seisin of his homage rendered at Norwich in the presence of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, and others.

The Rolls of the Exchequer having been afterwards searched it was found that the service of the manor of Typercathan had been assigned to Matilda de Warrenne, one of the heirs of the said William Marshall, of which Matilda Roger Earl of Norfolk and Marshal, aforesaid, is now heir in regard to her purparty of William's inheritance, for the tenth part of one knight's fee. Wherefore let nothing further be done regarding the inquisitions either in England or in Ireland. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 93, Rot. 9; and No. 94, Rot. 2.]

Trinity. 55. A day on the morrow of the Holy Trinity, before the K. wheresoever, &c., was given to Amabilia Comyn, plaintiff, to hear judgment in a plea of land between her and the Prior of the Holy Trinity, Dublin. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 90, Rot. 33.]

Trinity. 56. The assise before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, came to inquire if Maurice, father of Gerald Fitz Maurice, who is not of age, as is said, was seised in his demesne as of fee at his death of the manors of Aclare, Cromuth', Athlekach', and Grene, and of 2 messuages and 5½ carucates of land in Urthgedy, Balyatheny, and Robertscastle. Agnes de Valence holds those messuages and that land. She comes, and the justices of Ireland have sent their record by order of the K. And Gerald being asked if he wishes to say anything against Agnes says that it is so, and he prays that the assise may be taken.

Afterwards nothing was done, because the plea was in the K.'s Council before the K. himself. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 90, Rot. 32 dors.]

Trinity. 57. Ireland. Brother Thomas de Tulose, Master of the Templars in Ireland, puts in his place John Sperman, William Pyinn, or Walter de Cokerham, against the Abbot of the Port of St. Mary de Humbrethyn, of a plea of land. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 93, Rot. 42.]

Trinity. 58. On behalf of the Prior of the Holy Trinity, Dublin, it had been shown to the K. that the K. himself and other magnates, the chief lords of tenements in Ireland, were according to custom there entitled to and always held the custodies of lands of deceased tenants and of their heirs for which homage was rendered; that the prior lately, after the death of John Comyn who held of him in capite the manor of Kyneshale, obtained custody of it according to the custom aforesaid, until John de Sanford, the K.'s escheator of Ireland, the see of Dublin being vacant and in the K.'s hand, thinking that the custody belonged to the K. by reason of vacancy in the priory aforesaid, took it into the K.'s hand, and deprived the prior of it; that it having been found by inquisition that the custody belonged neither to the K. nor the Archbishop of Dublin but to the prior, the custody was restored to the latter; that Amabilia who was the wife of John Comyn aforesaid, having come to the K.'s court and asserted that the custody belonged to her as next heir of the said John, the manor being held in socage, the K. commanded Robert de Offord, justiciary of Ireland, to certify by the oath of good and lawful men of that country, whether the custody belonged to Amabilia, the prior, or the archbishop aforesaid; and that the justiciary thereupon certified that according to custom of Ireland the custody belonged to the prior by reason of homage having been rendered in the K.'s court for it; but that Amabilia caused him to be removed from the custody without summons or notice. The K., therefore, wishing to be certified regarding the premises and to do justice to the parties, commanded the said justiciary to summon the parties before the K. and his Council in England in the quinzaine of St. John, a. r. 9, and to send thither the record and process, &c. thereupon. Record sent and herein recited at length; in it the justiciary certifies that he had caused a second inquisition to be taken by some of those who had been on the first, and by others; namely, by Richard de Feypo, Henry le Lou, Ulfran de Berneval, John de Wycumbe, William Abbot, Simon Marshall, William Fitz Matthew, Henry de Sasebole, Adam de Benner, Richard Brun, Richard le Blund, and Simon de Camerâ, who found that after the first conquest of Ireland the K., the magnates, and chief lords of Ireland were wont to have custodies and marriages by reason of homage rendered by tenants of lands and tenements, and that the predecessors of the prior were in good and peaceful seisin of the custody, as appears by a fine made between Robert Prior of the Holy Trinity, Dublin, plaintiff, and John Comyn, tenant of the vill of Kyneshale, whereby the said John acknowledged that vill to be the right of the said prior and his church, and for this acknowledgment and fine, &c. the prior granted in fee-farm to John the whole vill save 1 carucate of land which Amabilia Comyn formerly held in that vill and which remains to the prior by this fine; rendering to the prior, his successors, and his church 5 marks of silver during the life of Margery Comyn, who holds in dower a third part of the vill, with remainder on her death to said John and his heirs, and rendering after her death 100s. half-yearly; warranty in fee by the prior to the said John; and be it known that John rendered homage in the said court to the prior for the tenement; wherefore the jurors say that according to the custom of Ireland, by reason of homage the custody of the said manor and the marriage of the heir by right belong to the prior; there was no plea or process held in Ireland touching this matter, save the inquisition aforesaid.

Afterwards the K. sent his writ, herein recited in full and dated Nov. 28, a. r. 10 [1281], to Stephen Bishop of Waterford and Richard of Exeter, reciting a writ to Robert de Ufford, the inquisition taken by him, and the custom of Ireland that all chief lords of whom tenements are held by homage, whether they held by knight service, or by other certain service, were always wont to have by reason of homage the custody of tenements until the age of the heirs, with the marriage of the heirs. As this custom is altogether contrary to English laws, because in England the chief lords have no rights in the custodies of tenements held of them, by reason of homage, unless the tenants are bound to render some military service, it seemed to the K.'s Council that credit ought not to be given to the inquisition, chiefly because the land of Ireland ought to be governed by the laws and customs used and approved in the kingdom. Having, moreover, learnt from persons worthy of credit that in the K.'s court in Ireland many judgments were delivered by justiciaries of the K.'s predecessors and of the K. himself altogether contrary to the custom aforesaid, the K. commands Stephen and Richard to search the Rolls of justiciaries in the K.'s treasury or elsewhere, and certify under seal of the Exchequer of Dublin, any process of plea in which by judgment this custom was approved in favour of the chief lords, or annulled against them. Witness, R. de Hengham. Westminster.

Certificate of Stephen Bishop of Waterford and Richard of Exeter. Having as directed searched the justiciaries Rolls, they had found that before Alexander of Nottingham and his associates, justices itinerant at Cashel, on the morrow of All Souls, a. r. 52, Hen. III. [Nov. 3, 1267], Roger Andrew and Rosamond his wife, by their attorney, demand against Matthew le Power and Dionisia his wife, the custody of the manor of Cloneth and 40 acres of land in Kilmerothan which belong to them, because Adam Christopher held that manor and land in socage, and because the said Rosamond is his next heir; Matthew for himself, and Dionisia by her attorney, come and say that Roger and Rosamond ought not to have the custody because the Bishop of Lismore, lord of that fee, formerly had the custody of the manor and land of Adam Christopher while under age, and that Adam when he came of age rendered to the bishop homage for that land, which he held by homage and service in socage; wherefore they say that the custody does not belong to the said Roger and Rosamond, although she is Adam's next heir, asserting that the custody belongs to them, because the land is held by homage and service; all the magnates claim a right to such custodies. As Matthew and Dionisia cannot deny that Adam held the land in socage and that Rosamond is his next heir, judgment that Roger and Rosamond recover the said custody and damages.

Afterwards before the K. and his Council judgment was delivered as follows:—Because it appears by the record aforesaid sent by the justiciary of Ireland that in a similar case persons notwithstanding homage rendered have recovered the custody of lands by judgment of the court of Ireland, which judgment agrees with the law hitherto used in England, and because the law ought to be one and the same in England 'and Ireland, it is considered that Amabilia recover seisin of the custody of the manor of Kyneshale, to hold until the age of John son of John Comyn, together with the issues, &c. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 93, Rot. 7; and Edw. I., No. 94, Rot. 4; about 35 folios.]

Trinity. 59. Mem. Stephen Bishop of Waterford, having by order of the K. come before the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer at Westminster, to render his account of all his receipts as treasurer in Ireland, it appeared to the barons that his account was so insufficient and suspicious that it was not by any means to be admitted. A view nevertheless was made of the account from Michaelmas at the end of a. r. 6 for a. r. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13, until Sunday next before the feast of the Apostles Philip and James [April 29, 1285]. According to this view he owed to the K. 33,399*l.* 15*s.* 5½*d.*, whereof there were put in view against him 7,656*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* of divers payments at the K.'s Irish Mint, and other payments not testified by the chamberlains of the Exchequer as receipt of Ireland, whereof he did not show a warrant, and for which there is no charge elsewhere. There are moreover 2,897*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.*, whereof he is charged in his account in three particulars, of amounts called dividends, of the farms of Tassagard, and other amounts. These he said were contained in his particulars of receipt, which is apparently not credible, for the particulars do not agree; and 511*l.* 9*s.* 3½*d.* of items paid out of the K.'s Irish treasure in a. r. 9, and not allowed to him in his account aforesaid, because his Roll testifies that these payments were not made out of the K.'s moneys; and 9,065*l.* 10*s.* 2½*d.* of items paid for expenses of the K. in Wales, whereof particulars are contained in a schedule appendant to the Roll, which payment was after the audit of the account, he doubtfully alleging that these particulars were not contained among his other payments; and 32*l.* and ½ mark which he paid into the K.'s wardrobe by the hands of John de Candoure without writ, as he says. All these being put in view he owed to the K. 13,235*l.* 2*s.* 10½*d.*

The payment thereof being adjourned before the K. at Chichester the bishop personally appeared, and the foregoing statement having been made by John de Kirkeby, the treasurer, before the K. and his Council, the said treasurer delivered Stephen Bishop of Waterford to the marshal, according to law and custom of the Exchequer, that the K. might do his pleasure thereupon.

There were then present in a grange outside Chichester, in the autumn, a. r. 13, with the K., Anthony Bishop of Durham, Robert Bishop of Bath, Otho de Grandison, the said John de Kirkeby, Philip de Wileby, Richard de Brus, and many others. [Memoranda, Q.R., 13 Edw. I., No. 11, Rot. 14.]

Trinity. 60. Brother Stephen de Fulburn, Bishop of Waterford, the K.'s treasurer in Ireland, puts in his place Roger Bretun, clerk, to render his Irish account, to charge and discharge him, and to do everything regarding his account which he, if present, should himself do. The bishop ratifies whatever Roger shall do in his name in the premises. [Memoranda, Q.R., 12–13 Edw. I., Rot. 10; and 13 Edw. I., Rot. 11.]

May 21. 62. The Abbot of Deeleye to the K. The K. having given him power to receive the attorneys of Emeline who was the wife of Hugh de Aston, in a plaint before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, by the K.'s writ, between the said Emeline, plaintiff, and Ralph of Norwich, tenant, of 1 carucate of land and 9 marcates of rent in Balymon' and Balybocher, he had received as her attorneys Hugh Oglawth and Adam Oglauth. Derleye. Monday after the feast of St. Dunstan, a. r. 13. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 39.]

May 22. 63. Letters of protection until Christmas ensuing for John Wogan, about by the K.'s licence to proceed to Ireland. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 20.]

May 23. 64. The K. at the instance of Walter L'Enfant grants to Philip Cinurghethan, Simon and John his brothers, Irishmen, that during their lives they may use English laws in Ireland. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 19.]

[About May 25.] 65. Letters of protection for 2 years for Nicholas de Verdun, about by the K.'s licence to proceed to Ireland. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 19.]

May 25. 66. Ordinance regarding contributions exacted for articles thrown overboard vessels enforced from the Barons of the Cinque Ports by Gregory de Rokesleye and Henry le Waleys, citizens of London, and other English, Irish, Gascon, and Welsh merchants. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 18.]

May 25. 67. Jordan de Sakeville, remaining by licence in England, attorned before the K. Jordan of Yarmouth and Walter de la Wesel in all pleas and plaints in Irish courts. Grant that they or either of them may make attorneys for Jordan in the K.'s Chancery of Ireland. To endure for 2 years. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 19.]

May 30. 71. Letters of attorney in Ireland, under the name of David de Offington, for Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, remaining by licence in England. To endure for 3 years. Westminster. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 19.]

May 30. 72. Pope Honorius [IV.] to the K. On the death of John Archbishop of Dublin, the chapters of the Holy Trinity and St. Patrick, Dublin, to whom the election of an archbishop of that province is said to belong, met, and having unanimously elected as archbishop, John de Sanford, then Dean of St. Patrick's, he was presented by specially constituted proctors to Pope Martin [IV.], predecessor of Pope Honorius. The elect appeared before the Apostolic See, and he and the proctors prayed confirmation of the election. Examiners having been named, difficulties occurred which appeared likely to protract the matter of the election; the church of Dublin incurred expense which the elect was desirous of preventing, and Pope Martin having died and Pope Honorius having succeeded him, the elect voluntarily resigned into the hands of the latter his right under the election. The Pope considering the long distance which separates the church of Dublin from the court of Rome, and the great expense and labour which would be thereby incurred if he remitted the election to the chapters already named, vivâ voce granted power to the elect and 5 other canons of the church of the Holy Trinity and St. Patrick, then present, to elect on this occasion an Archbishop of Dublin. The elect and the 5 canons having proceeded by way of scrutiny in the election, the Pope on investigating their votes learnt that the elect had given his vote to John of Nottingham, canon of St. Patrick's, while the remaining 5 had voted for the elect. John of Nottingham, who was one of the canons, on his own behalf and that of the others who had agreed in the election, elected the elect as Archbishop of Dublin, and on demand of the canons published the election in the presence of the Pope and his brethren. The Pope deeming this election canonically made of a fit person as canonical, confirms it by counsel of his brethren, and appoints the elect as Archbishop of Dublin, praying and exhorting the K. to take into his favour both the elect and the church committed to his care. St. Peter's. The 3rd of the kalends of June in the 1st year of the Pope's pontificate. [Liber. A., Chapter House, fo. 66.]

Aug. 10. 134. Protection for 3 years in England for Walter de Yvithorn, about by the K.'s licence to proceed to Ireland. Basingstoke. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 7.]

Aug. 10. 135. Protection for 1 year in England for Thomas Pote, about by the K.'s licence to proceed to Ireland with Thomas de Clare. Basingstoke. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 7.]

Aug. 15. 136. Writ of Liberate to the treasurer and chamberlains of Dublin, for payment to Stephen Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, from Sunday next before the feast of the Apostles Sts. Philip and James, a. r. 13 [April 25, 1285], of 500*l.* a year so long as he shall be justiciary. Amesbury. [Liberate, 13 Edw. I., m. 3.]

Aug. 16. 137. The K. gives power to Stephen Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, J[ohn] elect of Dublin, Thomas de Clare, and Geoffrey de Geneville, to let the K.'s waste lands in Connaught in the district of Roscommon, and to enfeoff men thereof, as in their discretion they may think most conducive to the K.'s advantage. The K. will cause charters of feoffment to be made to those to whom they shall let lands in the wastes aforesaid. Amesbury. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 7.]

Aug. 17. 138. Protection in Ireland for 2 years for William de Caune, remaining by licence in England. Amesbury. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 6.]

Aug. 23. 139. The K. notifies to his bailiffs in Ireland that Richard de Bosco, remaining by licence in England, had attorned before the K. William Lagheles in all pleas and plaints in Irish courts. Grant that William may make attorneys for Richard in the K.'s court of Ireland. Clarendon. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 6.]

[About 1285, before Sept. 5.] 140. Petition of the clergy of Meath to the K. Had shown to the K.'s Council the grievances and losses inflicted on them by the justiciary of Ireland since their bishopric had been in the hand and protection of the K., and the justiciary had answered that in truth they had been aggrieved against the K.'s command, and against the K.'s peace. They therefore pray the K. as they are under his protection that he will command 2 men of note [prudes homes] in Ireland, to defend and maintain them in the state in which they were in when Thomas de St. Leger, their elect, passed to the court of Rome, by the K.'s licence; to redress the damage done to them against the K.'s command and the K.'s peace, and to save them from future grievances. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, 531, T. G. 11,953, m. 10.]

[About Sept.] 141. John de Sanford to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells, Chancellor of England, praying him to aid Thomas de St. Leger, elect of Meath, in forwarding his affairs in the K.'s court, and to write to those known to him at the court of Rome, whither Thomas is proceeding, to assist him in regard to those affairs. [Royal Letters, 2044.]

[About Sept. 5.] 142. [The Archdeacon of Meath] to the Bishop of Bath and Wells. Thomas de St. Leger, their elect of Meath, had come to the court, with letters of the clergy of Meath, to present himself to the K., to obtain the royal assent according to custom to his election, and to pray letters to the Pope touching its confirmation, because the Archbishop of Armagh, by whom it ought to be confirmed, had been made incapable by sentence of excommunication long since passed against him by the bishop's delegates. On account of injuries and grievances inflicted upon them by the same archbishop, they had appealed to the apostolic see against him, and had sent proctors to the court of Rome to plead against him. Wherefore he ought to be held suspected in all matters touching their elect and their church. They know that without regard for law or reason he would willingly oppress them and subvert the rights of their church. The Irish are hostile to the English and cease not to disturb their peace. Those who govern do not know how to conduct themselves with modesty. They always strive with tirannical domination to tread upon those subject to them. Wherefore he prays the bishop to come to the aid of their elect and himself by directing letters of the K. and of the bishop himself to H. of Evesham, by the title of St. Laurence in Lucina, cardinal priest, and his other friends and proctors in the court of Rome, praying them to promote and defend the affairs of the elect and of the clergy of Meath. Prays pardon for so confidently writing to the bishop, as it seems to him that by reason of the treaty formerly contracted between the bishop and the church of Meath the writer ought to have recourse to the latter to promote the affairs of that church and of its clergy. [Indorsed] J. de Kenlegh. [Royal Letters, 2042.]

Sept. 10. 143. The K. considering the lengthy service of Robert de St. Edmund commands S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, and the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, to cause him to have allowance in his debts for all the time during which he remained in the K.'s service, and to cause him to have such reasonable terms for discharging the remainder as he may be able to meet without lowering his position. Winchester. [Close, 13 Edw. I., m. 3.]

Sept. 22. 144. The K. assigns Stephen Bishop of Waterford and Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, with some other subject of the K. associated by them, to audit the account of Robert Bagot for all the time during which he held by the K.'s order the place of treasurer in Ireland. Mandate accordingly. Wotton. [Pat., 13 Edw. I., m. 5.]

Sept. 27. 145. R[ ] de Hastinges to Robert Bishop of Bath and Wells, praying him to be favourable and kind in forwarding the affairs of Thomas de St. Leger, Archdeacon of Kells and elect of Meath, which he had brought before the K.'s court, and which he will explain vivâ voce. Dublin. Thursday before the feast of Michaelmas. [Royal Letters, 2043.]

Michaelmas. 146. Dublin. Milo de Cruys appeared against Richard de Cruys to hear judgment of an assise of Novel dissetsin between them and others, of tenements in Balimaglassan, Ireland. Richard did not come, and he had a day in the quinzaine of Michaelmas. Milo awaited him in court from the quinzaine until the 4th day of the month of Michaelmas. Wherefore Milo is without day, and Richard and his sureties are amerced. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 95, Rot. 23.]

Michaelmas. 147. Exemplification of deed of surrender by Robert de Muscegros to the K. of the castle of Bonratty, with the cantred of Traddery and the theodum of Ogormok. Ante Vol. II., No. 1203. [Memoranda, L.T.R., 13–14 Edw. I., Rot. 6.]

Michaelmas. 148. Philip Broun, attorney of John de Dumbleton, against the Abbot of St. Mary of Kells [Canleys] of a plea of land. Essoined until the quinzaine of Easter, wheresoever, &c. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 96, Rot. 12.]

Michaelmas. 149. Roll of receipt of the term of Michaelmas, a. r. 13–14. Tuesday next after the feast of Michaelmas same year [Oct. 2]. Leuckan [Lucan], rent of, 1 drum and 4 pairs of furred gloves by Henry Peche.

[8–13 Edw. I.] 166. Baurintin Wauter, of Lucca, Reyner and their companions, merchants, to the K., notifying that of the moneys which they owed to the tenth, Brother John de Darlington, Archbishop of Dublin, and those who were joined with him, had letters patent from them; their companions of Lucca had ratified and acknowledged the debt before the Pope; wherefore they pray the K. to protect them from disgrace and loss. Had paid to the Earl of Cornwall the amount of the tenth, as he demanded it on the K.'s part. All the old money which the K. had of the tenth had been renewed, and at every place where it was taken a note was kept of the deficiency between it and the new money. The companies of merchants of their country in England do them all the harm they covertly can, and contrived that the King of France ere he left Paris sent in quest of their companions and [persuaded] them to lend to the King 4,000 pounds Tournois; the Count of Flanders, by incitement of the same companies, also demands a loan. Wherefore they have need of the K.'s aid and pray him to write to the Count of Flanders on behalf of their company. Send all the new money found in the Tower of London; had received from Stephen de Penccestre 338*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.* of moneys from Canterbury, but had received no money on the K.'s behalf, neither do they know that it will come hereafter. But many orders for payment reach them on the K.'s part, and thank God! up to this time each has been well paid, as shall be henceforward if in their power. The K. lost 416 marks since their companions accounted to the Bishop of Clonfert for the tenth received in Ireland; the account is sent to the court of Rome. The Bishop of Clonfert has by violence and in spite of their companions caused the 416 marks to be restored to him. They hear that the tenth of Ireland is as readily paid to the K. as that of England. Pray that the money may be restored to their companions. [Royal Letters, 3709, Norman French. Defaced in parts.]

[13 Edw. I.] 167. Recognizance by Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, to William de Henley, Prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England, for 100 marks payable at mid Lent next ensuing. Easter. 210. Ireland. Writ of Certiorari to Thomas de Weylaund in a suit before him and his associates, justices of the Common Pleas, 1286. between the Abbot of Malmsbury and Amabilia who was the wife of John Comyn, that she should surrender to the abbot the custody of the land and heir of John Comyn.

By the record and process sent it appears that John father of the said John held of the abbot 1 hide of land in Walcote in the county of Wilts by homage and service, and by scutage of 40*s.* and 18*s.* a year in money; the abbot was in seisin of this homage and service by the hands of John; that therefore the custody and marriage of John the son belong to him, but that Amabilia detains them from him, and that therefore he is damnified to the amount of 100*l.*, &c.

Amabilia comes, defends the injury, and says that she ought not to surrender the custody, for she says that John the father held by knight service of the Prior of the Holy Trinity, Dublin, lands in Ireland whereof his ancestors had been previously enfeoffed by the prior's predecessors before he held the land of Walcote, and that the prior had by judgment recovered the tenements before Ralph de Hengham and his associates, justices, to hold until John's full age; wherefore she says that if she surrenders the heir to the abbot, the prior would hold the tenements in Ireland beyond the age of the heir to the value of the marriage; and she demands judgment whether she ought to surrender the heir until it had been discussed to which of them the custody belongs.

After a long pleading Ralph de Hengham testifies that Amabilia had previously impleaded the Prior of Dublin of the custody of the lands of the said John Comyn in Ireland, because John his father had held the lands in socage; that afterwards it appeared in the K.'s court, before the said Ralph, that John held his lands in Ireland of the prior by homage, which according to the law of Ireland gives marriage, and that therefore the prior, by judgment of the court, retained the premises until the said John's age. Wherefore the justiciary was commanded to summon the prior to appear in 3 weeks of Michaelmas to prosecute his right to the custody and marriage of the said John, and to inquire by what services John's ancestors had held the tenements of the prior, when they were enfeoffed, &c. Afterwards the justiciary was commanded to summon the prior to appear at the suit of Sir Henry de Lou and Nicholas de Houede, Knights, and an inquisition was taken at Dublin, before Stephen Bishop of Waterford, treasurer of Ireland, by the K.'s writ, by command of Robert de Ufford, justiciary of Ireland, on the vigil of St. Margaret the Virgin, a. r. 9 [July 19, 1281], by Sir Geoffrey le Bret, Sir Jordan Locard, Sir Henry le Lou, and Sir John Dardis, Knights, John de Wycumbe, Ulfran de Berneval, John and Geoffrey de Clundon, Michael de Bodenham, Andrew Tirel, William de Fubble, and William Abbot, Who Say that the ancestors of said John Comyn held their tenements in Ireland of the prior's predecessors by homage to be rendered therefor to the prior, and for a yearly rent of 5 marks. payable to him until the time of John Comyn, ancestor of John lately living, at which time a contention arose between John and the prior respecting these tenements, and John, in order to appease it by fine in the K.'s court, before justices of Ireland, raised the rent of 5 marks to one of 100*s.* with homage; and they Say that homage alone according to custom of Ireland gives custody and marriage.

After further pleading Amabilia says that John Comyn, her late husband, always dwelt in Ireland, so that he never paid socage to the abbot's predecessors, and if scutage had been levied of his tenants, it was by extortion and against his will.

Verdict that the predecessors of the abbot took scutage of John's ancestors and of John's tenants, whenever it accrued, by John's will and not by extortion.

Judgment that the abbot go without day, and that Amabilia take nothing by the record, but be amerced for a false claim. The sheriff of Warwick is ordered to distrain Amabilia to surrender to the abbot John's son and heir. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., 99 Rot., 28 dors.]

Easter. 211. Ireland. Dublin. Thomas de Radburgh', attorney of Roger Waspayl, demands against William de Montchensy, whom Thomas de la Cornere vouches to warranty and who vouches, of a plea of land whereof he had been arraigned by Thomas de Haddon'.

John le Knight, another attorney in the same, by John le Faukener.

John Godwym, a third attorney in the same, by Hugh de la Hyde.

One month from Michaelmas wheresoever, &c.

No jury comes. Therefore writ of Habeas corpus to sheriff. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 100, Rot. 6.]

Easter. 212. The justiciary of Ireland had been commanded to summon Thomas de Clare to appear on this day to acquit Cecilia who was the wife of John de Muscegros of 120*l.*, which the K. claimed of her in his court before the justices, assigned for custody of the Jews out of two thirds of the manor of Alvescote, held by her in dower. Robert le Muscegros, son and heir of the said John, had this manor in exchange for certain lands of the inheritance of Robert which Thomas holds in Ireland. Thereupon the K.'s protection for Thomas until Michaelmas, a. r. 15 was produced. Wherefore the justices assigned for custody of the Jews were commanded meanwhile to supersede the demand against Cecilia. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 99, Rot. 7 dors.]

Easter. 213. The Abbot of St. Mary of Kells had demanded in right of his church against John de Dumbelton before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, 1½ carucate of land in Ardmyn and Ballygodan, in which John had not entry save by Laurence de Somercote, to whom Laurence de Alintlegh had leased them, who thereof unjustly disseised Florence formerly Abbot of St. Mary of Kells, the abbot's predecessor, after the last return from Ireland of King John, the K.'s grandfather. Thereupon the abbot says that Florence Abbot of Kells, his predecessor, was seised in his demesne as of fee in right of his church in the time of Henry III. by taking of esplees, as in oblations and other obventions to the value of, &c.; and that such is his right he offers to prove. And John comes and defends his right, &c., and says that he is not bound to answer to this writ, because he says that the abbot aforesaid is excommunicated, and he produces letters testifying that he is so, as follows :—

Letters of William Barbedor, official of Meath, the see being vacant, and of Geoffrey of Oxford, Archdeacon of Kells, in the church of Meath, warning the faithful more strictly to avoid Maurice who bears himself as Abbot of St. Mary near Kells, and whom they had excommunicated 2 years and more previously. Sealed with the official seals of the diocese of Meath, the see being vacant, and of the archdeaconry of Kells in that diocese. Aug. 14, 1285.

And the abbot aforesaid produces an instrument, as follows :—

Letters of Nicholas, by divine mercy Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of Ireland, notifying that whereas John de Kenley, who bears himself as Archdeacon of Meath, Thomas de St. Leger, Archdeacon of Kells in the church of Meath, and William Barbedor, Geoffrey and Henry of Oxford, their officials, had been bound by his authority 3 years previously in the bonds of excommunication, they could not bind others in similar bonds. The archbishop therefore denounces as of no effect the sentences of excommunication, suspension, and interdict which they had passed against the person of Maurice Abbot of the Monastery of St. Mary of Kells. Inesken [Inishkeen]. Holy Thursday [April 11] 1286.

Afterwards the said John comes and defends, &c., and says that he is parson of the church of St. Columb, to which the said tenements belong in right of that church, and that he has that church of the collation and gift of Hugh formerly Bishop of Meath, the true patron, who is dead, and the custody of which during vacancy belongs to the K. He therefore prays whether he ought to answer the abbot without the patron aforesaid. Wherefore the plaint is without day. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 99, Rot. 12, and No. 100, Rot. 1.]

Easter. 214. The same abbot demands against the said John de Dumbelton 2½ carucates of land in Balylosty and Athlarg', which he claims to hold in capite of the K. in right of his church.

And John comes and says that he ought not to answer this writ, and says that he is parson of the church of St. Columb of Kells, to which the tenements belong in right of his church, which church he has of the gift and collation of Hugh formerly Bishop of Meath, the true patron, who is dead, and the custody whereof, the see being vacant, belongs to the K. He therefore prays judgment as above. Wherefore the plaint is without day. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 99, Rot. 12, and No. 100, Rot. 1.]

chapter thereof. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster. [Pat., 14 Edw. I., m. 8.]

June 28. 254. The K. to Stephen Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland. The Dean and chapter of Arrofert [Ardfert] having by letters patent notified vacancy in their church by the death of John late Bishop of Ardfert, and prayed licence to elect, the K. grants licence accordingly, commanding them to elect a bishop who shall be devout, fit to rule their church, and useful and faithful to the K. and to Ireland. The K. wishing to spare labour and expense to the dean and chapter, of special grace grants to them and gives power to the justiciary on election made to give the royal assent in lieu of the K. signifying to the metropolitan to do what is his in this matter; and on confirmation to take from the elect the fealty due to the K. and restore the temporalities, having first received from the elect letters under his seal and that of the chapter that this grace shall not tend to the K.'s prejudice nor be converted into a precedent. Westminster [Pat., 14 Edw. I., m. 8.]

July 2. 256. Letters of attorney in England under the name of Brother John de Radelegh, monk, for Peter Abbot of the Port of St. Mary of Dunbrody, about to proceed to foreign parts. To endure for 1 year. Westminster.

Similar letters of attorney in Ireland under the names of the same Brother John and William Deyncourt, for the same abbot. To endure as above. [Pat., 14 Edw. I., m. 8.]

July 2. 257. Letters of attorney in Ireland under the names of Roger de Ryvall and David le Walays for Roger Bygot, Earl of Norfolk and Marshal of England, remaining by licence in that country. To endure for 2 years. Westminster. [Pat., 14 Edw. I., m. 8.]

[July 12.] 258. Pope Honorius IV. to the K. The church of Meath having long ago become vacant by the death of Hugh Bishop of Meath, the archdeacon and clergy of that diocese, to whom by ancient, approved, and hitherto peaceably observed custom the election of a bishop has belonged, met on an appointed day and elected John de Dumbleton, rector of Kells, as Bishop of Meath. As the rector refused to consent to the election, the archdeacon and clergy [again] met, and, proceeding by way of scrutiny, chose three of the clergy to scrutinize the votes of all, according to the form of the constitution general of Council. The three having secretly and minutely scrutinized the votes of themselves and the others published them, when it appeared that the larger and sounder [sanior] portion of the clergy had given their assent to Thomas de St. Leger, then Archdeacon of Kells, as elect; and so one of the three, in the name of himself and of all the others, and by their mandate, elected Thomas as Bishop of Meath. But subsequently the Archbishop of Armagh, to whom as metropolitan the election had been presented, unduly refused, as is said, to confirm it. The Apostolic See was appealed to on the part of the elect, and the latter had commenced his journey for this purpose when this archbishop, pretending that by canonical institution it devolved on him to provide the church of Meath with a bishop, appointed by his own authority and consecrated Walter the bishop, then Dean of Waterford, as Bishop of Meath. Afterwards Pope Martin IV., predecessor of Honorius, assigned the count, by the title of Sts. Marcellin and Peter cardinal priest, to examine the matter; and at length as well the elect as the said Walter, wishing to save the church of Meath from litigation, spontaneously and freely resigned into the Pope's hands all right, if they had acquired any, under the election and provision aforesaid. The Pope having received this resignation thought with watchful mind on the ordination of the church of Meath, and desiring to place over it a prelate by whom it might be healthfully governed both in spiritual and temporal matters, turned his attention to the elect aforesaid, who for science of letters, gravity of manners, spotlessness of life, and other merits had been commended by the testimony of many persons worthy of credit. The Pope therefore by counsel of his brethren and of the plenitude of apostolic power appoints the elect as Bishop of Meath, and prays the K. out of reverence for the Pope and the Apostolic See to restore to him the temporalities [regalia] of that church, said to be held by the K. during its vacancy. Tivoli. The 4th of the ides of July, in the second year of the Pope's pontificate. [Papal Bulls and Briefs, Honorius IV.; and Liber A., Chapter House, fo. 44.]

July 18. 259. The K. to S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, justiciary of Ireland. Although the K. had directed him to pay at certain terms for works of and castles of Wales the sum of money which he owed to the K., yet he had not made any payment at any of those terms, nay he had subtracted a portion from each payment. The K. is much astonished and moved at this; wherefore the K. commands Stephen, as he fears the K.'s indignation and the immense loss which might accrue by failure in payment, to discharge arrears on sight of these letters, and to observe the future terms. If any loss should accrue from his delay the K. will have recourse to him therefor so far as his means allow. He shall therefore so conduct himself that the K. and himself shall incur no loss by his deficiency. Witness the K. Paris. [Chart. and Pat., &c., 14 Edw. I., No. 80, m. 2.]

July 26. 260. Letters of attorney in Ireland under the names of Henry Leffayn, clerk, and Stephen Fraunceys, for Joan who was the wife of Theobald le Boteler, remaining by licence in England. To endure for 3 years. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster.

Sept. 10. 264. Robert de Turville, Master of the Templars, to whom all Templar houses as well in Ireland as in Scotland and England are subject, being prevented by infirmity from attending to his defence in various pleas in England, the K. of special grace grants to him that Brothers John of Offington and Richard of Hoghton, whom Robert has attorned in English courts, may make attorneys for him in those courts. To endure until Easter next ensuing. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster. [Pat., 14 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Michaelmas. 265. Ireland. Nicholas Bacun had at another time before the K.'s justices of the Common Pleas, in the court of the liberty of Trim, demanded against Milo de Crues 1 carucate of land in Ballymaglassan in which Milo had not entry, save after the disseisin which Hugh de Lacy, formerly Earl of Ulster, made against William Bacun, father of the said Nicholas. them, between Roger Whyterel, plaintiff, and William Whyterel, whom Alice Whyterel vouches to warranty, and who warrants, of 20 acres of land in Balimadich'; and regarding the record and process of another plaint had before the said justices, between John Whyterel, plaintiff, and the said William Whyterel, whom the said Alice vouches to warranty, and who warrants, of a moiety of 1 carucate of land in English Colp. The justices sent the records, which are as follows:—

Roger Whyterel demands against Alice who was the wife of Robert Whyterel, 20 acres of land in Ballymaduf, wherein Alice had not entry, save by Robert Whyterel, who demised them to her, and who unjustly disseised Roger thereof. And Alice comes and vouches to warranty William Whyterel, who warrants, and says that she is not bound to answer because she was seised of the land before the writ was obtained, and this the said Roger cannot deny. Wherefore it is considered that Roger take nothing by his writ, but shall be amerced for a false claim.—Pardoned because under age.

Item John Whyterel demands against the said Alice 50 acres of land in the English vill of Colp, in which she had not entry save by Robert Whyterel, who demised them to her and thereof unjustly disseised John. Alice comes and vouches the said William, who comes and warrants, and says that he is not bound to answer because he was seised of the land before the writ was obtained, which John cannot deny. Wherefore the said John shall take nothing by his writ, but shall be amerced for a false claim.—Pardoned because under age.

And the Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Irefand, was heretofore commanded to summon William to be before the K. in a month of Easter last past to hear what ought to be done according to law and custom of the kingdom. He did not come. Wherefore it is proceeded to judgment against him by default. And as it appears by inspection of the records, that the justices wrongfully proceeded to judgment, and quashed Roger's and John's writs, it is considered that everything that has been done by those judgments shall be annulled, and that the said Roger and John shall recover their estate. Mandate to the justices to summon William to be before the K. or his lieutenant, in 3 weeks of Easter. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 102, Rot. 33.]

1286. Michaelmas. 272. Exemplification of deed of surrender by Robert de Muscegros to the K. of the castle of Bunratty, the cantred of Traddery, and the Theodum of Ocormok. Ante Vol. II., No. 1203. [Memoranda Q.R., Edw. I., No. 12, Rot. 17.]

[Oct. 2.] 273. Bull of Pope Honorius [IV.] directed to the K. The church of Emly having become vacant by the death of David bishop thereof, and the Dean and chapter of Emly having met to substitute a bishop, the larger portion of the chapter decided to elect Adam, chancellor of that church, while the smaller portion postulated Philip Dean Carcaiensis [of Cork] as bishop. Afterwards, however, Pope Martin [IV.], the Pope's predecessor, on appeal from the Archbishop of Cashel, metropolitan of Emly, appointed the Bishop of Ostia as auditor between the parties. The chancellor aforesaid prosecuted his cause before the auditor, but the Dean died without doing so according to the constitution of Pope Nicholas [III.]. The Pope therefore by counsel of his brethren deprives the dean of any right which he had derived under the postulation, reserving the provision of a prelate; and desiring that a person should preside in the church [of

Emly] who could soundly govern it in spiritual and temporal matters, he had turned his eyes to William de Clifford, his chaplain, whose merits were from long experience not unknown to himself and his brethren. By advice therefore of the latter, the Pope appoints the said William to the church [of Emly] as bishop and pastor, and prays and exhorts the K. to restore without difficulty to the church of Emly the royalties stated to be held by the K. in time of vacancy. The Pope concludes by recommending to the K.'s favourable consideration both the bishop and the church committed to his care. Tivoli, the 6th of the nones of October. Roger Whyterel by his guardian appeared on the 4th day against William Whyterel, that he be here on that day to hear record and judgment of a plaint in the K.'s court before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, between the said Roger, plaintiff, and the said William, whom Alicia who was the wife of Robert Whyterel vouches to warranty, and who warrants, of 20 acres of land in Balymadich'; and of a plaint in the same court between John Whyterel, plaintiff, and the said William, whom the said Alicia vouches to warranty, and who warrants, of 50 acres of land in the English vill of Colp. And he did not come, &c. Judgment that there be taken into the K.'s hand of the land of said Roger to the value of, &c. And he was summoned to be before the K. wheresoever, &c. in the quinzaine of Michaelmas. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 105, Rot. 26 dors.]

Easter. 307. Ireland. Complaint of William de la Ryvere. William Whyterel having arraigned against him in the K.'s court before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, an assize of Mort d'Ancestor, of 98 acres of land in the new English vill of Colp, William de la Ryvere, produced before the justices letters of protection for 7 years; and it was therefore considered that the latter should thereof go without day until the end of the term. The K. for certain reasons caused the record and process to come before him. While the plea was pending before the K. the justices aforesaid caused the parties to be resummoned. Wherefore the K. commands S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, justiciary of Ireland, to send before him the record and process of the plea after the resummons; and to summon William Whyterel to be here. The justiciary sent the record but did not summon the latter; wherefore he is again ordered to summon him to be before the K. in the quinzaine of Michaelmas. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No 105, Rot. 26 dors.]

Easter. 308. Ireland. Milo de Crues appeared against Robert Fitz Richard de Crues, of a plea that he warrant to him one carucate of land in Ballymaglassan which Nicholas de Bakun claimed in the K.'s court before the K.'s justices at Dublin. He did not come. Judgment that there be taken of the said Robert's land to the value of, &c. And he was summoned to appear in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, wheresoever, &c. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 105, Rot. 30].

April 22. 310. The K. gives power to P[ ] Bishop of Cork to receive the attorneys of the mayor and bailiffs of the city of Cork whom they may attourn before the K. in a plaint in the K.'s court before Thomas Fitz John, Earl of Kildare, lieutenant of the justiciary of Ireland, by the K.'s writ, between the said mayor and bailiffs, and John Silvestre of Kilmehalok, Alan le Rede, John Pikard, Nigel Fitz Richard, John Clon, David Nel, John Husse, and James Minour, of this, that the latter had impeded the citizens of the city aforesaid in freely buying and selling by wholesale or retail their merchandise in the said town of Kilmehalok, as they had been wont to do from the foundation of their city. 1287. Quinzaine of Michaelmas.

342. Ireland. Milo de Crues appears against Robert Fitz Richard de Crues of a plea that he warrant to him 1 carucate of land in Ballymaglassan, which Nicholas de Bakun claims in the K.'s court before the K.'s justices at Dublin. He not having come the justiciary was ordered to take of his land to the value of, &c. The justiciary did nothing thereupon nor sent the writ. Wherefore he was again commanded to take of Robert's land to the value of, &c., and to summon him to be before the K. in the quinzaine of Easter wheresoever, &c. Thereupon Nicholas aforesaid says that Milo does not follow his suit, and demands judgment, &c. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 108, Rot. 6 dors.]

Oct. 15. 343. Letters of attorney in Ireland for three years under the name of Nicholas de Chiltham for Walter de Wym[burn], precentor of the church of St. Patrick's, Dublin. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster. [Pat., 15 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 15. 344. Protection for 2 years for Nicholas Fitz Walter of Cheltenham, about to depart for Ireland on the K.'s service. Witness, Earl Edmund. Westminster. [Pat., 15 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 17. 345. Letters of attorney in Ireland for 1 year under the names of Hugh de Streyle and Robert de Ryplingham for John Passelewe. Witness, Earl Edmund. Westminster. [Pat., 15 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 18. 346. Protection for 1 year for Hugh de Stredly, about by the K.'s licence to depart for Ireland. Witness, the Earl. Westminster. [Pat., 15 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 18. 347. Letters of attorney in Ireland for 2 years under the names of Hugh de Stretley and Robert Hod for Agnes de Vesey. Witness, Earl Edmund. Westminster. [Pat., 15 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 18. 348. Letters of attorney for 1 year under the names of Walter de Mentemor and Philip Sprigurnel for Hugh de Stretleye de Mentemor, about by licence to depart for Ireland. Witness, Earl Edmund. Westminster. [Pat., 15 Edw. I., m. 4.]

3 weeks of Michaelmas.

349. Plaint between William Whiterel and William de la Ryvere, of 98 acres of land in the new English vill of Colp, as before in No. 307. The K. had commanded the justiciary to send before the K. in 3 weeks of Easter the record and process of the plaint, and to summon William Whiterel to appear on the same day. The justiciary having sent the record, but not having summoned William, he was again commanded to do so. The justiciary then returned that he had summoned William Whiterel by William Begge, William Hamelyn, John Machunch, and John Long. On the day appointed William Whiterel did not come. Afterwards the K. sent his writ to Ralph de Hengham, tested at Dublin by S[tephen] Archbishop of

Tuam, justiciary of Ireland, Oct. 22, a. r. 15 [1287], and herein recited at length, stating that William Whiterel had been prevented by storm of the sea and contrary winds from appearing, and commanding Ralph to do what according to custom and law ought to be done in the premises. Wherefore the plaint aforesaid shall be in the same state as it was in in the quinzaine of Michaelmas. Mandate to the Archbishop to cause William de la Ryvere to appear before the K. in the quinzaine of Easter wheresoever, &c. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 105, Rot. 23.]

3 weeks of Michaelmas.

350. Mandate to the justiciary to take into the K.'s hand by view of lawful men of the K.'s county of Dublin of the land of William Whyterel, whom Alice who was the wife of Robert Whyterel vouches to warranty, and for default of the said William, to the value of 20 acres in Balymadych, which Roger Whyterel claimed against the said William in the K.'s court before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin. Mandate also to the justiciary to take into the K.'s hand by view of lawful men of the county aforesaid of the land of said William Whyterel, whom the same Alice vouches to warranty, for default of the said William, to the value of 50 acres of land in the English vill of Colp, which [John] Whyterel demanded in the said court against the said William Whyterel. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 108, Rot. 23.]

3 weeks of Michaelmas.

351. Ireland. Assize of Mort d'Ancestor before Robert Bagot and his associates, justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, arraigned by Robert de Haselore against Richard Fitz Geoffrey of Clahull, of 2 parts of 1 messuage and 80 acres of land in Balydermod and Stathoule. Afterwards Geoffrey de Clahull, whom the said Richard vouched to warranty against Robert, appeared and warranted and moreover alleged that the assize ought not to be taken because Robert and Nicholas de Haselore, his brother, by whose death he demanded the inheritance, were bastards and sons of a chaplain. To this Robert answers that he and Nicholas his brother had been lawfully begotten between William de Mutton and Lavinia his wife in the face of the church of Haselore in the bishopric of Worcester. Wherefore it was considered that Richard should go thereof without day, and that Robert should proceed as he might think proper, as the Bishop of Worcester had nothing in Ireland whereby he might be distrained to certify to the court in the premises. Mandate to the justices to send to the K. under their seals this record and process. Record sent and herein set out in full.

As the cognizance of this matter appertains to the ecclesiastical court, judgment as before.

Afterwards before the K. in 3 weeks of Michaelmas came the said Robert and the said Geoffrey. And the latter says as before that the said Robert is a bastard. Wherefore the Bishop of Worcester is commanded to call the parties before him, and after inquiry to certify thereupon to the K. in 3 weeks of Easter. The same day is given to Geoffrey in banco. Afterwards the Bishop of Worcester sent to the K. his certificate dated at Kemes, the nones of April [April 5] 1288, and herein set out in full, whereby he certified that he had taken an inquisition in the premises, which found that William de Mutton and Lavinia de Hesellore, father and mother of

Robert de Hesellore, here concerned, had 60 years ago at the door of the parish church of Hesellore per verba de præsonti mutually contracted matrimony, and that the accustomed solemnity had followed between them, William de Suthwell, chaplain of that church, celebrating mass in the usual way. They also Say that William de Mutton and Lavinia aforesaid, long after the celebration of the solemnity, begot in matrimony Robert de Hesellore here concerned, held him forth as their legitimately begotten son, and named and educated him as such. Robert de Hasellore now comes, but Geoffrey de Clahulle comes not, and it was testified that he was drowned. Robert aforesaid expressly says that this was not so, and therefore prays judgment.

As it appears by the certificate of the ecclesiastical court that Nicholas and Robert were born in lawful wedlock, judgment that if Geoffrey de Clahulle survives in 3 weeks after Easter, a. r. 16 [1288] Robert shall recover his seisin of the tenements against Richard, and the latter shall have of Geoffrey's land to the value of, &c. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 108, Rot. 24 dors.]

Oct. 24. 352. Letters of attorney in England for 1 year under the names of Thomas de Neville and Roger le Brun for Nicholas de Segrave, about by licence to proceed to Ireland. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster. [Pat., 15 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Nov. 12. 353. Lucy who was the wife of Guy son and heir of Amory de St. Amand attorned William de Strongeford and John Fitz Walter of Wrothwardin to receive in her name seisin of the dower accruing to her out of Amory's lands and tenements in Ireland. Mandate to S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, justiciary of Ireland, to receive William and John in Lucy's place. Witness, Earl Edmund. Westminster. [Pat., 15 Edw. I., m. 2.]

15 Edw. I. 354. Ireland. Robert Fitz Richard de Crus whom Milo de Crus vouches to warranty puts in his place Henry Cysel or Lucian de Weston against Nicholas Bacoun of a plea of land. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 108, Rot. 51.]

15 Edw. I. 355. Ireland. William Wyterel puts in his place John of Ireland or Bartholomew of Northampton against William de la Ryvere and John and Robert Whiterel, of a plea of land. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 108, Rot. 52.]

1287. [Dec. 5.] 356. Receipt to the use of J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, by Stephen de Olynton, his clerk, to Sir Nicholas de Clere, treasurer in Ireland, and the chamberlain, for 40*l.* sterling of money accruing from services. Dublin. Vigil of St. Nicholas, a. r. 16. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, J.P.R. 6055, No. 36.]

Dec. 7. 357. The K. gives power to Richard de Clare to receive for 2 years the attorneys of Elizabeth de Burgh, remaining in England, who was the wife of John de Burgh, in all pleas and plaints in courts of Ireland. Power to those attorneys to make attorneys for Elizabeth in the K.'s Chancery of Ireland. York. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 179, Bundle A.]

1287. Dec. 10. 358. Letters of protection in Ireland for 2 years for Ralph Pypard, remaining by licence in England. Witness, the Earl. Westminster. [Pat., 16 Edw. I., m. 18.]

[About 1287 ?] 359. Nicholas Archbishop of Armagh, primate of Ireland, to the K. Had received the K.'s letters praying him to cause to be denounced as excommunicated by himself and his suffragans within their dioceses, the Welsh malefactors and their partisans who had perpetrated depredations, homicides, burnings, and other enormities; is ready to fulfil the K.'s pleasure in regard to these and other matters likely to be serviceable to the kingdom. [Royal Letters, 1345.]

[About 1287 ?] 360. Thomas Fitz Maurice to R[obert] Bishop of Bath and Wells. Thanks the bishop for his counsel and aid so frequently given to him. On account of the Welsh war the Irish are elated beyond their wont; some have raised war, and others are ready to raise it; wherefore the magnates of Ireland have prayed him to go this winter to Ireland to resist the Irish with his small force in conjunction with them, lest the Irish should cause the evil they propose. Complying with their counsel and prayers and considering the danger, he cannot leave Ireland this winter to go to England to render his homage to his lord. As all his hope is in the bishop he prays his aid in procuring from his lord that the latter will name Easter next ensuing as the time for Thomas going to him to render homage, to satisfy him regarding his marriage or to marry according to his lord's will; and that his lord will meanwhile command the justiciary of Ireland to restore his inheritance; his age had been proved by special mandate. [Royal Letters, 1351.]

Alice comes before the said justices of Dublin and vouches to warranty William Whiterel, who warrants. Mandate to the barons to cause to be inrolled on the Rolls of the Exchequer, the transcript of the said deed which the K. had caused to be extracted from the Rolls of Chancery, and which he sends enclosed, and to cause the contents to be fulfilled. 1288. bishop of Tuam, of a plea of land. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 113, Rot. 33 dors.]

Trinity. 396. Mandate to the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, to send before the K. the record and process of an agreement made in that court between S[tephen] then Bishop of Waterford, but now Archbishop of Tuam, plaintiff, and R[ichard] Bishop of Lismore, tenant, of the manors of the vill of More de Dunemaghmor, Mothyl, Armordeghan Kylmolasse and Kylharmedyn, with all original writs, &c., relating thereto.

The justices sent the record, which is as follows:—

Pleas at Dublin before the justices of the Common Pleas, on Saturday next after the Purification of Blessed Mary, a. r. 9 [Feb. 8, 1280–1].

Tipperary. Brother Stephen, Bishop of Waterford, appeared against Richard Bishop of Lismore, of a plea that he restore to him the manor of the vill of More de Dounathmor' and the manor of Ardfynan, which he claims as the right of his church of Waterford, and into which Richard had not entry save after a disseisin which Robert formerly Bishop of Lismore made against Robert formerly Bishop of Waterford, Stephen's predecessor; and thereupon Stephen complains that the Bishop of Lismore disseises him. The latter does not come and was summoned. Wherefore the sheriff was ordered to take the manors into the K.'s hand and to summon the Bishop of Lismore to be at Dublin in the quinzaine of Easter to answer, &c.

Waterford. Brother Stephen, Bishop of Waterford, appeared against Richard Bishop of Lismore, of a plea that he restore to him the manor of Mothyl, which he claims as the right of his church of Waterford, and into which the Bishop of Lismore had not entry save as before. The Bishop of Lismore not having come, the sheriff was ordered, &c., as before.

Pleas there in the quinzaine of Easter, a. r. 9 [1281].

Tipperary, Waterford. Brother Stephen, Bishop of Waterford, demands against Richard Bishop of Lismore, the manors of the vill of More of Dofnachmor, of Ardfynan and Mothil, which he claims as before, &c. The Bishop of Lismore comes; and the Bishop of Waterford says that the former had made default, to wit, on Saturday next after the Purification of Blessed Mary, and on the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th days, so that a writ of judgment issued, &c. And the Bishop of Lismore says that he did not commit a default, because he did not hold those manors which were in the K.'s hand owing to vacancy in the see. The Bishop of Waterford answers that the Bishop of Lismore had committed a default upon a default, as appears by the record and process of the plea, and that he is excluded from any curing of that default, and thereupon he prays judgment.

Waterford. The Bishop of Waterford also demands against the Bishop of Lismore the manors of Ardmordeglan, Kilmelasse, and Kilbermedin. The Bishop of Lismore comes and concord was made between the parties as follows:—

The Bishop of Waterford quit claims for his life to the Bishop of Lismore all his right and claim in the manors of the vill of More de Dofnachmor, Mothill, Ardmordeglan, Kilmelasse, and Kilbermeden, and for this quit-claim the Bishop of Lismore grants for himself and his church to the Bishop of Waterford the manor of Ardfynan, to hold for the life of the latter. Moreover the Bishop of Lismore grants to the Bishop of Waterford for his life an annual rent of 50*l.* payable out of the manor of Lismore, with power of distress and reversion to the Bishop of Lismore. Either party infringing this concord shall give to the other party 1,000 pounds of silver. Power to the sheriff to levy this amount. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 113, Rot. 27 dors.]

June 10. 397. The K. notifies to William de Beverley, his Chancellor of Ireland, that he gives him power to receive the attorneys of Geoffrey de Geynville, Matilda his wife, and Joan who was the wife of William de Mandeville, whom they should attorn before him in pleas and plaints in courts of England; and that those attorneys may make other attorneys in the K.'s court for the said Geoffrey, Matilda, and Joan for 1 year. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 51.]

June 10. 398. Letters of attorney until the feast of All Saints next ensuing under the name of Roger Letery for Edmund Lovel in Ireland, remaining by licence in England. Witness, the Earl. Westminster. [Pat., 16 Edw. I., m. 13.]

June 10. 399. The Prioress and convent of nuns of Clonard to the K. Their monastery being vacant by the resignation of Borgenilda, lately elected abbess, pray for licence to elect. Send Brother John, canon of the house of St. Peter of Clonard, bearer of these presents, to obtain this licence; and further urgently pray the K. that in order to spare them labour and expense he will command his escheator of Ireland to receive fealty in lieu of the K. from the elect, and on confirmation to restore their small temporalities, of special grace. Clonard. [Royal Letters, 2836.]

Their convent having become vacant, they had by the K.'s licence elected their sister, the Lady Burgenylda, as abbess of their house. Wherefore they send Brother Robert, canon of the house of St. Mary of Navan, in the diocese of Meath, praying the K.'s grace and the royal assent. They further pray that the K. will command the justiciary to restore the temporalities when the election shall have been confirmed. [Royal Letters, No. 2022.]

[Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 22, m. 1–4.]

1288. Michaelmas. 435. Ireland. Roger Whiterel and Alice who was the wife of Robert Whiterel appeared against William Whiterel, whom Alice vouches to warranty, and who warrants, of a plea of 20 acres of land in Balymadich. William did not come. Afterwards he put himself on a jury which was taken before the K.'s justiciary, Dublin. Let judgment be taken of William's land to the value of, &c., and let him be summoned before the K. in 3 weeks of Easter wheresoever, &c. to hear judgment. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 115, Rot. 32 dors.]

Michaelmas. 436. John Whiterel and Alice who was the wife of Robert Whiterel, whom Alice vouches to warranty, and who warrants, of a plea of 50 acres of land in the English vill of Colp. He does not come and is summoned before the K. as above. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 115, Rot. 32 dors.]

Michaelmas. 437. Ireland. William de la Ryvere puts in his place Henry of Manchester or William Fitz Thomas against William Wyterel, of a plea of land. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 115, Rot. 57.]

Michaelmas. 438. Ireland. John de Saunford against Joan who was the wife of John de Brun, of a plea of dower, by Robert de Ashebourn. In the quinzaine of Easter, wheresoever, &c. By surety of Bartholomew le Crun. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 116, Rot. 2.]

[Sept. 30.] 439. S[tephen] de Codenovre, vicegerent of J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, Dean of Penkridge, to the K. Notifies that Sir Richard de

Loges, knight of the counties of Stafford and Warwick, of the jurisdiction of the deanery aforesaid, and parishioner thereof, had on account of his manifest and manifold contumacy and offences been bound in the bonds of excommunication. He had contumaciously persisted for 40 days and more in contemning the church of Clones. Wherefore the writer prays the K. to issue the customary letters, so that the kingly power may supply the inability of the church. For greater assurance he had caused the common seal of the chapter of Penkridge to be put to these presents. Penkridge. Morrow of St. Michael the Archangel. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 50.]

Oct. 1. 440. Letters of attorney in Ireland for 1 year under the name of Rustikelus Bernardi of Florence for James Bernard, merchant of Florence, remaining by licence in England. Witness, the Earl. Westminster. [Pat., 16 Edw. I., m. 6.]

Oct. 14. 441. Protection for 1 year for William de Odingeseles, remaining in Ireland on the K.'s service by the K.'s order. Witness, the Earl. Westminster. [Pat., 16 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 16. 442. Letters of licence to elect, by Brother Robert, canon of Navan, for the Prior and convent of the house of St. Mary of Novan [Navan], who had announced to the K. the resignation of Brother Richard, their late abbot. Westminster. [Pat., 16 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 16. 443. The K. to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, locum tenens of the justiciary of Ireland. The Prioress and nuns of the abbey of Clonard, in the diocese of Meath, having by the customary licence elected as abbess Burgenilda nun of that house, to which election the royal assent had been given, the K. in order to spare labour and expense to the nuns grants and gives power to the archbishop, if the election be canonically conferred, to take fealty from the elect and restore the temporalities, having first received from the elect letters under her seal and that of the chapter that this grace shall not tend to the K.'s prejudice or disherison, nor be converted into a precedent. Witness, the Earl. Westminster. [Pat., 16 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 16. 444. The K. having given the royal assent to the election lately made in the conventual church of Clonard of Burgenilda nun there as abbess of that house, the same is signified to Thomas Bishop of Meath in order that he may do what is his in this matter. Witness, the Earl. Westminster. [Pat., 16 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Oct. 20. 445. The K. to Stephen de Codenovre, commissary of J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, dean of the free chapel of Penkridge. On behalf of Richard de Loges, whom at Stephen's denunciation as excommunicated and contemning the keys of the church, the K. had caused to be judged by his body by the sheriff of Warwick, until he should have satisfied Holy Church for his contempt and the injury he had done to her, it had been shown that though Richard had frequently offered surety to obey the mandates of the Church in form of law, that he might thereby obtain the benefit of absolution, yet Stephen had refused to admit the surety. The K. being unwilling that Richard should further be unjustly detained in prison, commands Stephen that having received good surety from Richard he cause him to be liberated therefrom, or that he signify the cause why he either did not or could not perform the K.'s mandates. Otherwise the K. will do what is his in this behalf. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster.

[In dorso. Return by the said Stephen.] The sheriff of Stafford had been commanded to judge Richard by his body, but after the writ was delivered Richard did not come into the county of Stafford. Neither did he come to Stephen nor offer surety to obey the mandates of the Church; nor did Stephen refuse his surety. Stephen cannot therefore order him to be liberated from prison. He is not in any prison in the county of Stafford. Stephen had not directed the sheriff of the county of Warwick to attach him. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 51.]

Morrow of All Souls. 452. The K.'s writ to the justiciary of Ireland, or his lieutenant. On the part of Geoffrey de Genville it had been shown that pleas touching advowsons of churches within Geoffrey's lordship of Trim and other pleas having been wont to be pleaded in his court there, a plea regarding the advowson of the church of Donauthmor between Robert de Mandeville, plaintiff, and the Abbot of St. Thomas near Dublin, deforciant, had long been prosecuted there. The Abbot had lately sent one of his canons to the Chancellor of England, who alleging that the church was incroceata, obtained a writ commanding the justiciary to inquire whether that plea ought to be pleaded in the K.'s court before the justices of Dublin, or in Geoffrey's court of Trim. This inquisition having been irregularly taken owing to Geoffrey not having been summoned, the K. commands the justiciary to call the parties before him and inquire into the matter; if necessary to take a good and legal inquisition with consent of the parties; and if it appears that this plea ought to be pleaded in Geoffrey's court then to allow it to be pleaded there. If there be any difficulty in the matter then the whole proceedings shall be sent to the K. Witness, the K. Carnarvon. July 5, a. r. 12 [1284].

By virtue of this writ the sheriff of Dublin was commanded to cause the parties to come before the justiciary at Dublin in 3 weeks of Michaelmas. The parties having come on that day Geoffrey and Matilda say for themselves that the plea aforesaid ought to be pleaded in the court of their liberty, because Henry, formerly King of England, the K.'s great-grandfather, enfeoffed Hugh de Lacy, Matilda's ancestor and one of whose heirs she is, of Meath, to hold of King Henry as freely and peaceably as Moriartauth Omalachlyn or any other person had held it, with all its liberties. Afterwards Hugh de Lacy enfeoffed Martin de Mandeville, a knight of his, ancestor of Robert de Mandeville, of certain lands and tenements within his lordship of Trim, by service of landgable, and although Martin afterwards granted the advowson of Donamor to the said Abbot, wishing the church to be incroceata, this ought not to injure Geoffrey and Matilda, because Martin could not incroceare the church without the assent of Hugh de Lacy, ancestor of Matilda and chief lord of the fee; and even if the church were incroceata this could not prejudice them because they knew nothing thereof. Wherefore they say that the plea of the advowson of the church aforesaid ought to be pleaded in their court of Trim and not elsewhere.

The Abbot says for himself that the present King is seised of pleas of advowsons of churches within the precinct of Geoffrey's liberty, as of the advowson of the church of Kyrketon', regarding which a final concord was levied in the K.'s court at Dublin, whereof he produced a part of his chirograph which witnesses this.

Geoffrey and Matilda say that though a fine was levied in the K.'s court by consent of the parties, this ought not to prejudice them for they knew nothing of it; and they say that though the K. had somewhat encroached on their liberty by consent of the parties without their knowledge, this ought not to prevent such pleas being pleaded in the court of their liberty, as they are bound to be.

The abbot says that the K. was seised of pleas of this kind, and also during vacancy of their abbey the K. is seised of the presentation to vicarages of churches within the precinct of the above liberty, and of lands and tenements annexed to the crozier [crocea], to wit, of Neubiry, Brounton', and Dunelynsachlin. The escheator in all vacancies has seisin thereof on the K.'s behalf, answering at the Exchequer for the issues; and the sheriff of Dublin has his tourn there; wherefore the K., he says, ought not without special mandate to be removed from his seisin.

Geoffrey and Matilda say in reply that though the K. had in times past been seised by usurpation, this does not prejudice them, because the K. never was seised of the advowson of the church of Donamor; and they say that in the suit of Sir Robert de Mandeville, now plaintiff, by writ of right of that liberty, the Abbot came to the court of Geoffrey and Matilda, and on the first day of the plea prayed a day of reconciliation, on the second day he was essoined, and on the third he made default, wherefore by judgment of the court it was adjudged that the advowson be taken into the hands of Geoffrey and Matilda. Therefore they say that pleas of this kind ought to be pleaded in the court of their liberty, and not in the K.'s court. And because the justiciary considered that the K. was in seisin of pleas of this kind from the production of part of the chirograph, from the escheator answering for the lands and tenements in time of vacancy, and from the sheriff of Dublin holding his tourn there, no bailiff would further proceed on the part of Geoffrey and Matilda.

Afterwards before the K.'s lieutenant came as well Geoffrey and Matilda as the said Abbot by their attorneys. And the Abbot says as before that cognizance of advowsons of churches in the liberty aforesaid belongs to the K. and not to Geoffrey and Matilda; and he says that even if the K. were not in seisin of pleading of pleas of this kind, though he is so, and the said Geoffrey and Matilda should make cognizance in such pleas, and the ordinary should give judgment, he would issue no execution on this judgment, and Geoffrey and Matilda could not compel him to issue judgment; wherefore failing execution, judgment fails; failing judgment, cognizance fails. Wherefore he prays judgment as well for the K. as for the Abbot himself.

Geoffrey and Matilda by their attorney say as before that cogni-

sance belongs to them in that liberty and to no one else, because they say that the K. has no cognisance of pleas in their liberty unless by their default, so that if any plea be pleaded in their liberty regarding advowsons or other matters whereof execution cannot be issued by them, the K.'s Chancellor of Ireland by writ of the K. will issue execution in default of Geoffrey and Matilda, and this has hitherto been the custom of that liberty. They are prepared to verify that the K. was never in seisin of pleas there. It does not seem to them that a fine levied in the K.'s court at Dublin of that advowson ought to prejudice them, as the fine could be levied without summons. Wherefore they pray that the Abbot's attorneys may show to them who were the summoners of the parties to the fine aforesaid. The attorneys do not know who were the summoners. Wherefore the attorney of Geoffrey and Matilda demands judgment as to the fine. A day is given to the parties in 1 month of Easter. Meanwhile the justiciary of Ireland is commanded to inquire in presence of the parties, if they wish to be present, of what pleas the K. is seised in the liberty aforesaid. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 115, Rot. 44.]

Morrow of All Souls.

453. The K. had commanded the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, that if judgment had been rendered in an assize of Novel disseisin between Geoffrey Leonn and Geoffrey de Geneville and others of tenements in Culmolyn, they should send before the K. the record and process thereof, with the original writ, and the challenges and exceptions taken by Geoffrey. The justices sent the record, which is as follows:—

The assize comes to recognize whether Geoffrey de Geynville and Matilda his wife, Walter Tronnan, William Locard, Thomas le Blund, and Joan daughter of John Leon' unjustly disseised Geoffrey son of Thomas Leon' of his free tenement in Coulmolyn, namely, of 1 messuage, 14 carucates, and 98 acres of arable land, 300 acres of wood, and 60 acres of meadow; Geoffrey de Geynville and the others aforesaid come and Geoffrey for himself says that he had done no injury, and nothing but what belongs to the liberty which he has of the K.'s gift. Thomas son of Thomas Leon' held this tenement of him in capite; on his death Geoffrey entered as chief lord of the tenement; and on requisition of Joan aforesaid, sister of Thomas, he directed an inquisition to be taken whether Thomas died seised thereof in his demesne as of fee and who was his next heir. By this inquisition it was found that at twilight in the evening of Saturday the feast of St. Peter ad Cathedram, a. r. 15 [Jan. 18, 1287-8], his life being despaired of, Thomas gave to Geoffrey son of Leon aforesaid, his manor of Coulmolyn, and caused himself to be carried to the door of the hall; he took the ring of the door and said to Geoffrey "I give thee this manor with all its appurtenances"; afterwards he caused himself to be carried on a canopy to a house de scuario; his men thinking he was dead raised a great clamour; he caused himself to be laid on the ground and rose, saying "Why do you cry? I shall recover if the Lord pleases, and if I die you shall have a better lord than I have been, namely, Geoffrey, my uncle, to whom I have given all my land;" he then caused himself to be again placed on the canopy and carried to the scuarium aforesaid, where he died on that night between midnight and cock-crow.

And the said Geoffrey appeals to the discretion of the justices whether the assize ought to proceed against him on account of his act aforesaid; he demands his court of his tenants, and says that he has done nothing why he should lose his court.

And Geoffrey aforesaid son of Thomas says that Thomas aforesaid enfeoffed him of this tenement, and that by him he was in peaceful seisin thereof from Saturday aforesaid until Wednesday next ensuing, when Geoffrey de Geynville and the others aforesaid disseised him thereof, as the writ says; he thereof prays assize, for he says that Geoffrey ought not to have his court of his tenants.

The justices said to Geoffrey de Geynville that they ought not to rely on his inquisition, but that he should answer whether he had disseised Geoffrey son of Thomas or not; and that by his own act he could not have a court of his tenants.

Geoffrey de Geynville said that although they would not rely on his inquisition he ought to have relied on it and acted according to its verdict; that he would not put himself on an assize because those recognitors do not know what belongs to his liberty; but that he puts himself as to his act aforesaid on the discretion of the justices.

Geoffrey son of Thomas demands an assize as before, and the justices told Geoffrey de Geynville that he should further answer.

Afterwards Geoffrey de Geynville said that he was willing that the assize should inquire in the form of an inquisition regarding his act aforesaid, and that they should judge him according to his act.

Wherefore the assize is put off for default of jurors until the octaves of the Holy Trinity. And the sheriff was directed to cause a jury of 12 men to come, and also persons who should meanwhile view the tenement in order to make the recognizance of the assize, together with Ulfran de Berneval and Adam de Bedeford, who have the same day in banco. The assize came on that day, and the jury of the assize being asked how Geoffrey de Geynville and the others aforesaid entered the messuage and land and how they delivered them to Joan, Say upon their oath that Joan after the death of Thomas came to Geoffrey de Geynville and Matilda his wife, and prayed counsel and aid of them in order to recover her inheritance as next heir, and she promised and swore that she should marry according to their will; and altogether abided by their counsel. By reason of this promise and oath Geoffrey took the inquisition, which found that although the said Thomas enfeoffed Geoffrey son of Thomas of the messuage and land on a Saturday at the hour of vespers, and that he died the same night about cock-crow, it seemed to him that any seisin from so brief a possession could not avail the said Thomas, and Geoffrey therefore put Joan into seisin. The jurors being further asked what seisin Geoffrey Fitz Thomas had of the messuage and land, Say that when he was ill he sent for Geoffrey his uncle, and having for a long time had the design of giving him his tenement of Coulmolyn, as a provision for his family, he himself having no offspring, he enfeoffed him on a Saturday at the hour of vespers. And when afterwards he had left his house and gone outside his door he enjoined his tenants, who had come by his order, that for the future they should take the said Geoffrey son of Thomas, whom he had enfeoffed of the tenement, as their lord, and that he should be a better lord than he had been. A weakness seized him soon afterwards and he lay as dead. His friends and some of his tenants having thereupon raised a great clamour he recovered and rose saying, Why do you cry? Behold I am of sound memory and understanding; and again told them that he had enfeoffed Geoffrey his uncle of the messuage and land of Coulmoyln and ordered them to render fealty and to be intentive and respondent to Geoffrey. He afterwards caused himself to be carried in quoddam scuarium near the tenement aforesaid, where he died about cock-crow on that night. Geoffrey son of Thomas was so seised from the hour aforesaid of Saturday until Wednesday next ensuing, when Geoffrey de Geynville and the others aforesaid expelled him. The jurors further Say that Thomas did not retain any moveables or growing crops of the tenement to acquit his debts; and they find damages of 10*l.*

Judgment that Geoffrey son of Thomas recover seisin with damages as aforesaid, and Geoffrey de Geynville and Matilda, Walter, William, Thomas le Blund, and Joan are amerced.

Afterwards before the K.'s lieutenants came the parties, and Joan says for herself that seisin, if any, was made to Geoffrey son of Thomas at the hour of vespers, and that at cock-crow Thomas died; wherefore she says that the caption of this seisin thus made at night ought not to prejudice her, for any change of estate ought to be made by day and not by night, so that the neighbours might be aware of it. She also says that the record does not contain that Thomas took fealty of the tenants of Thomas son of Thomas Leon', and she thereupon prays remedy.

And Geoffrey de Geynville and Matilda for themselves say that it was not rightly proceeded to judgment against them, for it is contained in the record that they never made any claim in regard to the tenement except their liberty to plead this plea, and that the K. has no pleas in that liberty except on their default. Wherefore they pray remedy, and that they may have their liberty.

And Geoffrey son of Thomas as to Geoffrey and Matilda's reasons says that they ought not by their own proper wrong to have any liberty to plead pleas, and that it is not consonant to right that they should be justices in regard to their own act, and if they were he never should have justice; wherefore he prays judgment; and as to Joan's reasons he says that it is contained in the record that the seisin which Thomas son of Thomas made to Geoffrey son of Thomas was made at the hour of vespers, which hour in those parts is the middle time between the ninth hour and the evening, so that that seisin was made by day and not by night. And he says that when he received seisin he took fealty of William son of Leon', William son of John son of Leon', Richard Fitz Alan, Richard Andrew, Batecote Andrew, William Bernard, Geoffrey Bathin, Robert Wynter, and David the clerk, wherefore he pays judgment, &c.

A day in a month of Easter was given to the parties to hear judgment, wheresoever, &c. And the justiciary of Ireland is commanded to cause the recognitors of the assize to come before him, and upon their oath to inquire whether the seisin to Geoffrey son of Thomas aforesaid was made by day or by night, and if by day how long before evening; whether Thomas took fealty from the tenants, and if so at what hour, whether by day or night; and what he shall find thereupon he shall certify to the K. or his lieutenants under his seal. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 115, Rot. 44 dors.]

Quinzaine of St. Martin.

460. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland, or his vicegerent. By inspection of the record of a plaint had in the K.'s court before the K.'s bailiffs of Dublin, between William de Camville, merchant of Bristol, and Brian of the kingdom of Scotland, of the grievous trespasses wrought by Brian against William according to letters patent under the seal of the provostship of the city of Dublin which William had produced before the K., it appears that when the plaint had been debated between the parties and they had ultimately put themselves upon an inquisition, Brian, who had nothing within the K.'s dominions, on the night preceding the caption of this inquisition, by default and negligence of Adam Vured and William de Beverley, then bailiffs of the city of Dublin, who according to the law of merchants had insufficiently attached him, escaped from the port of Dublin to foreign parts. William de Camville has thereby been prevented from obtaining justice from Brian to William's damage of 100*l.*, as William offers to prove before the K. according to the law of merchants. The K. therefore commands the justiciary to attach the goods of Adam Vured and William de Beverley for 100*l.*, and to adjourn the plaint before the K. until the octaves of St. Martin, wheresoever, &c. The same day is appointed for William de Camville. William and Adam not having come, the justiciary sent under his seal the return of the mayor and bailiffs certifying that they had attached of the goods of Adam Vured to the value of 30*l.* within the liberty, his other goods being abroad, and that they had attached of the goods of William de Beverley to the value of 13*s.* 4*d.*, whereas they could have attached of the goods and chattels of Adam to the value of 200*l.*, and of the lands and chattels of William to the value of 40*l.*, as was testified before the K.'s lieutenants. As by judgment of the court the 46 marks ought to be paid to William, and as he had given security by sufficient mainprise to restore them, namely, Thomas of Oxford, the younger, Richard le Marshall, Geoffrey of Bristol, Alan of St. Alban's, John of Lynn, and Simon of Canterbury, mandate that the 46 marks be paid to William de Camville; and he shall have them before the K. in the quinzaine of Easter wheresoever, &c. to be paid to the person to whom of right they ought to be paid. The justiciary to attach Adam and William de Beverley aforesaid, by all their goods, lands, and tenements extrinsic, intrinsic, within and without the liberty to the value of 100*l.*, and adjourn the attachment to the same term, to answer to William de Camville for the trespass aforesaid. The said William puts in his place John de Illeye or Richard Ganet of Bristol; and be it known that William delivered in the court of King's Bench to Thomas of Oxford, the younger, one of the sureties, the letters patent sealed with the seal of the provostship of the city of Dublin touching the matter aforesaid. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 115, Rot. 54 dors.]

461. Letters of attorney in Ireland for 1 year under the names of Roger le Plomer of Killeshull' and Martin of Ross for John de Foleburne, about by the K.'s licence to depart for parts beyond the sea. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, &c. Westminster. [Pat., 17 Edw. I., m. 23.]

1288. Dec. 29. 462. Mem. that William de Hamelton delivered to Robert de Fulburne on Thursday next before the feast of St. Edward the King and Martyr, a. r. 17, two writs touching 4*s.* to be taken for the K. from each hogshead of wine of the men of St. Emilian and Brigeriac, to be conveyed to Ireland and delivered to the justiciary and the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. [Close, 17 Edw. I., m. 7 dors.]

[1287 to 1288.] 463. William de Fraunceis, clerk of Adam de Cretyng, who sues for the chattels of Maurice Fitz Maurice.

Mem. of Maurice Fitz Maurice's chattels at his death:—At Inchecoygn [Inchequin] 10 good carucates; all the corn of those carucates in granges and haggards; a stud of the value of 100*l.*; 300 2 years old, value of each 8*d.*; besides war horses.

At Corbyn in the county of Cork, 3 good carucates, value 8*l.*; corn there worth 20*l.*; 200 2 years old, worth 10 marks.

At Tipernevin in the county of Limerick, 3 good carucates, worth 8*l.*, with all their corn, worth 60 marks; in the same manor a ward and marriage for which he might have received 200 marks, with another ward which might have been sold for 40*l.*

At Kylaugy, co. Wexford, 3 good carucates, worth 8*l.*, with the corn of the manor, worth 20*l.*; stock unknown.

Walter de Bodynham, who sues for the K., says that whereas it is not allowed to the treasurer for the time being to limit without the K.'s special warrant debts beyond the amount of 20*l.*, Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, granted to Maurice de Rocheford all the goods and chattels to the value of 400 marks found after the death of Maurice Fitz Maurice in the manors which he held for his life of the inheritance of Maurice de Rocheford, and limited him to 20*l.* a year to be rendered to the K. for part of the debts in which Maurice Fitz Maurice was bound to the K. at the Exchequer.

Nicholas the treasurer aforesaid, being questioned as to this, says that the chattels aforesaid were not valued at 200 marks, but he acknowledges that at the instance of Thomas de Clere he limited Maurice de Rocheford to 20*l.* a year. Therefore judgment. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 25, m. 3.]

1281–1288. 464. [ ] to the Bishop of Bath, the K.'s Chancellor. Thanks him for his services and prays him to give to his cousin, the bearer of these presents, letters of protection directed to the justiciary and treasurer of Ireland, and praying them to give him counsel and aid in regard to the affairs of Walerand de Wellesley, the bishop's gentleman, as Richard Distin cannot attend to them. Prays him also to send his letters to Sir Geoffrey Brown, his seneschal in Ireland, to audit an account with the bearer of these letters, and to the Bishop of Waterford to order some of his officers, also with the bearer, to audit that of Geoffrey of Exeter, who had held the socage lands of Walerand after the death of his father. [Royal Letters, 2057.]

[1282 to 1288.] 465. Letters from . . . . , clerk, to S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford, his lord and friend. He commits a great crime who does not submit for commendation the services of good and faithful men of which he has had experience. The Prior of the Holy Trinity, Dublin, who after the archbishop is the most worthy person in the diocese of Dublin, had rendered conspicuous service in forwarding the grant of the tenth and fifteenth. Wherefore he prays that some return may be made to him by the K. and that his demands may be favourably considered. Had omitted to write to the K. because he had no certain information regarding the tenth and fifteenth; hopes within eight days to be more certain, and will then certify to the K. by his own messenger. Dublin. Thursday next after the feast of Passion Sunday. [Royal Letters, 3546.]

1288–1289. Jan. 27. 467. Letters of attorney in Ireland for 2 years under the names of Richard de Cerdeden and John Surnim for Ralph Pypard, remaining by licence in England. Witness, Edmund, &c. Westminster. [Pat., 17 Edw. I., m. 23.]

[Jan. 31.] 468. J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin to R[obert] Bishop of Bath and Wells. Stephen O'Bragan, Archdeacon of Dublin, and canon of Cashel, the archbishop's clerk and companion, having been elected by the Dean and chapter as Archbishop of Cashel, and being about to visit the K.'s court on his way to the court of Rome to prosecute his right, the archbishop prays that the bishop will expedite his affairs when he arrives. Whatever evil may be said of him by those who are emulous of him, a better, a more discreet or worthy man could not be found in the bosom of the Church on the day of his election. Shankill [Senekel]. [Royal Letters, 3605.]

1288–1289. Feb. 8. 469. The K.'s writ to Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland. Had received complaints of James Ketyng that he had begotten of Margery his wife, sister of John Fitz Robert, deceased, living issue named Roesia; that after her birth his wife went to the house of Philip le Marshal at Lochlosque in the co. of Tipperary and there died together with the daughter who had survived for 15 days; and that James is consequently entitled by law and custom of the realm to hold for his life the lands and tenements of said Margery; that nevertheless the escheator immediately after Margery's death took into the K.'s hand her lands and tenements, and did not permit James to enjoy the benefit of the law of England. The K. therefore commands the escheator to inquire into the truth of the premises before the justices itinerant at Clonmel by the oath as well of knights as of other free and liege men and chiefly of the venue of Lochlosque; and to send the inquisition and this writ to the locum tenens of the justiciary. Witness, John Archbishop of Dublin, locum tenens of the justiciary of Ireland. Dublin. Feb. 8, a. r. 17. [m. 1.]

The above writ of Feb. 8, 1288–9 recited. Proceedings thereupon.

Inquisition taken at Clonmel at the assizes held in the eyre of the justices after the Purification of Blessed Mary, a. r. 17, before W. de Beverley, then Chancellor of Ireland, W[alter] de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, William Barry, Roger Andrew, John de Houton, knights, and Robert le Flattebyry, justices itinerant at Clonmel, and in presence of James Ketyng to inquire whether James aforesaid had begotten of Margery his wife, sister and heir of John Fitz Robert, deceased, a daughter named Roesia, &c., as in the writ. The jurors upon their oath Say that James aforesaid never had issue of Margery his wife, and that no issue was sent in wardage to the house of Philip le Marshal at Lochloske in the co. of Tipperary, as James alleges. [m. 2.]

The K.'s writ commanding the justiciary of Ireland or his locum tenens to take an inquisition by the oath of good and lawful men of those parts where the issue was born of James Ketyng and Margery de la Rochelle, daughter of Robert Fitz Richard, who held of the K. in capite; and if he should find that issue was raised between the said James and Margery (whereby according to law of England Margery's lands ought to remain to James for his life) then the justiciary shall deliver the lands to James accordingly. Westminster. Feb. 6, a. r. 20 [1291–2]. [m. 3.]

[Indorsed.] An inquisition having been taken at Clonmel before Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, and the then justices itinerant, on which James Ketyng put himself, and which found that living issue had been raised between him and Margery, whereby this inquisition is repugnant to the first inquisition, no execution shall be made under this writ to give seisin to James.

Mem. that James Keting who had married Margery de la Rochelle, deceased, who held of the K. in capite came before Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland (who had taken her lands into the K.'s hand by writ of Chancery) and demanded those lands, because he had begotten a child of her and consequently those lands belonged to him for life by law of England. The escheator answered that he could not without the K.'s command and without warrant deliver the lands. James then went to the K.'s court and purchased a writ directed to the escheator to inquire in the presence of William de Barry, John de Houton, Robert de Hastings, Roger Andrew, and William de Weston, then justices itinerant at Clonmel, whether or not Margery aforesaid had borne a living child to James after he had married her. A day was given by the escheator. The inquest was summoned before justices in eyre at Clonmel by knights and other free and liege men of the place where the child was alleged to have been born, and notably Philip le Marshal. James said that the child given in wardage had been born a little before Candlemas, a. r. 17 [Feb. 2, 1288–9]. On the above day came William de Barry and the other justices, and William de Beverley, then Chancellor of Ireland, and the escheator. James made himself a party, agreed to and challenged jurors. The inquisition Said on its oath that Margery never bore a living child to James after or before he was married to her. The inquisition was returned to the Archbishop of Dublin, lieutenant of the justiciary of Ireland, and he and the K.'s Council commanded the escheator to hold the lands in the K.'s hand and to answer at the Exchequer for the issues. Afterwards Hugh de Bruges, a valet, who was with the escheator and had laboured much in the K.'s service, came to the K.'s court in England, prayed that part of those lands might be granted to him for a yearly extent to be rendered therefor at the Exchequer; the lands of Adlangport and Fydoun were thereupon granted to him at a yearly extent by the K.'s writ of England. Three or four years after the death of Margery, James went to England, and purchased a writ to Sir William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, to inquire into the matter. The justiciary inquired in Connaught, where James has good friends, and found that Margery had begotten a living child by the said James. The matter was certified to the Council in 3 weeks of Michaelmas, a. r. 20 [Oct. 20, 1292] at Dublin. James was then commanded to make his demand. [m. 7, Norman French.]

The K.'s writ commanding William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, to send before the K. by the next Parliament after Easter, the inquisition lately taken by the justiciary of lands of the inheritance of Margery de la Rochelle who was the wife [of James Ketynge in Ireland. James claims to hold this inheritance by law of England, issue having been raised between him and Margery. Roxburgh, Nov. 28, 1292. [m. 5.]

A similar writ and of same date directed to Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland. [m. 6.]

[Indorsed.] Mem. that on Monday next after the feast of St. Mark the Evangelist [April 28, 1293], at Dublin, in the evening, James Ketyng delivered this writ to Walter de la Haye in presence of Thomas Cantok, Chancellor of Ireland, and Sir Nicholas de Carew.

Inquisition taken before William de Vescy, chief justiciary of Ireland, on Tuesday next after the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, a. r. 20 [Sept. 16, 1292] at Clare, as to whether James de Ketyng, who by licence of the K. had taken to wife Margery de la Rochelle, daughter of Robert Fitz Richard, who held of the K. in capite, had begotten of her a daughter named Roesia, whereby the lands of Margery's inheritance in Ireland, by reason of issue raised between them, ought to remain to James for his life according to law of England and custom as well of Ireland as of England. Jurors:—John le Botiller, William le Archer, David Bussel, Walter son of Howel, Henry le Gignor, David Dyer, Thomas Fitz Hugh, Roger Cas, Nicholas Gossone, David Aleyn, Thomas Mor, and Henry Louthan, Who upon their oath Say that a daughter was begotten between James Ketyng and Margery aforesaid before he espoused her, and that after he had espoused Margery he begot the daughter named Roesia. [m. 4.] [Inq. P.M., 21 Edw. I., No. 132.

March 1. 470. The K. to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland, and the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. The K. wishing to provide for the indemnity of the kingdom and to obviate the malice of men, had provided and ordained before the K. and Council certain remedies against clippers and falsifiers of the K.'s money, and against those who use false or clipped money in the city of London, or introduce false or base money, and their accomplices. The K. wishes these articles, which he sends under the seal of England, to be observed throughout the whole realm, saving the amerciaments thence accruing to the K. The justiciary and Treasurer and Barons shall cause the articles to be transcribed and sent to the collectors of the new custom in each port of Ireland; and shall enjoin the collectors, by the K.'s writs, to cause the articles to be read and publicly proclaimed, and the remedies observed in those ports. They shall also order the bailiffs and good men of the ports to be intentive and respondent to the collectors in regard to these matters. Witness, Edmund, &c. Westminster. [Close, 17 *Edw. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 22, m. 8–10.]

1289. Easter. 476. Ireland. Nicholas Bakoun, by his attorney, appeared on the 4th day against Milo de Cruwes, of a plea of 1 carucate of land in Balymaglassah, which he claims as his right in the K.'s court. Milo did not come, and also committed default in 1 month of Easter. Mandate to the justiciary to take the land into the K.'s hand, and to summon Milo to be here on that day. The justiciary returns that the land is taken into the K.'s hand, and that he had summoned, &c. Wherefore it is considered that Nicholas aforesaid shall recover his seisin against Milo of the tenements aforesaid; and be it known that the record of this plaint is in the bundle for a. r. 14. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 119, Rot. 39 dors.]

Easter. 477. The assize before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, came to recognize if Robert father of William Wyterel was seised at his death of 98 acres of land in the new English vill of Colp, which land William de la Ryvere holds, who appears before the lieutenants of the K. in the quinzaine of Easter, a. r. 16, and vouches 1289. to warranty John Wyterel. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to have him here in 3 weeks of Michaelmas next ensuing. Essoigns until 3 weeks of Easter. John then appears by his attorney, likewise William de la Ryvere (who vouches John aforesaid to warranty) and also William Wyterel. John warrants the tenements to William, and says that Robert aforesaid enfeoffed John aforesaid of the tenements, and that the latter was in good seisin thereof; the same John enfeoffed William de la Ryvere of the tenements, and he was in good seisin thereof, so that Robert did not die seised thereof; and that this is so he prays may be inquired by the assize.

William Wyterel says that Robert his father never by any feoffment changed his estate, but that he died seised in his demesne, &c., of the tenements aforesaid. And this he prays may be inquired by the assize. John the like. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland that he cause to come before him 24 as well knights as, &c., to recognize in the form aforesaid; and that he send to the K. on the morrow of All Souls the assize taken before him. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 119, Rot. 45.]

Easter. 478. Ireland. William de la Rivere puts in his place Thomas son of Adam le Charpenter, or Henry of Manchester, against William Whyterel of a plea of assize of Mort d'Ancestor. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 119, Rot. 48.]

Quinzaine of Easter. 479. Plaint in the K.'s court before the mayor and bailiffs of the city of Dublin, without the K.'s writ, between William de Caunville, merchant of Bristol, and William de Beverley and Adam Vured, late bailiffs of that city, of a ship, goods, and merchandise of Brian of Dunbrecan, merchant of Scotland, not rightly attached by the bailiffs for goods and chattels of William de Caunville, to the value of 80*l.* seized as is said by Brian at Loch Fine in Scotland. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to proceed to the K.'s court of Dublin, and if judgment was rendered in this plaint, to cause it to be recorded in full court; and to send the record and process under his seal before the K. The justiciary sent the record which is in the bundle for Michaelmas, a. r. 15–16.

Afterwards the K. commanded the justiciary aforesaid that by inspection of the record of the plaint had in the K.'s court before the bailiffs of Dublin, and by letters patent sealed with the seal of the provostship of the city of Dublin which William produced before the K., it appears that when the plaint had been pleaded in the K.'s court between them, and ultimately the parties had put themselves upon an inquisition, the said Brian on the night preceding its caption, by the default and negligence of Adam Vured and William de Beverley, then bailiffs of the city aforesaid, escaped from the port of the city aforesaid, as herein-after stated. The K. commanded that the chattels of Adam and William should be attached to the value of 100*l.*, and that they should have a day before the K. or his locum tenens wheresoever, &c., in the octaves of St. Martin next ensuing. The same day was named for William de Caunville to receive justice in the K.'s court. The justiciary at the term aforesaid returned to the K.'s lieutenants in England that he had attached of the chattels of Adam Vured to the value of 30*l.* within the liberty of the city aforesaid, and that he had not attached more because they were in the foreign; and of the chattels of William de Beverley to the value of 13*s.* 4*d.*, and that he had no more. William de Caunville at the term aforesaid is prepared to show that Adam and William de Beverley have lands and tenements, goods and chattels, as well within as without the liberty to the value of 1,000*l.* whereby they may be distrained. William having given security for the 46 marks attached of the lands and chattels of Adam and William de Beverley the K. ordered the justiciary that he should deliver them to him, and that nevertheless he should distrain Adam and William by their goods and chattels as well within as without the liberty, to the value of the residue of 100*l.*

Adam Vured by Reginald of Ashbourne and Richard de Rothwell, his attorneys by the K.'s writ under his seal of Ireland, appears, and William de Beverley does not appear, wherefore it is proceeded against him by distress and attachment as before. William de Caunville complains that having touched at the port of Loch Fine in Scotland with his ship and merchandise on the vigil of the Apostles Sts. Simon and Jude, a. r. 2 [Oct. 27, 1274] Brian of Dunbrecan came with other strangers and attached the ship and took and carried away goods and chattels therein to the value of 28*l.*, and unjustly detained them to William's damage of 100*l.* William having gone from port to port and from country to country to seek Brian, at length found him in the city of Dublin on the vigil of St. John the Baptist, a. r. 14 [June 23, 1283] with his ship and chattels and merchandise to the value of 80*l.* William complained of Brian to the said Adam Vured and William de Beverley, then bailiffs of the city aforesaid. Brian was attached by his ship and chattels to answer William; and when the plaint had been pleaded, and the parties had put themselves upon an inquisition, the said Adam and William de Beverley, who, according to the law of merchants, had insufficiently attached Brian, on the night preceding the caption of the inquisition allowed him to escape with his ship. Wherefore William says that he is damnified to the value of 100*l.*, and this he is prepared to prove according to the law of merchants. And Adam by Roger and Richard aforesaid, his attorneys, appears, and says nothing. William de Caunville prays judgment against Adam. And the justiciary having certified by the return of the writ that the goods and chattels of Adam Vured and William de Beverley had been seized to the value of 40*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, is commanded that he cause that amount to come before the K. in the quinzaine of Michaelmas wheresoever, &c., and that nevertheless he distain Adam and William's goods and chattels to the value of the residue of 100*l.* to be before the K. at the above term. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 115, Rot. 40.]

Quinzaine to 1 month of Easter.

480. Writ to the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, to render justice to Joan who was the wife of John de Bohun, in her plea of dower before them. Mandate to send before the K. in case of difficulty, the record and procees of the plaint with the original writ, &c.

The justices sent the record, herein recited at length.

VIEW. Joan who was the wife of John de Bohun, by her attorney demands as her dower against John de Saunford ⅓ of the manor of Balymadan, ⅓ of a messuage, 34 librates of rent in Combre, and ⅓ of the advowson of the church there. John de Saunford aforesaid appears, and as to the ⅓ of the manor of Balymadan vouches to warranty Master John de Saunford. To appear in Dublin in the quinzaine of Hilary by aid of court. And as to the ⅓ of the aforesaid messuage and 34 librates of rent in le Combre he says that he only holds 1 messuage, 6 librates of rent, and the advowson of the church of that vill, whereof he vouches Master John aforesaid to warranty. To appear on the same day. And as to the residue of the rent he says that he holds nothing, which Joan by her attorney cannot deny. Wherefore the said Joan takes nothing by this writ, and is amerced for a false claim.

Essoins and continuances until Easter, a. r. 16.

Master John de Saunford whom John de Saunford vouches to warranty appears, &c., and vouches to warranty John son and heir of John de Bohun who is under age and in custody of the K. To appear at Dublin in the quinzaine of St. John the Baptist by aid of court.

The K.'s writ to the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, commanding them as before to render justice to Joan in her plea of dower, and in case of difficulty to send the record and process of the plaint before the K. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster. Oct. 8, a. r. 15 [1287].

By reason of this mandate the record and process were sent before the K. in England, principally because John son and heir of John de Bohun, whom Master John de Saunford vouches to warranty, has only a falcon gentle or 1 mark a year of rent in Ireland, for which reason he cannot render to Joan to the value of her dower when judgment shall have been given in Ireland. Wherefore Master John is without day at present. Afterwards the justiciary of Ireland was commanded to summon him. The justiciary returns that he has done so, wherefore let it be proceeded to judgment. As it appears that John son of John de Bohun has nothing in Ireland save a falcon gentle or 1 mark of rent a year, nor in England as is said, It is Considered that Joan aforesaid recover her dower against the said Master John de Saunford, and that he recover against John son of John de Bohun when he has land. And as it is testified that the heir aforesaid has lands in the county of Sussex the sheriff is ordered to cause them to be extended, and to send the extent before the K. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 119, Rot. 40 dors.; and No. 120, Rot. 6.]

Month of Easter.

Quinzaine of Trinity. 493. Ireland. Dublin. Thomas de Chabbenore by his attorney heretofore, before Robert Bagod and his associates, justices of the Common Pleas, demands against Geoffrey le Bret, 1 messuage and 2 parts of 1 carucate of land, &c. in Baligrenan; against Richard Teling ⅓ part of 1 carucate of land, excepting 3½ acres, in that vill; and against Richard son of Richard Teling 3½ acres in that vill, wherein Geoffrey, Richard, and Richard had not entry save after a lease which Thomas made thereof to Amory de Aveny for a term which has past, with reversion to Thomas.

Geoffrey, Richard, and Richard aforesaid heretofore came before the justices aforesaid. Geoffrey for his tenure vouched to warranty Gilbert de Lacy; Richard son of Richard vouched Richard Teling, his father, who was present and warranted, and as well thereof as of his own tenure, vouched to warranty the said Gilbert. And because it was there testified that Gilbert had nothing in the land of Ireland, the K. caused the record aforesaid to come hither, and the said Geoffrey, Richard, and Richard being questioned as to where the said Gilbert ought to be summoned, answered in the county of Salop. Wherefore Gilbert is summoned to appear in the octaves of Michaelmas wheresoever. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 121, Rot. 9 dors.]

Pleas determined at Trim on the morrow of the close of Easter, a. r. 17 [April 18, 1289], before Anselm Coterel, seneschal of Trim, Ralph le Curteys, and Richard de Penkeston, his associates.

Thomas Bishop of Meath against Hugh Hosee, of Galtrim, of a plea of last presentation, by William le Tayleur.

Pleas there before the same on Thursday after the Finding of the Holy Cross in same year [May 5, 1289].

Thomas Bishop of Meath, who is in the K.'s service, against Hese of Galtrim of a plea of last presentation by Geoffrey le Meseger.

Peter of Coulmolyn, a juror summoned on the assize, not having come, was amerced. The sheriff was directed to summon a jury, and besides them so many and such knights, &c., so that the assize, &c.

Pleas there before the same on the morrow of the Ascension [May 20] in same year:—The assize comes to recognize who in time of peace presented the last parson, deceased, to the church of Galtrim, now vacant, the advowson of which belongs to Hugh of Galtrim, and of which Thomas Bishop of Meath forcibly deprives him. Thomas was essoined of the K.'s service on Thursday aforesaid after the Finding of the Holy Cross. Not having come, the sheriff was directed to resummon him for Friday in Pentecost week.

Pleas there before the same on Friday in Pentecost week in same year [June 3, 1289]:—The assize comes to recognize who presented as above. Thomas not having come, let the assize proceed by his default. The jurors upon their oath Say that the church is vacant, because William de la Cornere, formerly rector thereof, had been consecrated as bishop, and that Walter Hosee, Hugh's uncle, whose heir he is, last presented Philip le Norman, his clerk, thereto, which Philip was admitted and instituted as rector by the diocesan. In the time of this Philip Walter aforesaid committed a crime, for which Richard de la Cornere, Bishop of Meath, fulminated sentence of excommunication against him. Afterwards, in order to obtain absolution for Walter, there was a discussion between him and Richard, which came to no effect, namely, that Walter should give to Richard and the church of Meath the value of the church aforesaid. Pending this discussion, Walter was killed at Fytherath. After his death the bishop would not allow Walter to be buried until Lucy his wife had delivered to the bishop the keys of his coffers. The Bishop having opened the coffers found in one of them a box containing Walter's seal. The bishop took the seal, and having drawn up a deed touching the advowson aforesaid, put the seal to it. Afterwards he got the parson aforesaid out of the church. The parson thereupon raised the hue and cry and conferred the church on William de la Cornere, his son. They Say that the advowson of mere right belongs to Hugh aforesaid as to the true patron by hereditary right. Wherefore it is considered that Hugh recover the advowson aforesaid, and his damages are assessed at 50 marks. And Thomas is amerced. [Chancery Files, Edwd. I., No. 56, Bundle A.]

505. Plaint of John Whyterel against Alice who was the wife of Robert Whyterel, of 50 acres of land in the English vill of Colp, and of Roger Whyterel against the same Alice of 20 acres in Balimadich [ante, No. 270]. In 1 month of Easter, a. r. 16 [April 28, 1288] as well the said William Whyterel as the said Roger came before the K.'s lieutenants in England, by the K.'s mandate. The said William as before warrants the tenements to Alice Whyterel, and as regards the 50 acres demanded by the said John, and the 20 acres demanded by Roger Whyterel, William says that the father of Robert died seised of the tenements by hereditary right, and that Robert on the death of his father entered therein by hereditary succession, and held them all his life, so that John and Roger were never during Robert's time in seisin, and could not be disseised thereof. And this he prays may be inquired by the country; John and Robert the same. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland for a writ of Venire before the justices of Dublin, with Scire facias before the K. wheresoever, &c., in 3 weeks of Michaelmas. On which day the justiciary of Ireland sent the inquisition, which is in the bundle of writs of 3 weeks of Michaelmas, a. r. 16–17 [1288]. The jurors upon their Oath, Say that Ralph father of Robert aforesaid, father of William, did not die seised by hereditary right of 20 acres of land in Balimadich, or of 20 acres in the new English vill of Colp, because they Say that the mother of Ralph father of Robert was one Alice Belegambe, of whose inheritance these tenements were, and that she survived Ralph her son; that after Alice's death Robert son of Ralph aforesaid, entered into possession by hereditary succession; that he did not hold them during his whole life, for he gave them to John and Roger aforesaid; that John and Roger were in seisin, so that they could be disseised thereof. John and Robert appeared on the above day by the attorney of John and the guardian of Roger; William Whyterel, whom Alice vouched to warranty, and who warranted, did not appear. Wherefore the justiciary of Ireland is commanded to take into the K.'s hand of the land of William to the value of the tenements aforesaid, and to summon him to be before the K. wheresoever, &c., in 3 weeks of Easter to hear judgment. On which day the justiciary of Ireland returned that there had been taken into the K.'s hand to the value, &c., and that William had been summoned. William essoigned himself of the K.'s service, and had a day in the octaves of St. John the Baptist. On the latter day William showed no warrant, and on the morrow being called did not come. Judgment that John and Roger recover their seisin of the Mandate to the justiciary to deliver the temporalities. Burgh. [Pat., 17 Edw. I., m. 6.]

Michaelmas. 523. Ireland. Exemplification of the K.'s writ. The K. to Ralph de Hengham and his associates, justices. On the part of the mayor and citizens of Dublin it had been lately shown that whereas the K.'s progenitors, Kings of England, had granted that when a party in a plea in that city complained of error or grievance that error or grievance might be corrected or amended before the chief justiciary, the Council, or the justices of the Common Pleas there; that this was wont to be done; that nevertheless William de Cannville, alleging error in a plea between him of the one part, and William de Beverley and Adam Vured, citizens of Dublin, of the other part, had caused it unduly and against the liberties aforesaid to be brought before Ralph and his associates in England. The K. willing to provide as he is bound to do for the indemnity of his said citizens, commands Ralph and his associates not to meddle further with the plea aforesaid until it shall fully appear to them that the K.'s ministers in Ireland had failed to show justice to the parties, but to transmit to the justiciary of Ireland or his locum tenens the record and process of the plaint, in order that due and speedy justice may be done, as by right and according to the law and custom of those parts ought to be done. This plea is not entered here as it is inrolled of Easter last past. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 122, Rot. 13 dors.]

Michaelmas. 524. Ireland. Plaint before the justices of Dublin between Thomas de Chabbenore against Geoffrey le Bret and Richard Telyng of lands in Baligrenan [ante, No. 493]. Gilbert de Lacy vouched to warranty, having lands in England and none in Ireland, the K. commands the justices to send before the K. the record and process of this plaint.

Record sent and herein recited in full. Essoigns and pleas at Dublin before Robert Bagod and his associates of the Common Pleas on the morrow of the Ascension [May 7], the octaves and 3 weeks of Trinity [May 31 and June 7], and the octaves of Michaelmas [1288]. The said Gilbert warrants the tenements to Geoffrey le Bret and Richard Telyng, and by licence surrenders them to Thomas de Chabbenore aforesaid. Judgment that the latter recover his seisin, and that Richard son of Richard Teling have of the lands of Richard his father, to the value of, &c. And as Gilbert has no land in Ireland the justiciary of Ireland is commanded to extend the tenements aforesaid, with Scire facias thereupon in the quinzaine of Easter to the K., which is inrolled as it is torn in part.

Extent of the land of Baligrenan made there in the octaves of the Purification, a. r. 18 [Feb. 9, 1289–90], by the underwritten jurors, namely: William Dunstapel, William Huggoley, William Criketot, John Clintoun, Richard de Lacy, William Hamelyn, William de Lacy, Geoffrey Kenet, Walter Kenet, Hugh Blundon, Robert de Feringho, and John de Camerâ, Who upon their oath Say that Geoffrey le Bret held in Baligrenan 1 messuage and 2 parts of 1 carucate of land valued at 10½ marks; and that Richard Teling the elder held in Baligrenan ⅓ of 1 carucate valued at 5 marks and 40*d.*, excepting out of that third 3½ acres valued at 4*s.* 1*d.*, which Richard Teling the younger recovered before the justices from Richard Teling the elder his father, and these 4*s.* 1*d.* are contained within the above total of 5 marks and 40*d.* Total of the whole extent, 10*l.* 10*s.*

Judgment that Geoffrey le Bret aforesaid recover against Gilbert de Lacy to the value of 10½ marks; and that Richard Teling the elder recover against Gilbert aforesaid to the value of 5 marks and 40*d.* The sheriff of Salop was commanded to cause the said Geoffrey and the said Richard Teling to have seisin of Gilbert's lands and tenements to the value of the tenements aforesaid. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 122, Rot. 6 dors.]

Michaelmas. 525. Assize of Novel disseisin between Geoffrey Fitz Leon, Geoffrey de Geynville, and others, of tenements in Culmolyn [as ante, No. 453, down to the judgment that Geoffrey son of Thomas recover seisin, with damages].

Afterwards before the K. and his Council at Sarum came the parties aforesaid, and it appeared that in the record and process of the plaint there was manifest error, and this for the following reasons:—1. As Geoffrey de Geneville has the liberty of Trim he has a right to exercise in it royal power by his seal, his seneschal in lieu of a justiciary, his sheriff, and by pleading all pleas; this liberty cannot be lessened unless by Geoffrey's default in administering justice. In the record which came to England it is found that the assize was taken of tenements in that liberty by writ of the K.'s Chancery, and no default of Geoffrey appears in administering justice. 2. Because the justices were deceived in holding that Geoffrey could not and ought not to be judge of his own act. In every liberty of England, to whose laws the land of Ireland ought to conform, those who wish to complain of the lord of a liberty must do so within it. 3. Magna Charta provides that an assize of Novel disseisin shall not be taken elsewhere than in its proper county. The liberty of Trim has its proper sheriff, its proper county court, and a greater jurisdiction than a county court; this assize was taken without the liberty and county, at Dublin. 4. The recognitors who took this assize all came from the county of Dublin, and not from the liberty of Trim.

Thus 4 reasons appear why the K. and his Council consider that Geoffrey should have writs to the following effect:—

The K. to Geoffrey de Geneville. Whereas Geoffrey son of Thomas has recovered seisin in the K.'s court before his justices at Dublin against Geoffrey de Geneville, Matilda his wife, Joan daughter of John Leon', and others, of 14 carucates of land in a certain vill in the liberty of Meath, on complaint of Geoffrey de Geneville the K. had caused the record and process of that assize to come before him in England. As it appears to the K. and his Council that there is error in the record and process aforesaid the K. by counsel of his court has caused the process of that assize and the judgment rendered thereupon to be annulled. Mandate to Geoffrey to cause Joan to have seisin of the tenements as she had before the caption of the assize, saving Thomas' right.

The K. to his justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, as above, commanding them that if any person shall claim a right in the tenements aforesaid they shall tell him to go to Geoffrey de Geneville's court of Trim, and there prosecute his right until Geoffrey shall fail in rendering him justice; and if he should fail then on the claimant's complaint they shall render him full justice. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 122, Rot. 37.]

Michaelmas. 526. Ireland. The Abbot of St. Thomas near Dublin appeared on the 4th day against Geoffrey de Genvyle and Matilda his wife, who had caused to come here a record of a plea of the advowson of churches, and of lands. Geoffrey and Matilda did not appear; wherefore the abbot aforesaid is without day. The said Geoffrey and Matilda are not amerced because they did not appear. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 122, Rot. 13.]

Michaelmas. 527. Ireland. Geoffrey de Nugent heretofore at Trim in the court of Geoffrey de Geneville in the liberty of Trim demands against Adam of Holywood 1 carucate of land in Culerther, whereof Walter de Nugent, great grandfather of Geoffrey aforesaid, whose heir he is, was seised at his death. Adam appears and vouches to warranty at the ensuing assizes Laurence of Nottingham who holds lands in England where he resides, but not in Ireland. Afterwards the K. directed his writ to Geoffrey de Geneville commanding him to cause the record, process, and original writ of the plaint in question to be sent to the K. in the quinzaine of St. John wheresoever, &c. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster. Oct. 25, a. r. 16 [1288]. Geoffrey sent the record. Afterwards in the octaves of

St. John the Baptist, a. r. 17 [July 1, 1289] appeared Geoffrey and Adam. The latter here before the K.'s lieutenants in England vouches Laurence of Nottingham to warranty. Summoned in the county of Nottingham. Laurence caused himself to be essoigned by Adam Fox. The essoigner and Adam of Holywood appear on the 4th day against Geoffrey. The plaintiff does not appear, wherefore Adam and Laurence go without day, and Geoffrey and his sureties are amerced. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 122, Rot. 46 dors.]

Sept. 30. 528. S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland, had in the K.'s name granted to William de Prene, the K.'s carpenter in Ireland, a vill of land called Moyavennan in Connaught, to hold to him and his heirs for 100*s.* payable half-yearly to the K. at the Exchequer, Dublin. The K. afterwards confirmed this grant. In consequence of the war which prevailed in that land in a. r. 15, 16, and 17 William could not levy the money. The K. therefore of special grace commands the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, to exonerate William regarding the 100*s.* for those years. After the end of the 3 years aforesaid, William shall render 100*s.* a year at the Exchequer according to the form of the grant. Burgh. [Close, 17 Edwd. I., m. 4.]

Nov. 2. 535. The K. to his justiciary of Ireland or his locum tenens. Having granted the royal assent to the election lately made in the cathedral church of St. Canice, the K. wishes on account of the good and laudable testimony afforded to the K. regarding the elect to render him a more abundant grace, and to spare him labour and expense. The K. therefore commands the justiciary that when the election shall have been canonically confirmed and fealty taken from the elect as is the custom, the justiciary shall restore the temporalities, having first taken from the elect letters sealed with his seal and that of his chapter that this grace shall not tend to K.'s prejuice or that of his heirs, nor be drawn into a precedent. Clarendon. [Pat., 17 Edw. I., m. 5.]

Nov. 2. 536. The K. notifies to his bailiffs and subjects in Ireland that William de Hampton, remaining by licence in England, had attorned before the K. Cordially accepting the laudable proposal of John de Benteleye, the K.'s valet, to rescue from the hands of his enemies John de Fuleburne, lately taken prisoner in Offaly in a conflict of the K.'s army, by Calvak Oconchor and his Irish accomplices, rebels against the K., the K. grants to the former licence to attend in Offaly so often as he wills, in order to treat with those Irishmen concerning John de Fuleburne's liberation. The K. forbids persons to impede John de Benteleye in going and returning, and in effecting the prisoner's liberation. The justiciary must be satisfied that John will not countenance the Irish in perpetrating their crimes. Clarendon. [Pat., 17 Edw. I., m. 5.]

Mandate to Walter de la Haye, the K.'s escheator in Ireland, to deliver to Alan all the issues of those lands received by Walter from St. Denis's day aforesaid until the same day, a. r. 17 [Oct. 9, 1289], on which day the K. received Alan's homage and restored his lands. 13–17 Edw. I. 547. Petition of the Abbot of St. Thomas, near Dublin, to the treasurer. The K.'s ancestors had granted to him in free alms of the K.'s treasure by writ of Liberate, 20 marks a year, and the abbot had in each term delivered the writs to Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland; but not having been fully satisfied, the abbot prays the treasurer to give him a schedule of Nicholas's account, containing the amount of allowance made to Nicholas, whereby the abbot may more easily obtain his arrears.

He prays that the schedule may contain the amount of the issues of the abbey which was lately in the K.'s hand, wherewith the treasurer charges himself in his account.

Allowance taken by Nicholas de Clere for these free alms, namely, 60 marks for a. r. 13, 14, and 17, and 10 marks for a. r. 15.

The abbot says that arrears are due to him of 30 marks for 1½ year before the time of Nicholas de Clere, and of 120 marks for 6 years of his time; total, 150 marks. Whereof 70 marks are paid to him for the 3½ years aforesaid, for which Nicholas takes allowance; there remain 4 score marks. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, H.C.H. 3900, m. 2.]

[16–17 Edw. I.] 549. The K. gives power to W[illiam] Bishop of Emly to receive the attorneys of John le Franceys, Henry de Wauton, Wyot de Tetteworthe, Robert le Freman, Alan le Baker, John Fitz Walter of Gyllyngges, William le Ku, Geoffrey de Craye, and Robert le Ferrur, in a plaint before the K., between the Prior of St. Neots and the parties aforesaid, &c. [Chancery Files, Edw. I., No. 55.]

[16–17 Edw. I.] 550. Petition to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer on behalf of Torisian Donat, and Jake his brother. The latter was keeper of the Exchange of Dublin with Andrew de Spersolte, burgess of that city. Torisian, as Jake's attorney, come to England with Andrew de Spersolte, and rendered an account of that exchange before Sir John de Kirkeby, then treasurer, Sir Yter Boschard, and Gregory de la Rochelle, appointed by the K.'s writ to audit that account in the Exchequer in the term of St. John, a. r. 12 [1284]. The account having been sent to the Chancellor in Wales was forwarded by the latter under the Great Seal to the auditors in Ireland, who reviewed the account. The Bishop of Waterford, then treasurer, was charged with the total amount, as was said, and an inquest was taken of all the petitioner's fees. After the death of the justiciary Sir Nicholas de Clere, the treasurer, attached them and made them find pledges to come before the Treasurer and Barons to render the account; and pledges for 300*l.* which the deceased justiciary had taken from them to the use of the K. of the farm of the new custom. The deceased justiciary acknowledged this before the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. Torisian then came before the K.'s Council with a writ of Ireland that they should be discharged and the justiciary charged; but the money still runs against them. Torisian had a writ of this Exchequer to the treasurer of Ireland that he should bring with him an account of what he demanded. Prays that he may pass the account aforesaid, and he will be ready to answer their other demands; so that they may be out of prison and their pledges delivered. After Christmas. 558. Petitions and complaints from Ireland made to the K. in Parliament after Christmas, a. r. 18, with replies thereto.

Petition of David the clerk, of Ireland. That whereas he was rector of the church of Bunratty, canonically instituted therein, and had held it for eight years, William de Beverly, deceased, then Chancellor in Ireland, ejected him from that church. After William's death the K. by reason of the custody of the lands of Thomas de Clere conferred that church on Roger le Bretoun, who still holds it. David prays a remedy thereupon.

Afterwards David acknowledged that he had resigned the church, Wherefore let him take nothing.

Petition of John de Foleburne. Having been taken and imprisoned among the K.'s enemies, cannot be liberated save by the deliverance of one Malachelyn, an Irishman, who was given to Sir William Fitz Warin by the Irish as a surety for his brother Calvak, and to acquit a fine of four score marks made with the K. Malachelyn is detained in the K.'s prison. A remedy prayed thereupon.

The K. wills that this petition be granted. Writ in Chancery thereupon.

Petition of Philip Penlyn. Shows to the K. that when he was bailiff for the K. in Ireland, he took a man named Lorcan on suspicion. Lorcan escaped from Philip's servant, took refuge in a church, and afterwards voluntarily surrendered to the K.'s peace.

He was subsequently discharged by inquisition. The justices having fined Philip 100*s.* for an escape, he prays to be discharged thereof.

Let the escape stand as adjudicated, and at another time let Philip see to whom he delivers prisoners.

Petition of the Prior and convent of the house of St. Mary de Ponte in Fermoy. Pray confirmation by the K. of the charters which they have from Alexander Fitz Hugh, their feoffor. Their house was founded for the soul of the Lord John, formerly King of England, and the souls of his ancestors and successors.

Let them go to the Bishop of Ely, the treasurer; they will be answered by him.—An answer has been given to them and they have confirmation.

They also pray letters of protection from the K.

The K. will direct his justices in Ireland to defend and keep them in their rights.

They also pray that their lands, rents, and churches, alienated by their priors without assent of the convent, may by the K.'s aid be restored.

Let them seek them by writ.

They also pray that their poor tenants may not be put on juries and assizes unless in the 4 pleas of the Crown.

This petition is contrary to common justice. Therefore let nothing be granted to them thereupon.

Petition of Walter l'Enfaunt. Supplicates the K. to think of him; he had served the K. from the time when James de Audley came as justiciary to Ireland; he was always prompt in the execution of orders of the K.'s justices; he had spent much of his property, and had received but little.

Answered below.

And whereas Walter acted in the office of justice after the death of Sir Richard of Exeter, by provision of the justiciary and the K.'s Council in Ireland, and ought to have enjoyed the fee which Richard received, namely, 40*l.* a year, the treasurer of Ireland would give him nothing without the K.'s special mandate; whereupon he prays remedy.

The K. grants that Walter may for the future have by the K.'s special grace and at the K.'s pleasure a fee of 40*l. a year, with arrears while he was in the K.'s service. Fiat for writ to the treasurer and chamberlains of Ireland.*

Moreover Walter is aggrieved with expenses for the taking of Calvauth and Macmorwyth, and for the death of Adam de Staunton, killed at the burning of Norrauch [Narragh], and also of other felons. He is thereby distrusted by the English and the Irish, and on account of the K.'s service is indebted to merchants, so that he will be obliged to sell or mortgage his land, unless the K. will regard him.

Let the justiciary be directed to defend and protect him. As to his losses the K. will command the justiciary and treasurer to cause him to have 100*l. out of the next fines to be levied from the prisoners aforesaid. Fiat for writ.*

Moreover William Doddingeseles and the said Walter l'Enfaunt are aggrieved because the treasurer of Ireland detains from them the fees ordered to them, namely, to the said William 13*l.*, and to the said Walter 36*l.* 16*s.*

Mandate to the Treasurer and Barons to inquire and certify the K. at the next Parliament.

Moreover, when Walter was in the K.'s service and had custody of the K.'s castles in Connaught, felons against the K. came in his absence, burnt his best manor, and killed and destroyed his men.

The K. cannot redress all trespasses of war.

Walter prays allowance for his horses lost in the K.'s service in several places under order of the justiciary, to the value of 100*l.*

The K. wills that the justiciary make an agreement with Walter and satisfy him. If they went to the defence of the marches they did their duty. The K. is not wont to restore losses.

Petition of Adam de Foleborne that he may be admitted to expound the complaints of Walter Bishop of Waterford, his uncle, regarding himself and John de Folborne, Adam's brother, detained in prison among the K.'s enemies in Ireland.

Let them come to the next Parliament after Easter. The K. has ordered John to be released.

Petition of the Archbishop of Dublin. That the K. will apply counsel to the state of his land of Ireland, whereof the archbishop had reported to the K. by G[eoffrey] de Genevyle and others, and whereof the K. can be certified by Geoffrey himself and others of the K.'s Council in Ireland, who are now sitting in Parliament.

The K. having been long absent is occupied on arduous affairs of his kingdom; but the K. will as soon as he can attend to this matter, which he has much at heart.

That the K. will appoint persons to audit the account of services and fines of Irishmen, which fines the K. had by writ assigned for subsidy of Ireland.

The K. had assigned the Archbishop of Dublin, his justiciary, and Robert Bagod, to audit that account, and when this is done, the K. wills that what is contained in the writ aforesaid shall be observed, and that the archbishop be saved from expense.

That the archbishop be satisfied and saved harmless, as he had always been and will always be ready in the K.'s service; he had received nothing out of the K.'s treasure, save what he had borrowed from merchants, and what he had advanced out of his own means.

The K. well understands this, will take counsel thereupon and answer the archbishop.—The archbishop is answered by writ.

Petition of the Prior of Lanthony. Having prosecuted the process of a plea in Ireland by the K.'s writ, and having carried the record and process to the K. in Bearn, the K. had adjourned him to this Parliament; wherefore he prays hearing.

If they cause the K. to have the advowson of another church of equal value, and 2 canons to celebrate divine service for ever for the soul of the K. and his successors, the K. will make the grant.

Petition of Robert de Hastings. That the K. would deliver to him in fee the castle of Mackynegan with 2½ carucates of land, which Thomas de Isham held for a term now past. The K. had 8 years ago let this castle to Robert for a term of 20 years. Robert prays that the castle be delivered to him for a certain term, and that he be not overcharged, as he had much served the K.

Let him have his term, but the K. does not intend to demise the castle in fee; let him hold for his life if he pleases.

Petition of the Abbot of the port of St. Mary. That the plea between the abbot, plaintiff, and the Master of the Templars in Ireland, tenant, of 5 carucates of land in le Crok, be proceeded with. This plea has been delayed for 12 years and more by the charter of King Henry, the K.'s great grandfather, and the confirmation of the present K.

Let them have a day in the quinzaine of Easter in the same state as they are now in.

Petition of Robert de Callan. That having rendered his account to Brother Stephen de Foleburne, then justiciary of Ireland, of the time when he was with that justiciary in the army against O'Brienn (who had ravaged the lands of Theobald le Butiller in the K.'s custody), and delivered the Rolls of that account to the said justiciary, the treasurer of Dublin that now is had distrained him to render that account. And because he had alleged before the treasurer that he had previously rendered his account, and delivered his Rolls, the treasurer had imprisoned him for a year and still detained him; wherefore he prays the K.'s grace thereupon.

Mandate to the justiciary to inquire in the presence of the treasurer, and to certify the K. thereof.

Petition of Joan who was the wife of John de Boun. That the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland, detained from her her dower which she had recovered before the justices in England against that archbishop; she thereof had a writ of judgment to the sheriff of Dublin to cause her to have ⅓ part of the manor of Balymadan, ⅓ part of 2 mills worth 16 marks a year, ⅓ part of 11 acres of meadow, and ⅓ part of the Castle of Coumbre. She could get nothing thereof under the K.'s writ or his mandate, to her damage of 200 marks. Wherefore she prays remedy from the K.

The K. understanding that this plea is before Robert de Hengham orders him to render Joan as speedy justice as possible.

Petition of Nicholas Archbishop of Armagh. That the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, had adjudged to the K. by writ of Quo warranto the temporalities of 5 sees when vacant, namely, Derry, Dromore, Clogher, Raphoe, and Kilmore, which temporalities the archbishop and his predecessors were always wont peaceably to take in vacancy. The state of the archbishop's church is thereby now disparaged not only in its faculties, but in its liberties. Wherefore he supplicates the K. for a remedy thereupon, or that he will give compensation in lands or rents in Ireland for those liberties.

The archbishop had been answered in the Parliament of Westminster that the K. had recovered by judgment the custody of vacant sees in Ireland, to hold as those in England.

That Nicholas Taf, formerly justice of the Common Pleas, Dublin, had amerced the archbishop in 40*l.*, charging him with having unduly returned a writ of judgment directed to him; wherefore he supplicates the K. to pardon the amerciament.

Mandate to the justiciary to certify the cause to the K. at the feast of the Ascension [May 11, 1290]; and meanwhile let the amerciament be respited.

That the prebends of Armagh being poor he prays, in order to augment those prebends, that he may exchange lands or rents of the demesne of the archbishopric in Uriel with Alice de Napton (who does not hold of the K. in capite, but of Sir Theobald de Verdun) for the advowsons of 3 churches which are not worth beyond 20*l.* a year, all deductions made.

Let him save the K. from damage in time of vacancy, and the K. will take counsel.

That the K. will grant English law to an Irish woman, Isamaya by name, married to Bertram de Rapenteyn, an Englishman, because it is the custom in Ireland that Irish women may not take dower after the death of their husbands.

If she survive her husband let the archbishop certify the K., and the K. will take counsel.

Petition of Richard of Exeter. Prays the K.'s grace regarding rents levied by the escheator in Michaelmas term out of his lands after his father's death, he being at that time of full age.

The escheator records that he received the rent while the lands were in the K.'s hand. The escheator did what belonged to his office. Therefore let nothing be done.

He also prays grace regarding arrears of his father's fee amounting to 140*l.*, at 40*l.* a year fee, whereof his father had nothing for 3½ years; and also regarding 100 marks, arrears of his fee for custody of the castles of Roscommon and Randown at 20*l.*, and 4*l.* 13*s.* for works of those castles.

Mandate to the Treasurer and Barons to inquire whether there are writs at the Exchequer regarding the fee and arrears, and to certify the K. at the next Parliament,

He further prays that the K. will retake 7 townships of land held in fee farm by his father in Connaught, rendering 20*l.* a year, namely, 40*s.* for each carucate of land. The land is not worth this extent.

Richard's father held himself content during his life, and died seised thereof. Let Richard hold in the same manner if he pleases.

He also prays a charter regarding 30 librates of land in Connaught granted in fee by the K. to his father. The extent of these lands is in Chancery.

Let S. of Rochester and Master Thomas see the writs and inquisitions, and cause Richard to have a charter, if he ought to have it, according to the purport of what they shall find.

Petition of Walter de Bodenham who sues for the K. Nicholas de Hindebergh, some time sheriff of Tipperary, rendered his account at the Exchequer of Dublin, and remained 200*l.* in arrear. Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Dublin, in return for the advowson of the church of Kilbery and 10 acres of land given to him, exonerated Nicholas de Hindebergh from those arrears as far as 11 marks.

Nicholas de Clere comes and grants that he had bought for 40*l.* the said advowson and 2 acres of land only, that he was in seisin of the advowson and land, and presented John Moryz, his clerk, to the church, who was admitted, but he denies that he exonerated Nicholas, save according to what was just. This he prays may be verified by inspection of the Rolls, and by the barons of the Exchequer, Dublin.

Walter says that Nicholas can do and order what he likes in regard to those Rolls, because they are in his custody; wherefore he prays the K. that the truth may be inquired by the K.'s lieges now present in this court, and of the K.'s Council in Ireland.

The treasurer says that the Rolls are not in his custody, but in that of the ingrossers, and under their seals.

The K. wills that the Rolls be viewed and examined before the justiciary of Ireland and the barons of the Exchequer, and that they certify the K. thereupon.

Nicholas the treasurer further says that he is willing that the account be repeated.

Walter likewise complains that being bound to the K. in 12*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* for a farm which he took from the sub-escheator, and the latter having caused his chattels to be valued at the amount of that debt, and delivered to Richard Locard, clerk of the treasurer, by Walter's assent, the treasurer again caused Walter to come to the Exchequer to answer for that debt. He answered that Richard Locard had received his chattels, and ought to acquit him. The treasurer would not allow this but imprisoned him for the debt. He caused his chattels, while in prison, to be again valued at 60*s.* less than before, and caused the amount to be levied out of his chattels.

The treasurer says that Walter came to the Exchequer before him and the barons, but for no debt of the escheatry, and that by judgment of the Exchequer he was released, but on what occasion he cannot recollect, and he cannot learn without the barons.

Walter says that he is prepared to verify that he was imprisoned as aforesaid, and that he owed no debt to the K.

The justiciary of Ireland is commanded to take with him ministers and barons of the Exchequer to inquire thereupon and certify the K.

Walter complains that when imprisoned by the treasurer he could not get out until he had given a bond to Richard Locard for 6 marks 4*s.*; afterwards the treasurer caused him to answer for the bond at the Exchequer, and though he stated that he had made it in prison he was not heard, because Richard said that the chattels which he had taken from the escheator were not worth what they had been valued at by 6 marks 4*s.* The treasurer caused the chattels to be again valued by valuers different from the first, and by his adversaries, and because he challenged one of the valuers he was amerced in 100*s.* The valuation aforesaid was made against his will by his adversaries.

The treasurer says that he did nothing regarding the bond to

Richard, that he did not take an inquisition by Walter's adversaries, and that he did not amerce him in 100*s.* for a challenge. Nay Walter's exceptions were allowed by the treasurer and his associates of the Exchequer. And this he is prepared to verify.

Mandate as above.

Walter says that the imprisonment inflicted on him by Wyot Kokerel was good and reasonable, but that that caused by Richard Locard was unjust; the inquisition was taken before the Treasurer and Barons by his adversaries against his will; he did not put himself upon it; the justiciary wishes to be certified regarding it; there were 3 inrolments made of it, and he was thrice condemned.

Walter also complains that though he owed no moneys to the K., the treasurer without judgment took from him the produce of 50 acres of land sown with wheat and oats, in the autumn of a. r. 16 [1288]. Walter, his wife and children, are thereby ruined and beggared.

Nicholas says that he did not take or cause to be taken any corn from Walter. Nay, that Richard Locard, to whom Walter delivered his land, and who sowed it, took away the corn by his attorneys. And this he prays may be verified.

Mandate as above.

Walter complains that having come to the Exchequer of Dublin before the treasurer and offered him sureties for 6 marks 4*s.*, to payment of which he had been unjustly condemned, the treasurer would not admit the sureties, but caused the money to be levied out of Walter's lands and chattels, so that his land lies uncultivated to his great loss.

Afterwards Walter's wife came and asked to have something out of the chattels for her sustenance; the treasurer would not hear her but ordered her to be turned out of the Exchequer. Whereby she suffered a miscarriage before she left the vill, to wit within 8 days; and this he is prepared to verify.

The treasurer says that Richard Locard recovered by judgment of the Exchequer a debt against Walter, and as the latter would find no security, he was sentenced to imprisonment.

Walter says that he offered sufficient security, which the treasurer refused to admit.

As to the expulsion of Walter's wife, the treasurer demands judgment if he ought to answer regarding an order until the fact is proved.

Walter being asked who turned out his wife says that he knows not because he was not then or since in Ireland.

As to the miscarriage, let proceedings be taken according to common law; and as to the trespass, the justiciary of Ireland is commanded that associating with himself the ministers and barons of the Exchequer, and other discreet persons, they inquire into the truth and certify the K.

Petition of Adam de Foleburne, one of the executors of Stephen de Foleburne, Archbishop of Tuam, formerly justiciary of Ireland. That when Adam had produced to the Treasurer and Barons the K.'s writ commanding them to deliver to the executors all the chattels of deceased, when they should have given security for payment of the K.'s debts, the executors alleging that the deceased owed no debts to the K., Nicholas would not deliver to them those chattels unless they found security for 7,000*l.*; and that when Adam demanded that the treasurer should deliver to him particulars of the debts due by the deceased to the K., the treasurer refused to give those particulars, but detained the chattels.

Nicholas says that he was always ready to deliver the chattels to the executors according to the tenor of the K.'s writ, provided that they found security to satisfy the debt of deceased to the K., but as they did not do so, he caused the chattels to be taken into the K.'s hand, and so detained; and as to the particulars he says that as the deceased in his lifetime had received the K.'s moneys from the K.'s sheriffs and bailiffs, and out of farms of vills, Nicholas could not know the particulars thereof, and therefore did not deliver them.

Mandate to the justiciary as above.

That whereas after Stephen's death about 50 inquisitions were taken regarding the K.'s ministers and other matters in Ireland, and bags and boxes with writs and other secret documents were sent from England and Gascony touching conspiracies between the English and Irish to wage wars, and were sealed and placed in chests in the castle of Athlone, sealed with the seals of the Archbishop of Dublin and the Bishop of Waterford, and afterwards those chests were sent to Dublin, the treasurer caused the seals to be broken, the chests to be opened, and extracted the inquisitions aforesaid and other writings touching the K.'s Council, with the justiciary's Rolls for the whole time Stephen held office, and did his pleasure with them, so that they were never seen again, nor is it known where they are, to the disherison and great loss of the K.

Nicholas replies that after Stephen's death he went to the castle of Athlone with the present archbishop [of Dublin], and that the latter in the presence of Nicholas, the executors, and Geoffrey Brun, clerk of the K.'s works in Ireland, caused the chests to be opened, saw what was inside, broke the seals of the bags, inspected the inquisitions inclosed, afterwards caused the chests to be re-closed, and sealed them. The chests remained there for 17 weeks; they were afterwards conveyed to Dublin; when they arrived there there was a cord round them, but there was no seal; he caused them to be carried to the house of the merchants of Dublin, the keys remained with Geoffrey Brun until he sent them to Thomas of London, the K.'s receiver in Ireland, and they remained in his custody. The chests were not opened save in the presence of the archbishop or Philip, his chaplain, and were re-sealed after each view. Afterwards all writings, letters, and inquisitions were sent to the office of the chamberlain and remain there. Nicholas never unsealed the inquisitions, letters, bags, or writings, or took or made away with the chests. And this he wishes to verify by the chief justiciary and the barons of the Exchequer.

Mandate to the chief justiciary of Ireland that taking with him the barons of the Exchequer, they inquire as to the truth, and certify the K. at the next Parliament.

That Nicholas caused 50 horses left by the deceased, and worth

200 marks and more, to be valued at less than 40 marks; he likewise caused the silver vases of deceased to be sold at 17*s.* a pound, whereas the pound was worth 20*s.* and more; he retained part of these articles to his own use.

Nicholas answers that he never caused the horses to be valued or sold; Geoffrey Brun, Walter l'Enfaunt, and William de Doddingeseles by order of the chief justiciary and in presence of the executors, valued and sold the horses. As to the silver vases a writ was brought to him from the K. to levy 48*l.* out of the deceased's chattels to the use of John le Brun; he caused the chests containing the vases to be opened in the presence of the barons of the Exchequer, the justices of the Common Pleas, and Walter l'Enfaunt, one of the executors, and caused the vases to be delivered for sale to the sheriff of Dublin who sold them. That he did not sell the vases at a less price than they were worth he puts himself upon the record of the chief justiciary, the justices of the Common Pleas, and the barons of the Exchequer; and that he did not sell the horses for less than they were worth he puts himself upon the record of the chief justiciary and Walter l'Enfaunt.

Let a certificate be made.

That the treasurer wanted to sell the ornaments of deceased's chapel, worth 200*l.*

The treasurer answers that he delivered all those ornaments to the sheriff of Dublin to be safely kept until the K. sent for them. The Bishop of Ely inhibited the treasurer from selling them.

Let the Treasurer and Barons be directed to sell according to the K.'s advantage.

Adam prays that the K. will send into Ireland some discreet persons who can view the charge and discharge of the executors, and the particulars in which they are bound or not bound to the K.

The K. will order the Treasurer and Barons to do this, and has assigned the justiciary of Ireland and Robert Bagot.

That when Adam was rector of Slane and owed no debt to the K., Nicholas sold for 25 marks all his corn of that church worth 100 marks, while he was on his way to the K. in Aragon, saying that the corn belonged to the deceased.

Nicholas replies that the corn did not belong to Adam but to the Archbishop of Tuam, and he says that one Thomas de Lynham, clerk, assigned by the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland, the Treasurer and Barons, and others of the K.'s Council of Ireland, and the executors, to make an inventory of the chattels of deceased, found by a good inquisition, which inquisition is in the K.'s Treasury in Ireland, that the corn belonged to the deceased. Thomas sold that corn, and it was not Nicholas's act whether Thomas sold it at a greater or a lesser price.

Adam says that the Archbishop of Tuam had no property in that corn save as Adam's proctor while he was away from Ireland; and that Thomas sold the corn by order of the treasurer, who had assigned him to do so.

Mandate to the justiciary to view the Rolls and inquisitions, and certify the K. thereupon.

That the treasurer went to Richard le Fleming, patron of the church of Slane, and prevailed on him to give to the treasurer power to present to that church if vacant; the treasurer immediately presented his brother to that church although full; the brother not prosecuting this presentation the treasurer, of malice, presented one Henry of Exeter, who never existed; he afterwards presented Geoffrey of Oxford, who resigned his church of Galtrim to the use of Walter [sic] aforesaid, in the hope of having the church of Slane; the Bishop of Meath admitted Geoffrey to that church and immediately instituted him without inquisition taken and without calling on Adam to state his case, by reason of the bishop's dread of the treasurer; and on the morrow the treasurer by virtue of the K.'s power, which is subject to the treasurer's will in Ireland, ejected Adam from the church [of Slane] aforesaid. Adam therefore prays that the K. will afford him a remedy for this spoliation.

The treasurer says that Adam was not ejected from this church through his malice, but that the Bishop of Meath, the diocesan, hearing that Adam, parson of Slane, had not been ordained within a year, caused him to be cited before him, and finding that it was so the bishop deprived him, and ordered the representatives of Richard le Flemeng, the patron, to present to that church. They presented Geoffrey of Oxon, who still holds it. And that he did not do otherwise the treasurer prays may be inquired by the ordinary.

Let the treasurer prosecute letters to the Bishop of Meath to certify the K. in Parliament, and let Adam have a writ if he pleases.

That the treasurer with Elias of Winchester and John of Kent broke the locks of 2 chests of the said bishop in the castle of Dublin, in which secret documents of the K. and of the bishop were preserved; that the treasurer without order or assent of the K.'s Council took from and placed in them whatever he pleased, replaced the locks and sealed the chests. For this he prays remedy on behalf of the K. and the deceased.

The treasurer says that he never broke the locks nor removed any thing in the chests, and that he never went there, and this he will verify according to judgment of the court.

Mandate to the justiciary and barons to inquire the truth, and certify thereupon to the K.

That Andrew, Adam's brother, being in possession of the church of Kells the treasurer treated Reginald de Dene, the patron, with such harshness that he would not deliver to him his lands as extended until he had presented the treasurer's brother to that church; having obtained the presentation he also treated the Bishop of Leighlin with such harshness that he admitted his brother against his conscience. The treasurer did this by the K.'s power, and if any person ought to have conferred this church the K. ought to have conferred it while Reginald was under age and in custody of the K.

The treasurer says that Adam's brother was never spoliated of the church by harshness inflicted on the bishop or the patron, but that the bishop announced to Reginald, the patron, that the church was vacant on account as well of infancy as of defect of orders and other reasons which he alleged against Andrew, and that he should present to it; and he thereupon sent letters to the patron. And of this he puts himself upon the patron and the bishop; and this he wishes to verify according to judgment of the court. As to the allegation that the K. ought to have presented to this church by reason of Reginald's minority, and his being therefore in custody, the treasurer says that this church is within the liberty of the Earl Marshal, where the K. has no custody either of lands or churches; and that the lands to which the church belongs are held in socage, on which account Reginald presented thereto as he who had recovered in socage from the earl, by recognizance of assize, the manor to which the church belongs.

Adam says that the custody of lands and advowsons of those under age and who hold in capite in every liberty belongs to the K., as in England. Stephen de Foleburne, formerly justiciary, had purchased from the Earl Marshal all he had in lands and advowsons, until Reginald's age, and thereupon the bishop presented Andrew. The K. ought to have presented because the custodies of the bishop aforesaid were in his hands.

The treasurer says that the justiciary had nothing by way of custody in that manor when he died, because Reginald was seised of the manor and had recovered it against the earl; that Stephen did not hold the custody, or present to the church, but that Reginald, who had married Stephen's niece, did.

Adam says that the bishop died seised of the custody of Reginald, and presented to the church as guardian, and prays that this may be inquired into on the K.'s behalf.

Let a record be sent to the chief justiciary of Ireland that taking with him the justices of the Common Pleas, they inquire as to the truth, and certify the K. The Bishop of Leighlin is also commanded to certify the K., and meanwhile not to change the state of the rectory.

That when Andrew aforesaid was in possession of the church of Kylbery, immediately after the death of Stephen, the treasurer ejected him and his tenants from that church, and intruded John Moryz, his clerk, without institution by the bishop, and John still holds this church, wherefore he prays remedy from the K.

The treasurer says that he never ejected Andrew from that church, but if he was ejected it was by William de Whasseburne, on whom the Bishop of Meath, the ordinary, conferred the church, for lapse of time; that afterwards the treasurer having learnt that William had no title, and that the church was vacant, presented John Moryz thereto, having purchased the presentation of Nicholas de Hindeborgh, the patron, who had been admitted by the bishop.

Mandate to the Bishop of Meath to inquire as to the truth and certify the K. in the next Parliament.

Petition of William de Beltesdale. That he had been in the K.'s service for a long time, but had had no promotion save the church of Kylskyry of the gift of William D'Aunay [de Alneto], patron thereof; that he had been instituted, and in peaceful possession for 3 years, when the treasurer ousted him while in the K.'s service in England, and caused him to be presented to the same against the statute, &c. Wherefore he prays that the church with its fruits, extended at 200*l.*, may be restored to him.

Nicholas says that William never was ousted out of that church by him, but that William de Alnetone was rector, and died parson instituted thereof; after his death, William D'Aunay, the patron, presented William de Beltesdale thereto; he was instituted by the bishop, and does not now hold it; the fruits after the death of William de Alnetone, according to the custom of the country, remained to the deceased for 1 year. And this he wishes to verify according to judgment of the court.

William de Beltesdale avows that William de Alnetone was some time parson of that church, but he was afterwards deprived by the diocesan because he had received the vicarage of Dundalk; he nevertheless resigned his right in the church of Kylskyry, and William de Beltesdale was presented thereto by the patron and instituted therein, so that William de Alnetone had at his death nothing in that church as rector.

Mandate to the Bishop of Meath to inquire as to the truth and certify the K.

1. Petition of William Bishop of Emly. That whereas the K. had granted to him of special grace the fruits of the see from the time when the Pope called him to that dignity until the time when he rendered fealty to the K., and had by his letters commanded the treasurer of Dublin to deliver to the bishop or his attorney the fruits and issues of that see, the treasurer for $1\frac{1}{2}$ year refused to perform this precept, to the damage of the bishop and of the K.

The treasurer answers that as soon as the bishop's attorney took a sufficient warrant to him to deliver the issues to the bishop, and as soon as he had money to make payments, he delivered to the merchants of Lucca, by consent of Gilbert le Sauvage, the bishop's attorney, the amount accruing from those issues, in payment of a debt of Otho de Grandison, in which the bishop was bound for farm of lands held of Otho in Ireland; and he is prepared to verify, according to judgment of the court, that he only retained the issues for so long a time, because no sufficient warrant had been brought to him.

Mandate to the justiciary to associate with himself the barons, see the tenor of the writs, and inquire when the treasurer received them, and how long he retained the issues after receiving the writs. They shall thereupon certify the K.

2. The bishop having taken lands in Ireland to farm from Sir Otho de Grandison, and the bishop's attorneys there not having paid the rent at the first gale day, and this because the treasurer had not delivered the fruits of the see to the bishop's attorneys as the K. had commanded, the treasurer distrained for the rent in the lands of the see and in those of Sir Otho, to the damage of 300*l.*

The treasurer answers as before that as soon as he had a warrant and money, he paid without malicious detention. As to the distraints made against the bishop, he says that a writ came to him from England to levy out of the bishop's lands and chattels 750*l.* for a debt acknowledged to be due to Otho de Grandison, and that he sent the writ to the sheriffs of Tipperary and Limerick in order to levy the debt.

The bishop's attorney says that it was the treasurer's whole fault that the farm was not paid at its terms, because the latter did not pay the bishop as commanded by the K.'s writ.

Let the justices see whether they have by the writ which came from England warrant to levy as well from the lands and chattels of the bishop as of Otho; and let them certify the K.

3. When the bishop heard of the distraints against him in Ireland, he went from England at great expense to the former country. The treasurer having learnt of his arrival, caused more grievous distraints to be made, although the bishop's bailiffs, before his arrival in Ireland, had paid 400*l.* out of the farm and property of the bishop, and out of his see. The bishop on his arrival only knew that he had been injured in the loss of his chattels, but he was altogether hindered, so that he could not levy anything out of, or obtain aid from his farm. He therefore prays the K. to cause this to be amended.

The treasurer says that he caused no grievous distraint nor harshness to be inflicted on the bishop, save that he ordered the sheriffs aforesaid to levy the moneys out of the bishop's lands and chattels, according to the purport of the K.'s writ, and the recognizance to Otho.

Mandate to the justices as above.

4. Afterwards when the bishop on his arrival in Ireland could not obtain a relaxation of these grievous distraints, nor raise money out of his see or his farm, he went to the Archbishop of Dublin and obtained from him a respite from the feast of All Saints until Christmas next ensuing, within which term the bishop paid for the farm aforesaid 706*l.* out of his private property, and not out of his see nor the farm aforesaid. The bishop can therefrom verify that the delay in paying Sir Otho's farm did not rest with the bishop but with the treasurer, by reason of the harshness and grievances inflicted on him by the latter. And this he prays may be amended both to Sir Otho and the bishop.

Nicholas says that he did not make distraints or inflict grievances on the bishop, save that he sent the K.'s writs to the sheriffs.

Mandate to justices to certify, as before.

5. When the bishop visited the church de Ballilogo, and was lodged in the house of the lord of that vill, the sheriff of Limerick, by order of the treasurer, with a multitude of men, horses, and arms entered the bishop's lodging, took away all the horses of the bishop and his retinue, put their saddles on them and rode away. They retained them until the bishop went to the treasurer and gave him full satisfaction. He also against the statute distrained the bishop by 20 oxen of his ploughs.

The treasurer answers that he made no distraint against the bishop of horses or of oxen; and if the sheriff had done him an injury, he has his action against the sheriff. It seems to him that he ought not to be held responsible for a precept before he is convicted of fact. The bishop when he left Ireland owed Sir Otho 450*l.*

The bishop's attorney says that the bishop went to the treasurer and complained of the distraints, but the treasurer defended them and caused them to be persisted in until the bishop answered the charges brought against him.

The treasurer says as before.

Mandate to the justiciary that associating with himself the barons, he cause the sheriffs to appear in the Exchequer. The bishop shall prosecute his suit before them. And having viewed the tenor of the sheriff's writ whereby he levied, and heard the parties, they shall certify the K. at the next Parliament.

6. The bishop's attorney further says that the sheriff of Limerick, by the treasurer's order, sequestrated the bishop's corn, and sealed up his granges, so that neither he nor his men could lay their hands on them; that nevertheless they demanded all Sir Otho's debts of him, and would not allow him to levy those debts out of his own property, but retained all the chattels of the bishop's manors, and placed under a sequestration Sir Otho's manors, which the bishop held to farm, so that the bishop could not lay his hands on them.

The treasurer answers that he neither made nor caused to be made any distraint, save that he sent to the sheriff of Limerick the K.'s writ from England to levy out of the bishop's lands and chattels a certain sum of money in which he was bound to Sir Otho de Grandison; if the sheriff had exceeded the mandate let him answer.

Mandate to the justiciary as before.

7. The bishop's attorney also says that the sheriff of Tipperary by the treasurer's order seized 700 sheep, worth 60*l.*, and sold them by order of the same, and would not allow the bishop therefor in the payment of his farm.

The treasurer answers that one Walter Uncle, formerly sheriff of Tipperary, remained in arrear on his account to the amount of 550*l.*, by reason whereof he caused him to be arrested. Walter escaped from the custody of the marshal into England, and the sheriff was therefore commanded to seize all his chattels into the K.'s hand, and to deliver to Walter le Bret the custody thereof for the K.'s use, and to levy the arrears thereout. Walter le Bret subsequently testified in his account of the chattels that Walter Uncle removed the 700 sheep and delivered them to the bishop to deceive the K. and deprive him of his debt.

The Treasurer and Barons ordered the sheriff to inquire thereupon; and it having been ascertained by the inquisition made by the sheriff that the sheep were so removed, the sheriff was ordered to take them into the K.'s hand. The treasurer is prepared to verify by the barons of the Exchequer that the sheep were not seized in any other way.

The bishop's attorney says that Walter had the sheep from the bishop for a certain sum of money due to him, nearly 2 years before he rendered his account, and before it could be ascertained that his account was in arrear to the K.

Mandate to the justiciary that associating with himself the justices of the Common Pleas and barons of the Exchequer, they inquire as to the truth, and certify the K. in the next Parliament.

8. The bishop's attorney further says that whereas the Pope had granted to the bishop the first fruits for 3 years out of vacant benefices in his diocese, and within that time one Elias of Winchester received a prebend in the church of Emly, and the bishop by virtue of this privilege sequestrated the fruits of the prebend, the sheriff of Limerick by order of the treasurer violated the sequestration, sold all the fruits, and asported them to the value of 40*l.*, without making any allowance to the bishop.

The treasurer answers that he never violated the bishop's sequestration nor levied anything out of the fruits of the prebend, and this he is prepared to verify; but that a writ came to him from England to levy from Elias the debts of the Lord James of Spain. Elias then came to the Exchequer of Dublin and acknowledged that he was bound to the Lord James in 4 score marks, and the sheriff was thereupon ordered to levy those 4 score marks out of Elias's goods and chattels. If the sheriff did anything against common justice let him answer for his act.

Mandate to the justiciary as before that associating with himself the justices of the Common Pleas and the barons of the Exchequer, they inquire as to the truth and certify the K.

9. Afterwards on Thursday before Easter, a. r. 17 [April 7, 1289], the sheriffs of Tipperary and Limerick came to the bishop's manor of Emly and his other manors, and by order of the treasurer levied from his tenants with great harshness the bishop's farms and rents for Easter following, to the bishop's damage of 100*l.* The men of Otho de Grandison would never afterwards be intentive or respondent to the bishop. As the treasurer sent other keepers to take away all the profits as well of his see as of Otho's land, and caused the men of Otho's land to be directed not to be intentive to the bishop, the latter left the country through want, for he neither had nor has anything to live upon save by his friends in England.

They also seized against the statute 40 oxen yoked to his ploughs at Emly, and drove them away at their pleasure. Wherefore the bishop prays that the K. will exonerate him from payment of the rent of Otho's land, from the time when the treasurer sent other keepers against his will, and altogether kept him out.

The treasurer says that a writ came from England to the Treasurer and Barons, Dublin, commanding them to levy out of the bishop's lands and chattels 750*l.* of the debt acknowledged in the Chancery of England to be due to Otho; he delivered this writ to the sheriffs of Tipperary and Limerick that they might cause the debt to be levied according to the tenor of the writ, and that he caused no other injury he is prepared to verify. As to removal of bailiffs he says that he never removed any. The bishop's bailiffs still remain.

Mandate to the justiciary as before.

10. The K. having enjoined the bishop at his departure from Gascony to inquire when he arrived in Ireland, as to the state of affairs in that country, and thereupon certify the K., the bishop having made many inquiries sent letters regarding them to the K.

This being done, one William de Drayton, who represented himself as of the family of Sir Otho de Grandison, came to the bishop, and told him quickly to go to the K., his lord, in parts beyond the sea. William asked the bishop if he wished to send any letter to his lord, and faithfully promised to act as the bishop's messenger in those parts. The bishop delivered to him, inclosed in a box sealed with the bishop's seal, a letter to the Bishop of Bath on the state of affairs, with 2 other letters to Sir Otho and the Chancellor, together with an account of his expenses. William then departed, went to the treasurer of Dublin, opened the box, and caused the letters of advice of the state of affairs, and those to Sir Otho and the Chancellor, to be read. After the letter on the state of affairs had been shown the treasurer never ceased to oppress and ruin the bishop so far as he could. When the treasurer had seen the letters William returned the box to the bishop unsealed and the letters to Sir Otho and the Chancellor opened, with the excuse that he did not know who had opened the box and the letters; but he openly told the bishop that this deceit had been practised on him in the treasurer's chamber. The letter on the state of affairs was retained by the treasurer. William supplicated the bishop that he would seal other letters and he would be his messenger; but the bishop would not do this on account of the deceit and treachery practised on him. It is clear that this breach of trust to the K. and the bishop was made by collusion between the treasurer and William, because they had previously been at discord, and ever afterwards William wore the robes of the treasurer. The bishop for the K. and himself prays a remedy thereupon.

William comes and avows that he received four pairs of letters to the Bishop of Bath and to Sir Otho de Grandison; that he put them into a box, and lost that box at Clonmel, where the assizes were being taken before the justices; that afterwards at 1 o'clock he caused it to be proclaimed through the vill that he would give half a mark to him who had found it; that subsequently at 9 o'clock the box was found in the hands of children, who had opened it and taken the wax off the letters; that afterwards he sent the letters to the bishop to be re-sealed; and that he is prepared to verify that the box never was opened by him, and the wax taken off; that he never showed the letters to the treasurer because the treasurer was 4 score miles away; that he had committed no treachery; and this he is prepared to verify.

The attorney says that William retained the letters for nearly 15 days by collusion between him and the treasurer; that they opened the box, broke the seals, and read the letters, and were thereby reconciled, having previously been enemies; that when William sent the letters to be re-sealed he retained that touching the state of affairs, and it was never seen again. And this he is prepared to verify.

The treasurer says that he ought not to answer thereof until William is convicted.

Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to distrain William aforesaid so as to have his body here in 1 month of Easter, meanwhile to *inquire regarding the truth of the premises, and certify the K. at the same term.

11. The K. having granted to the bishop the manor of Netherlak to hold for his life, yearly rendering the extent thereof, and having sent his writ thereupon to Walter de la Haye, the escheator, the latter by abetment of the treasurer and of malice, made such an extent that whereas the acre had been previously extended at 12*d.* a year he caused it to be extended at 17*d.*, and whereas the township of land had been let at 7 marks, he caused it to be extended at 10 marks, and he caused everything belonging to that manor to be extended at more than its true value, to the bishop's loss, whereof he prays remedy.

The escheator acknowledges that he caused the manor to be re-extended by the K.'s writ for the K.'s advantage, and not through malice to the bishop. He is ready to answer to the K. for the extent if the bishop will not hold to it.

Let him demise the manor if he pleases, and let the escheator answer therefor.

12. Afterwards, when the bishop had taken the manor by another extent, and was thereof seised, the escheator, by abetment of the treasurer at Pentecost, a. r. 17 [May 29, 1289] deprived the bishop of pleas, amerciaments of the hundred, and of the court of Netherlak, so that afterwards he could not have any of the pleas and perquisites of the hundred and court, to the bishop's damage, and principally because whereas the tenants of the manor owed services in the autumn and at other times, after the liberty of the manor had been taken away from him he could not have his court of the tenants, and they would not answer to him. Nevertheless he paid the full extent to the K., whereof he prays remedy.

The escheator acknowledges that he took the esplees of the hundred and of the court by order of the K. and by letters patent, which came to him under green wax of the Exchequer, Dublin, and he avows that he took them to the K.'s use. As to the services and aids in autumn he says that he never took them, and that he does not know that the tenants ought to render such services.

The escheator did as he was ordered.

Whereas in the manor of Netherlak it was the custom that a thief convicted of larceny, whereby he has to undergo judgment, should not be released for less than 5 marks, or should be hanged, the escheator by his ministers permitted a thief convicted of larceny in the full hundred to go for 5 shillings, and gave him his life, in prejudice of and contrary to rule of the K., and the liberty of the manor. The bishop prays on behalf of the K. that this be inquired into.

Let the bishop prosecute if he pleases, and when the thief shall have been convicted the K. will cause justice to be done. [Q.R., Parliamentary 645, H.C.H. 3150, 4 membr's.]

559. Expenses of journies to divers parts of Ireland of [John] Archbishop of Dublin, when keeper of Ireland.

Mem. that on the death of S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, justiciary of Ireland, all those of the K.'s Council in Ireland were by writs under the Irish seal summoned to Dublin on Wednesday next after the octaves of Sts. Peter and Paul, a. r. 16 [July 7, 1288], when all by common assent settled that [John] Archbishop of Dublin should be keeper of Ireland until the K. should otherwise provide. The latter, out of reverence for the K. and people, took upon himself the office of justiciary, and remained at Dublin at his own expense until Tuesday the feast of St. Margaret [July 20], when he departed for Connaught to survey the K.'s castles, and pacify that land, as the constables there had always thwarted the former justiciary during his lifetime. It was then provided by the entire council that G[ ] Brun should defray the expenses of that journey out of the K.'s money, but before the departure of the Archbishop of Dublin he caused the K.'s service to be proclaimed in Ireland on the morrow of the Nativity of Blessed Mary [Sept. 9] next ensuing at Kildare, against the Irish of Offaly [and] Leys, &c., who were in a state of war. When the archbishop had come from Connaught for the war of Offaly and Leys, he took his way towards Ryban and Mayrath, to guard those parts and to parley with the Irish there. It was thenceforth provided that Stephen de Olington, clerk, should pay the keeper's expenses. He commenced on Monday below contained to pay those expenses whensoever the keeper ought to proceed at the cost of the K.

And be it known that afterwards on Thursday, morrow of the Nativity of Blessed Mary [Sept. 9], at Kildare, came the whole service of Leinster due to the K. The keeper then appointed the Prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland, Walter l'Enfaunt, and Richard de Saham as clerks to enter defaults and survey the whole service which came there [represented] by 4 seneschals of Leinster. Having been duly passed in review by the keeper, it was provided that the seneschal of Kildare should guard the marches of Offaly, Totemoy, Rathymegan, and Kildare, as far as Kilross; the seneschal of Wexford, the marches of Kilross by le Ryban to Moyrath; the seneschal of Carlow, from Mayrath to Calcet of Leye; and the seneschal of Kilkenny, from Calcet of Leye by those marches to Dunselach, and that so long as the service should last they should remain in those parts, which were then very hostile. Afterwards the keeper went to le Ryban and remained there for 4 days to survey the service, whereof the expenses commence as below, but during this time he was at his own charges, because 'he lay at Balymad' his own manor. If the K. will grant him his expenses incurred at Balymad' for 4 days he prays for them.

Mem. The service aforesaid having been found provided with horses, arms, and good soldiers, news came to the keeper that Donald Roche and other Irishmen of Desmond began to be hostile soon after the justiciary's death. Then the keeper made preparations to go to those parts, and to return before the end of the service. He took into his retinue Sir W. de Beverley, then Chancellor of Ireland, and Sir W. l'Enfaunt, who with their households went to those parts. Then the keeper held a parley with the Irish aforesaid, and a treaty was made so that all came to the K.'s peace; and they having been received thereto, the keeper returned to parts of Leinster, and came thither before the end of the service. His expenses in the voyage aforesaid began on Saturday below contained.

These custodies having been ordered, the keeper by the K.'s advice caused the eyre of the justices in the county of Tipperary to be proclaimed, constituting Sirs William de Barry, John de Houton', Robert de Haking, Roger Andrew, and William de Weston as justices of that eyre, namely, on the morrow of St. Hilary, a. r. 17 [Jan. 14, 1288–9]. And as many arduous and urgent matters touching the magnates of that land were to be administered there, the keeper came thither on the 1st day of the eyre, remaining there for some days to instruct the justices. From those parts he made a kind of tourn to Desmond, newly become rebellious, in order to expedite some matters for the K. which he had previously omitted. The expenses thereof begin on Thursday feast of St. Hilary, in the year aforesaid.

Mem. that the Irish of Offaly and Leys, rebels and enemies of the K., remained so hostile that no peace could be established in the marches of Leinster, but the K.'s lieges were daily killed, their houses burned, and intolerable depredations were made. The keeper assiduously devoted himself throughout the whole autumn of a. r.

17 [1289] to restore the K.'s peace, parleying with the Irish at le Ryban, Moyraet, and Rosglas, but he could not draw them to the K.'s peace. At length in compliance with the K.'s Council he made provision to invade them with an army. So that on Saturday next after the Nativity of Blessed Mary [Sept. 10] in the same autumn, he prepared himself and went from Balymor to Balkinglas, and there caused to be summoned before him as well the English as the Irish of the mountains of Dublin and adjacent parts, who all promised at his request to be ready to attack the rebels. This done on the Sunday following he went to Carlow, and afterwards to le Lough near Kilkenny, where he remained for 3 days. He there ordered and commanded all men of good will to the K. throughout Leinster and Munster to come with their force to Butavaunt in Leys. It was ordered that expeditions should be everywhere directed against the rebels' lands. He then went to Cashel to expedite certain arduous affairs of the K. and people, and afterwards to Aghbo to again parley with the rebels, but he found them so hardened that they did not care to come to peace. The keeper was engaged in carrying out the premises, until he led the army for 10 days, whereof the expenses commence on Saturday aforesaid.

And be it known that by this expedition the Irish as well of Offaly as Leys came to the K.'s peace and were never hostile again. The keeper soon afterwards caused a Parliament to be proclaimed at Dublin, and there by all the magnates of Ireland regulated the state of that country. He was employed in holding pleas of the K. and exercising his office in the county of Dublin and the liberties of Leinster until Christmas next ensuing; he afterwards held another Parliament at Dublin, about the feast of Hilary next ensuing, by all the magnates of Ireland, and so was continuously intentive to royal affairs in those parts until Easter. In Easter week, a. r. 18 [April 2–9, 1290] he held another Parliament at Kilkenny, and so was occupied from day to day on the K.'s service until Saturday next after the feast of the Apostles Philip and James [May 6, 1290], when he heard news that the Irish had transgressed against the peace at Athlone, and that the bridge of Athlone was falling; he then prepared himself and went to those parts. The expenses thereof begin on Saturday aforesaid as appears by accounts, and he was 9 days in going, remaining, and returning.

The state of Ireland having been regulated and orders thereupon given to the K.'s ministers there according to the Irish council, the keeper prepared himself to survey that land and the deeds of the ministers aforesaid, so that justice might be done to all and the K.'s dignity everywhere maintained. Throughout his eyre he caused it to be commanded that all those complaining of the K.'s ministers or of others in Ireland should be before him on certain days to receive justice in all things; whereupon he took his journey from Dublin to Drogheda, thence to Kells in Meath, thence to Mullingar, and so to Connaught. He there caused all constables of that land to be called before him, who all promised and swore to keep the K.'s peace. From Connaught he went to the county of Tipperary, thence to Limerick, thence to Cork, and thence to Waterford. In these counties he rectified the K.'s affairs so that Ireland was ever afterwards at peace. The expenses thereof begin on Wednesday next after the feast of St. Barnabas the Apostle, as appears below. He was 65 days in going, remaining, and returning.

Feb. 14. 589. The K. assigns J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin and Robert Bagot to audit the accounts of the services and fines made with the K. by the Irish, and received during the time the K. had assigned them for the defence of Ireland; and to examine by the Rolls of the Exchequer, Dublin, and other evidences, the charges and discharges of Stephen de Fuleburne, late Archbishop of Dublin, deceased, of the time when he was justiciary and treasurer of Ireland, touching all the debts in which he was bound to the K. at his death. Mandate that they meet on certain days and at certain places and perform the premises. They shall certify under their seal at the next Parliament at Westminster at Easter, so that the K. may have their certificate with this writ by the morrow of the Holy Trinity at latest. Feb. 15. 591. The K.'s writ to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. Sends under his seal certain complaints made before the K. by W[illiam] Bishop of Emly against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of the Exchequer, Dublin, and Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, together with the answers of the treasurer and escheator to those complaints. Mandate that having associated with himself the justices of the Common Plea, the barons of the Exchequer, and such others of the K.'s lieges as he may deem fit, and having inspected the complaints and answers, searched the Rolls and writs of the Exchequer, and if necessary taken a sworn inquisition by the oath of knights and other good and lawful men, the justiciary shall send to the K. by the morrow of the Holy Trinity next ensuing, under the seal which the K. uses in Ireland, what shall be found in the premises. Westminster.

[Indorsed.] On Monday next before the Annunciation [March 20, 1289–90] this writ was handed by the treasurer to the Archbishop of Dublin, then holding the place of justiciary of Ireland.

Complaints of William Bishop of Emly to the K. with replies thereto [ante, Petitions, &c., pp. 259–264.]

Note as to issues of the see :—

1. It here appears that the delay in restoring the issues arose because the treasurer said that the first writ directed to him from England was not a sufficient warrant; and as soon as he had such a warrant the issues were restored. Transcripts of these writs are annexed to this Roll.

Note as to writs from England :—

2. It here appears that by virtue of the K.'s writs directed to the treasurer from England, the latter ordered the sheriffs of Tipperary and Limerick to levy the debt of Otho de Grandison according to the form of the writs transcripts of which are thereto annexed, and that he made restitution of the issues as above.

Note as to distraints :—

3. It here appears that the treasurer had caused no distraint nor harshness to be inflicted on the bishop save that he ordered the sheriffs to levy Otho's debt as above by writs of the Exchequer, transcripts whereof are annexed hereto.

Further note as to distraints :—

5. It here appears that the treasurer did nothing regarding the distraints save sending writs to the above sheriffs to levy the debt of Otho aforesaid. The inquisitions sent to the K. with this Roll sufficiently show what was done in regard to distraints of horses and chattels made by William Uncle, then sheriff of Limerick, to whom the writs were directed.

Note as to fruits of a prebend :—

8. It here appears that by the K.'s command directed from England as well to the justiciary as the treasurer of Ireland, and obtained by Elias of Winchester, and also by the inquisition afterwards taken, every thing touching the present article was done by procurement of the said Elias, and by William Uncle aforesaid, sheriff of Limerick, who had an order according to the tenor of the writ, and not by the treasurer. The inquisition and a transcript of the mandate annexed to the Roll are sent to the K.

Note as to distraints and removal of bailiffs :—

9. The allegations regarding distraints are answered above. As to removal of bailiffs it appears from acknowledgments of the bishop's bailiffs in Ireland, and from an inquisition thereupon taken, that the treasurer did not remove any.

Note regarding the manor of Netherlak :—

11. An inquiry has been made regarding this article, and the inquisition thereupon has been sent to the K. as above.

Note as to pleas and perquisites of the court of Netherlak, &c. :—

12. It here appears by record of the barons and ministers of the Exchequer that the treasurer ordered the escheator to take into the K.'s hand all pleas and perquisites of the court of the hundred of Natherlak, Inchecoyn, and elsewhere throughout the bailiwick of the escheatry on account of complaints of grievances inflicted on the tenants by the farmers of the courts aforesaid, whereof he had promised that a sufficient warrant should be made to him, and he issued to the escheator letters patent under green wax, whereof a transcript is annexed to this Roll. Nevertheless an inquisition was taken regarding the escheator's act.

Note as to customs of the manor of Netherlak :—

13. This article has been inquired into, as appears by the same inquisition.

Writs, &c. annexed to this Roll.

The K.'s writ to Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland. Having of special grace granted to W[illiam] Bishop of Emly all the fruits and issues of his see from the time when he had been promoted thereto until the K. had received fealty from him, the K. had commanded Walter de le Haye, escheator of Ireland, to deliver those fruits and issues to him; but the escheator having been unable to do so because he had ere receiving the K.'s mandate delivered them to the treasurer and chamberlains of Dublin, mandate to the treasurer to restore the fruits and issues to the bishop according to the K.'s grant. Bourg la Reine in Gascony, April 4, a. r. 16 [1288].

[Indorsed.] Total to be restored, 139*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.* This sum cannot be restored without the K.'s writ of Liberate to the treasurer and chamberlains; and so it was written back to the K.

The K.'s writ to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. Otho de Grandison having on the 1st Jan., a. r. 15 [1286–7] delivered to William then elect, but now Bishop of Emly, all his land in the cantreds of Oconach, Yfweyn, and Muscry, Ireland, for a term of 10 years, for 500*l.* a year payable to Otho or his attorney, as appears in a deed of agreement made between the parties, the K. had caused this agreement to be inrolled on the Rolls of Chancery. And the bishop having bound himself that the Treasurer and Barons might levy arrears out of the bishop's property moveable and immoveable, the K. commands them to cause a transcript of the agreement extracted from the Rolls of Chancery to be inrolled on the Rolls of the Exchequer, and to cause the contents to be fulfilled, provided that they cause to be levied out of the bishop's lands and chattels 750*l.* which he ought to have paid to Otho for the lands, but which he had not paid, and that they cause them to be delivered to Otho or his attorney. Bourg la Reine in Gascony. April 28, a. r. 16 [1288].

Writ of Liberate to the treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer, Dublin, commanding them to pay to W[illiam] Bishop of Emly 139*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.* which Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, received of the issues of that bishopric after the bishop had been promoted to that church and the K. had given the royal assent, namely, from the feast of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, a. r. 14 [Sept. 8, 1286] until the morrow of the close of Easter next following [April 14, 1287] each day included. The escheator had charged himself with this money in his account at the Exchequer, and the K. had ordered it to be restored to the bishop of special grace, as is contained in the K.'s writ under the Great Seal of England, directed to the treasurer. Witness, the Archbishop of Tuam, justiciary of Ireland. Dublin, June 16, a. r. 16 [1288].

[Indorsed.] For W[illiam] Bishop of Emly. Total received in the term of Easter, a. r. 16 by this writ, 139*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.*

Writ to Robert Mauncel, sheriff of Tipperary. Whereas the Bishop of Emly is bound to Otho de Grandison in 750*l.* for 2½ years' rent of Otho's lands held to farm by the bishop, the K. commands the sheriff to cause that amount to be levied to Bendinus Pannik and his associates, merchants of Lucca, out of the bishop's lands and chattels, to the use of Otho. The sheriff shall not distrain for any portion of the above sum which appears by letters of the above merchants to have been paid by the bishop or his proctors. Witness, J. de Kenley, Chancellor of the Exchequer aforesaid. July 12, a. r. 16 [1288].

Deed poll whereby Gilbert le Sauvage, seneschal of the Bishop of Emly in Ireland, acknowledges to have received from Nicholas de Clere, the K.'s treasurer in Ireland, by the hands of Bendinus Panic, merchant of Lucca, 139*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.* in silver of the issues of the see aforesaid in the K.'s hand, and granted to him by the K.'s writ. Sir Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, had previously paid this amount to the treasurer at the Exchequer, Dublin. Given at Dublin, July 15, a. r. 16 [1288].

Writ to Robert Mauncel, sheriff of Tipperary. Whereas W[illiam] Bishop of Emly had undertaken to pay before Christmas next ensuing to Bendinus Panuk and his associates, merchants of Lucca, for the use of Otho de Grandison, 228*l.* out of 465*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* in which he is bound to Otho, and to find sufficient security for the residue, the K. commands the sheriff to levy out of the bishop's goods and chattels to the merchants aforesaid, the above 465*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* to be paid to Otho. If the bishop's goods in the sheriff's bailiwick do not suffice for payment of the debt the sheriff shall take from the bishop such security as the sheriff may be willing to answer for, and shall have it before the barons of the Exchequer on the morrow of St. Hilary [Jan. 14]. Witness N[icholas] de Clare, treasurer of Ireland. Jan. 14, a. r. 17 [1288–9].

A similar writ to William Uncle, sheriff of Limerick. Jan. 14, a. r. 17 [1288–9].

The K.'s writ to Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland. Had received a pitiful complaint that the K.'s tenants of the escheator's bailiwick, to whom the escheator had delivered in the name of custody for a certain rent the pleas and perquisites of the K.'s courts, are by the extortion of parties exceeding the extent by a hundred fold and more, grievously damnified and depauperated. The K., feeling for this oppression, commands the escheator not to permit for the future those pleas and perquisites to be made over to any persons, or the courts to be held save by those deputed by the escheator, but that he cause to be collected for the K.'s use what can be levied by his bailiff's without inconvenience and grievance to the K.'s tenants. And he shall cause all those who have extorted money by molesting the tenants to be so castigated that it may cause others to fear to offend, and provide for the indemnity of the tenants. In testimony whereof the seal of the Exchequer is appended to these presents. Witness, N[icholas] de Clere, treasurer of Ireland. July 13, a. r. 17 [1289].

Writ commanding William Uncle, sheriff of Limerick, to cause all the debts due in his bailiwick to Otho de Grandison, as well out of issues of lands of the see of Emly as out of lands and rents held to farm of said Otho by W[illiam] Bishop of Emly, to be levied, and to cause them to be delivered to merchants of Lucca of the society of Bendinus by view of William de Drayton, in part payment of arrears in which the bishop is bound to Otho. The sheriff shall certify to the Exchequer on the morrow of St. Peter ad vincula [Aug. 2] touching the execution of this writ; and shall have this writ there. Witness, Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland. July 19, a. r. 17 [1289]

Inquisition taken at Kilkenny on Thursday in Pentecost week, a. r. 18 [May 25, 1290], by the jurors underwritten, namely:—James de Valle, Philip Baroun, John de Alta Ripa, William Haket de Gel, Henry Fitz John, John le Blount de Glopel, Walter Stonhard, John le Blount de Lochon, Henry Fitz Thomas, Ralph de Camerâ, Robert Fitz Andrew, Richard le Blount, Maurice Gadagan, Robert de Inchecoul, Who Say of the corn of the Bishop of Emly sequestered and sealed up in a grange, that William Uncle, sheriff of Limerick, had a writ of the Exchequer, Dublin, to levy the debts of Otho de Grandison, for which purpose he came to the haggard of the Bishop of Emly and marked the corn found as well in the haggard as beyond the cross, levying none of the debt; but when he had started for Dublin with the K.'s money the bishop thrashed and disposed of his corn at his will, so that he received thereupon no injury from the sheriff; They Say that the Treasurer was not culpable in making the distraint, save that he directed the writ from England to the sheriff. As to the sale of 700 sheep, worth 60*l.*, They Say that Walter Uncle, sheriff of Tipperary, was arrested on his account for 550*l.*, and delivered to the custody of the marshal, from which custody he fled without licence into England. The Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, thereupon directed Nicholas de Intheberge, sheriff of Tipperary, to take into the K.'s hand Walter's lands and chattels in the manor of Rathc'on, who so took them. Afterwards Walter le Bret came to the Dublin Exchequer, and took the manor with its oxen, sheep, and other property found in it, for its true value, yearly rendering at the Exchequer, Dublin, in acquittance of the said debt, 30*l.* Walter Uncle subsequently returned to Ireland to the parts of Munster, entered the manor, took to his own use the goods and chattels found there, without any reclamation from Walter le Bret, and delivered the sheep to the Bishop of Emly for 50*l.*, which he received out of the chattels of the bishop, and so postponed the debt and deluded the K. After his departure Walter le Bret went to the Exchequer of Dublin and stated this to the Treasurer and Barons, who ordered that Robert Maunsel, then sheriff, should inquire thereof, and if he found that the bishop held any of the goods and chattels of Walter Uncle, which were in the K.'s hand in the custody of Walter le Bret, that he should restore them to the latter. Robert found by inquisition that 300 sheep and 13 oxen were so held; these he delivered to Walter le Bret.

The jurors also Say of the fruits of Elias of Winchester sequestered by the bishop, that the treasurer did not violate the sequestration, but that the said Elias, baron of the Exchequer, Dublin, made a request to the sheriff of Limerick that the sequestration should be delivered to him. This request came to Philip de Penly, the sheriff's attorney, who personally had sequestered corn worth 10*l.*; he delivered it to the attorney of Elias, who thrashed and sold it. They Say that they are ignorant of the recognizance made in the Exchequer of the debts of the Lord James of Spain. They also Say that the sheriffs of Limerick and Tipperary came to the manor of Emly and other manors to levy the bishop's farms and rents, and attached 12 beasts of the plough and 16 oxen for Otho's debt by the K.'s writ of the Exchequer, Dublin. Afterwards the bishop and the sheriff came to the Exchequer aforesaid, undertook to acquit the debt, and so obtained delivery of the beasts of the plough, excepting Walter Uncle's 13 oxen, which were delivered to Walter le Bret, as above said. Walter without giving any acquittance withdrew and went to England; for which reason the sheriffs levied the rents and farms out of the tenements of Otho and the bishop, by the hands of the bailiffs of the latter, by view of William of Dreyton and Walter Stonhard. The rents and farms were paid by the bailiffs' hands to merchants of Lucca in acquittance of the bishop's debt. Otho's men and tenants were always intentive and respondent to the bishop's bailiffs, receiving pleas and perquisites from them; no bailiff was removed by the treasurer or sheriff until the arrival of William of Dreyton, who received seisin to the use of Otho before the week of Easter, a. r. 18 [1290].

They further upon their oath Say that William Uncle aforesaid, without any precept or warrant but by virtue of 2 writs directed to him from the Exchequer of Dublin, sent a servant of the K. to the bishop's manor at Imelachynte to distrain for and levy this debt; the servant took 2 beasts of the plough from the bishop's tenants; one of the bishop's household forcibly deprived him of the beasts. The sheriff thereupon came in person with horses and arms to Balylogo, where the bishop was then visiting, and in the house of the lord of the vill where the bishop was lodging the sheriff caused the doors of the stable to be broken and took and carried away 5 horses, whereof 2 were of the bishop's officer, 1 of the bishop's valet, and 2 of the bishop himself. The bishop rode to Tene, went to the treasurer then there, and prayed for the restoration of his horses. The treasurer ordered the horses to be restored, and the sheriff on his order delivered them upon security. They further Say that the sheriff seized the bishop's oxen but immediately restored them.

Inquisition taken at Kilkenny on Thursday next before the feast of the Holy Trinity, a. r. 18 [May 25, 1290], by the jurors underwritten, namely:—James de Valle, Philip Baroun, Richard Coytyf, Walter le Bret, William Haket, Henry Fitz Thomas, Henry Ocle, John le Blount, Adam Fitz Simon, Walter le Grey, Gilbert de Vey, Maurice de Wynton, Who upon their oath Say that the escheator of Ireland took into the K.'s hand the manor of Natherlach on occasion of the death of Sir Thomas de Multon, and having immediately caused it to be extended the best land in demesne of the manor was valued at 12*d.* the acre, another part of middling land was valued at 10*d.* an acre, another part of worse land at 8*d.* the acre. Each vill was valued at 4 marks. The escheator delivered the land and vills to divers persons according to the extent. In the meanwhile came William Bishop of Emly, who took the land by the extent from the K. until the age of the son and heir of Sir Thomas de Multon; and had a writ directed to the escheator to deliver the land to him. The escheator learning this went to Munster and was informed by persons of those parts that the acre extended at 12*d.* had been demised for 20*d.*, that extended at 10*d.* for 12*d.*, and that extended at 8*d.* for 10*d.* The escheator caused all the free tenants to come to Natherlach, and caused the manor to be re-extended by 24 of the best of them on their oath, as to how much each acre and each vill was yearly worth until the age of the heir. They Said that each acre of the best land before extended at 12*d.* might be worth 16*d.* a year, each acre extended at 10*d.* might be worth 12*d.*, each acre extended at 8*d.* might be worth 10*d.*; and that each vill extended at 4 marks might be worth 5 marks. The jurors Say that the escheator made this extent for the K.'s advantage, not through malice, but to avoid blame, and not to abet the treasurer of Ireland.

The jurors further Say that when the manor of Natherlach was in the bishop's hand an Irishman holding in that manor, who had been indicted for larceny and receiving, on being distrained to answer to the bishop in the premises, forcibly dispossessed the bishop's servant, and afterwards made a fine of 40*s.* for the larceny and dispossession. The Irishman had complained of this fine to the escheator, and the latter had laid this grievance before the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. The escheator on his return from Dublin, without summoning or convicting the bishop, took pleas of the court and the hundred into his hand, and still retains those pleas and that lordship, to the bishop's damage of 40*s.*

They also Say that an Irishman, a shepherd, had stolen a sheep worth 6*d.*; on being taken and brought to the hundred, he made a fine for 5*s.* though he had nothing, and paid the fine through assistance given to him out of charity by the country.

Mem. that the original of this transcript remains, under the seals of the jurors, with the Archbishop of Dublin, holding the place of justiciary of Ireland. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 6.]

Feb. 15.

593. The K.'s writ to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. Sends under his seal certain complaints made before the K. by Adam de Foleburne against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of the Exchequer, Dublin, and commands him to inquire and certify to the K. thereupon under Irish seal [as in No. 591]. Westminster.

Complaints of Adam de Foleborne, one of the executors of Stephen de Foleborne, Archbishop of Tuam, formerly justiciary of Ireland, against Nicholas de Clere, Treasurer of Ireland [ante, Petitions, pp. 254–258].

Findings regarding the complaints of Adam de Fulburne, and the replies of Nicholas de Clere, before the chief justiciary, the justices of the Common Pleas, the barons of the Exchequer, and the K.'s Council.

1. It appears by record of the barons of the Exchequer, that the treasurer soon after the death of the said Stephen offered to W[alter] Bishop of Waterford, and the other executors, the chattels of the deceased, provided that they found security for payment of his debts to the K. The executors having stated that he owed no debts to the K., the treasurer computed by word of mouth 7,000*l.* in which he was so indebted. The executors seeing this, said that they were not prepared to receive the chattels in such a form. Afterwards the K. sent his writ, dated Urdos in Aspis, Sept. 4, a. r. 16 [1288], and commanding Nicholas de Clere, the treasurer, that having taken good security from the executors for payment of debts due by deceased to the K., he should cause the chattels of deceased to be delivered to them for execution of his will. If the executors are unable to give such security the treasurer shall not distrain the chattels, but submit them for sale. In pursuance of this writ the treasurer offered the chattels to the executors; the latter demanded particulars of the debts due by deceased to the K., and the treasurer answered that he could not give them then, because the deceased had taken several foreign receipts in divers counties and vills, and that he did not know them. The treasurer having subsequently asked the executors why they would not receive the chattels, they answered that it would not be advantageous to do this because the chattels had been in a great measure sold and dispersed.

The debts which the deceased owed to the K. appear by the Great Rolls of the Exchequer to be 3,603*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.* of the issues of the K.'s Mint at Dublin in the time of Walter Vured, Humphrey le Gaunt, Henry de Ponte, and James Donat, to which Adam answers that deceased charged himself with that money in his account at the London Exchequer, a. r. 13; but if that is so the barons are ignorant of it. The following is also found on the Great Rolls:—S[tephen] the Bishop received from Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, 52*l.*; rent of Brownstown, 2 marks; for Richard Talbot, 14*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* and 25 marks; but in regard to these the treasurer asserted that he could not give a certain answer, because he had not been certified of certain foreign receipts.

2. As to the treasurer having despoiled the chests of deceased, removed the inquisitions and Rolls, and done his pleasure therewith, it appears by record of J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin and Walter l'Enfaunt, one of the executors, that immediately after S[tephen's] death they came to Athlone, and in presence of Sir Geoffrey de Geneville, W[alter] Bishop of Waterford, one of the executors, the treasurer, Geoffrey Brun, the K.'s clerk, and others of the K.'s Council, they caused the chests of deceased to be opened, and in some of them found the vestments and ornaments of the chapel of deceased, in others silver vases and jewels, in others bags with Rolls and writs of the time when the deceased was justiciary of Ireland, and also inquisitions sealed with the seals of the inquisitors, inclosed and sealed with the seal of the deceased justiciary, the tenour of which was not known. All these were returned to their previous places, except one Roll of the expenses of deceased incurred in the army of Thomond by the hands of Robert de Callan and Roger Lomb, which Roll the treasurer carried away with him. The inquisitions also, the writs, vestments, ornaments, vases, and jewels, were replaced in their proper chests; the letters patent and obligatory instruments touching the K. and others were replaced in a round box under the seal of J[ohn] the Archbishop, and the box was replaced in a chest, where it was before. The chests were then locked, and having been bound round with cord, were sealed with the seals of J[ohn] the Archbishop, N[icholas] the treasurer, W[alter] Bishop of Waterford, and W[alter] l'Enfaunt, executors of deceased, and the keys were delivered for custody to Geoffrey Brun. Afterwards by common counsel of the same, it was ordered that the chests so sealed should be carried to Dublin, and not opened until they had met and jointly ordered what should be done. Afterwards the archbishop went to the castle of Roscommon on affairs of the K. After the departure of him, the executors, and the others, it appears that the treasurer and G. Brun caused the chests to be carried with them to the castle of Randown, and it is not known whether they were opened there. Afterwards they were conveyed by carts to Dublin, to the house of the merchants of the Society of the Ricardi of Lucca, there dwelling. The merchants would not receive the chests because some of the seals were defaced and broken. The chests were therefore conveyed to the Exchequer, placed in the treasurer's custody, and they remained there until the K. commanded the archbishop with the justices of the Common Pleas and the barons of the Exchequer to inquire regarding the premises. They did not find the chests sealed as they had been delivered at Athlone, but 2 chests in which were the vestments, the ornaments of the chapel, and some jewels, but no Rolls, writs, or inquisitions, were sealed with the seals of the sheriff of Dublin, and of Philip, the archbishop's chaplain. Why the sheriffs' seal was affixed is not known. As to Philip's seal, he says that wishing to buy a portion of the vestments, which he heard were for sale, he went to the treasurer to the Exchequer; 2 chests were opened which he did not see were sealed; but when he saw the vestments he would not purchase, and the vestments having been replaced, the treasurer asked him to affix his seal, which he did. Afterwards the archbishop ordered the bags with the Rolls and writs to be brought to him. The latter were found out of the chests in the custody of the chamberlains of the Exchequer, Dublin, and the keys of the chests in that of Thomas of 1289–1290.

London, the treasurer's clerk; and by a Roll of memoranda which the archbishop had in his possession he caused the bags, Rolls, and portions of Rolls to be examined; and he thereupon found all the Rolls which he had placed in the bags, although not in their proper places, with the exception of 1 Roll containing 9 portions, from which estreats of pleas and fines made before the deceased from the day of St. Luke the Evangelist, a. r. 15 [Oct. 18, 1287] until the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, a. r. 16 [June 24, 1288], ought to have been taken. The box which he had sealed at Athlone he found unsealed, and the instruments which he had placed there removed. The inquisitions closed up under the seal of deceased and other and divers writs sent to deceased from England were not found. The treasurer, the chamberlain, and Thomas of London say that they had not made away with the Rolls, inquisitions, or writs, but they say that it appears by record of the archbishop, the justices, and the barons of the Exchequer that the chests were opened on 2 or 3 occasions after they reached the treasurer's custody.

3. As to the 50 horses and the silver vases of deceased having been sold at an under value, it appears by record of the archbishop and others of the Council that they were well and faithfully valued and sold, and that the treasurer did not retain any of them to his own use.

4. It appears as above that the treasurer did not sell any of the ornaments of deceased's chapel, but that the ornaments and vestments were delivered for the greater part to the church of Tuam, by virtue of the K.'s writ dated Burgh, Sept. 26, a. r. 17 [1289], whereby the K. notified to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, that though according to custom in similar cases he had caused the goods and chattels, vases and ornaments of the chapel of Stephen Archbishop of Tuam to be taken into the K.'s hand on account of the debts which he owed to the K., yet that it was his will that the church of Tuam should be decorated with the ornaments of the chapel; he therefore commands the treasurer and barons to deliver in the K.'s name those ornaments to the Dean and chapter of Tuam, to remain in that church for the future.

The remainder of the costly vestments not delivered still remain in the custody of the treasurer to be disposed of at the K.'s pleasure.

5. As to Adam's prayer to have certain men discreet and not subject to suspicion to view the charge and discharge of the executors of the deceased and the particulars in which they are bound to the K., nothing further can be determined in Ireland because the deceased rendered his account in England, whereby it will appear with what particulars he charged himself there.

6. As to Adam's complaint that when he was rector of Slane, and owed no debt to the K., the treasurer seized all his corn of the church aforesaid, worth 100 marks, and sold it for 25 marks, saying that the corn belonged to the deceased, it appears that Thomas de Lynham, assigned by the justiciary and treasurer with assent of the executors to make an inventory of and value the chattels of deceased, came to Slane, and there took an inquisition of chattels found, the tenour of which is as follows:—Inquisition taken at Stratbalyslane on Monday the vigil of St. Lawrence, a. r. 16 [Aug. 9, 1288]. The jurors Say that S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam had and held on the day of his death all tithes of sheaves of the church of Slane, a. r. 15, and that he could sell, give, or distribute them to whom he pleased; that he sold them to Geoffrey de Waterville, chaplain, for 60 marks; that the chaplain not having found security the archbishop again retained the tithes as his goods and chattels, and so died; that no one meddled with or had power over the tithes save the justiciary. They estimate the total quantity of the tithes at 120 crannocks of wheat, oats, peas, beans, and barley, value of each crannock 20*d.*; that all the other goods belonging to that church were in the hands of the said justiciary at his death, and were collected by the said Geoffrey who was the justiciary's attorney in this respect.

By virtue of this inquisition the said Thomas took the corn aforesaid into the K.'s hand. Afterwards Richard le Flemeng, patron of the church, came to Drogheda and offered Thomas 25 marks for the corn; Thomas having answered that he would not sell the corn without the treasurer's assent, the treasurer gave it. Richard then made a bond to pay the 25 marks to the K., and found 4 sureties who affixed their seals to the bond; and Thomas delivered it to the treasurer. The treasurer says that he knows not where the bond is; it was either torn or lost. Thomas de Lynham says that Richard le Flemeng paid the money to Thomas Bishop of Meath. The bishop says that the treasurer delivered the bond to him to receive the money as a sequestration of the fruits of the church. Thomas de Lynham says that he could not sell the corn dearer than he sold it to Richard; a great part of it had been wasted, and it was of small value according to the inquisition. The bishop aforesaid having been questioned as to the spoliation and harshness which the treasurer inflicted on Adam, and as to the advowson, the presentation and institution to the church of Slane, replies that he cannot answer thereupon because the K. had lately commanded him to certify regarding all these matters, and he had certified accordingly by his messenger; and he makes a similar answer in regard to the church of Kilberry.

7. As to the breaking of the locks, &c. of 2 chests in the castle of Dublin, containing secret documents of the K. and the bishop, &c., it appears that Elias of Winchester and John of Kent, by order of the treasurer at the requisition of W[alter] Bishop of Waterford, one of the executors of deceased, went to the castle; and the said bishop in presence of Elias and John, W[illiam] Burnel, the constable, James Donat, and others opened a chest there, and having viewed the Rolls and writs &c. therein, reclosed it without removing anything; and Elias and John having affixed their seals to the chest, went away.

8. As to the spoliation of Andrew, Adam's brother, regarding the church of Kells, and the enforced presentation thereto of William de Clere, the treasurer's brother, &c., it appears by sworn admissions of Reginald de Dene, patron of that church, that it was not owing to the malice or harshness of the treasurer or the denunciation of the Bishop of Leighlin that Reginald presented the treasurer's brother to that church; but that it was in order to have his friendship and favour in expediting Reginald's affairs at the Exchequer and elsewhere. The Bishop of Leighlin says that he cannot answer in regard to that matter because he had been ordered by the K. to certify thereupon.

9. As to what Adam says in regard to the presentation to the church of Kells belonging to the K. owing to the minority of Reginald and his being in the K.'s hand, an inquisition was thereupon taken by Thomas de Lynham, clerk, assigned for that purpose by the Council, the tenor of which is as follows:—Inquisition taken at Kells in Fothered on Thursday next after the feast of Michaelmas, a. r. 16 [Sept. 30, 1288]. The jurors Say that 4 years ago Reginald de Dene, being under age and in custody of the said Archbishop of Tuam, deceased, obtained in the Court of Common Pleas, Dublin, by a writ of Novel disseisin against the seneschal of Carlow, the manor of Fynnore and the vill of Kells in Fothered; that the justiciary held all those lands in his hand at his death; and that the custody continues until the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, a. r. 17 [Sept. 8, 1289].

The said J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin took an inquisition as to whether the lands of Kells and Fynnore are held by socage or by knight service; the tenour of this inquisition is as follows:—

Inquisition taken at Dublin on Friday next after Finding of the Holy Cross, a. r. 18 [May 6, 1290]. The jurors upon their oath Say that Reymund le Gros enfeoffed Griffin Fitz William his brother of Fynnore and Kells in Fothered for the service of 2 knights and suit of his court at the castle of Fothered; that after Griffin's death, Gilbert his son and heir succeeded to the inheritance; Gilbert begot a daughter named Clarice who was ½ year old when her father died; nevertheless after Gilbert's death Matthew Fitz Griffin, brother of Gilbert, entered the lands and held them all his life; after Matthew's death Reymund his brother entered the lands and held them for 7 years; then Clarice aforesaid went to William de Dene, senior, and Richard of Rochelle, locum tenens of John Fitz Geoffrey, then justiciary of Ireland, and promised to each of them a third of the lands provided they would aid her in recovering them; by their counsel and aid Clarice recovered the lands in the court of the liberty of Carlow; and having had seisin she enfeoffed William de Dene and Richard of Rochelle respectively of one third of them, rendering each 1 penny a year at Easter; and afterwards Clarice enfeoffed John Fitz John, her son, of her own third part with the demesne of the said William and Richard; after some time John enfeoffed William de Dene aforesaid of his third part in free socage, yearly rendering at Easter 3*d.*, or a pair of iron spurs. They further Say that the said William went to William de Maleherbe, then seneschal of Carlow, and gave him a sum of money to receive suit of court at the castle of Fothered, and to render the service aforesaid of 2 knights to the Earl Marshal at that castle for the lands of Fynnore and Kells, which services the said William rendered during all his life. Feb. 15. 595. The K.'s writ to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. Sends under his seal certain complaints made before the K. by Walter de Bodenham, against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of the Exchequer, Dublin, with the treasurer's answers to those complaints. Mandate to inquire and certify to the K. thereupon under Irish seal [as in No. 591].

Complaints of Walter de Bodenham against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, with replies thereto [as in petitions, ante, pp. 252–254].

Findings regarding the complaints of Walter de Bodenham, and the replies of Nicholas de Clere, before the chief justiciary in the presence of the justices of the Common Pleas, the barons of the Exchequer, and others of the K.'s Council.

1. As to the complaint that the treasurer had remitted to Nicholas de Inteberge, some time sheriff of Tipperary, 200*l.* arrears of his account, for the advowson of the church of Kilbery, it appears in the account of Robert Maunsel, then sheriff there, last rendered at the Dublin Exchequer, a. r. 16, that the said Nicholas is charged with 219*l.*, which yet run in summonses of the Exchequer as not paid. Nevertheless this amount was respited until now by the treasurer aforesaid, excepting 10*l.* which the treasurer paid for him at the Exchequer. And it appears that the Great Rolls of the K.'s accounts at the Exchequer are in the custody of, and under the seal of the ingrossers, and there is no suspicion regarding those Rolls unless what J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin has lately transmitted to the K. in the complaint of the merchants of Lucca. Nevertheless in the estreats before Brother S[tephen] formerly Archbishop of Tuam and justiciary of Ireland delivered at the Exchequer, it is found that Geoffrey de la Hulle was amerced in ½ mark for not prosecuting against Nicholas de Clere, and each of his 2 sureties in 40*d.* By the information of some of the Council, and the confession of the said Geoffrey this amerciament was taxed by the justiciary at 50 marks, and that of each of the sureties at 40*s.* Moreover in the same estreats it appears that where the treasurer was amerced by the justiciary for contempt in not returning a writ, the treasurer there wrote "nothing," which is absurd and a manifest error. John de Ideshal, deputy marshal of the Exchequer, swore that he had made this entry by order of the justiciary, without the barons' knowledge. The archbishop would not inquire of the treasurer regarding this because he had not the K.'s mandate thereupon.

In the estreats of Chancery, a. r. 16, it appears that Roger Roche of Drogheda gives 2 marks for his offence in selling cloth against the assize; the treasurer cancelled this estreat and wrote with his own hand "error." And be it known that in the Rolls of estreats of the Chancery of Ireland, remaining with the locum tenens of the Chancellor, the following appears:—Roger Roche gives 40*s.* for an offence, &c., whereas here 2 marks are named.

William of Northampton. The treasurer cancelled this estreat and wrote "error." And be it known that in these Rolls of estreats 100*s.* are found where 50*s.* are written in the Exchequer Rolls.

Moreover the K. sent his writ to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, to the following effect:—Whereas justices' eyres in Ireland are not now held as they were wont to be, and the K. had learnt that pleas moved as well by merchants as by others, are more quickly determined in the Exchequer than in the Common Pleas, the K. commands the Treasurer and Barons to hear and determine such pleas before them in the Exchequer as was wont to be done, provided that the K.'s affairs be not retarded in that Exchequer. Oleron in Byarne, July 11, a. r. 16 [1288]. By virtue of which writ it was determined that common pleas of debt should be pleaded in the Exchequer, whereas they ought to be pleaded in the Common Pleas. And be it known that this writ was in full council found erased at the word "Exchequer" where it last occurs. This erasure was made in the presence of Elias of Winchester, baron of the Exchequer, and Walter de Kenley, Chancellor of the same Exchequer.

Item in the Memoranda Rolls in the plea between Richard Locard and Walter de Bodenham, 3 inrolments were found of one plaint, whereof the 1st was made by order of the treasurer; the 2nd by W. de Clere, locum tenens of the treasurer, the latter being in England; and the 3rd by the same treasurer on his last arrival in Ireland after Easter, a. r. 18 [1290].

The 3 inrolments recited at length.

The barons were not present at these inrolments nor gave their assent, but made their record thereof according to the form hereinafter contained.

2. In regard to Walter's further complaint against the treasurer that he was arrested by the latter for 12*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* of issues of the escheatry, it appears that Walter, by his own recognizance in the Exchequer at the suit of Guy Cokerel, sub-escheator in the vale of Dublin, was adjudged to pay that amount which he owed for a farm belonging to the escheatry, and he was arrested thereupon. Walter does not complain of this because his chattels had been previously valued by the escheator's attorney and with his assent were delivered before the Ascension, a. r. 15 [1287] to Richard Locard, clerk of the treasurer, in acquittance of the debt.

3. As to Walter's complaint that soon after his liberation from the arrest aforesaid, he was by order of the treasurer placed in custody of the marshal and there remained until he had given to the said Richard a bond for 6 marks 4*s.*, the treasurer says that he was not arrested for money demanded on summons of the Exchequer, and that he does not know for what reason he was arrested; the barons having inquired as to this do not find either by a record or by Rolls, and do not remember that such an arrest was made, or the cause thereof. Walter says that he was arrested in the morning near the feast of the Ascension; according to his recollection none of the barons were present, save the treasurer, and John de Kenley, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Afterwards it was found by the sheriff of Dublin and his clerk, the constable of the castle of Dublin, the chief serjeant of the county, and other sworn persons, who partly knew the fact, that by order of the treasurer made to the said sheriff the serjeant attached him, as Walter says, and brought him to the Exchequer, but for what cause he does not know. But it sufficiently appears by the treasurer's answer made in England that W[alter] was arrested. The constable of the castle of Dublin being examined on his oath says that according to his recollection Walter was twice given into his custody, but for what reason he does not know.

Record of the barons.

Richard Locard, clerk of Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, caused by writ Walter de Bodenham to come to the Exchequer, and demanded against him 8 marks and 4*s.* on 2 bonds. Walter acknowledged the bonds, but says that when they were made he was in prison, on which account they ought not to avail against him. Richard says that when the bonds were made Walter was in no other prison than the custody of the marshal of the Exchequer for 12*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* which Walter had received out of issues of the escheatry at Brownstown in the county of Dublin, and for which he was arrested there, and that he had given the bonds in order to obtain his discharge from that custody. As it appears that Walter was then in no other prison than the custody of the marshal, it is considered that he further answer Richard's petition. Walter pleads full payment. Richard says that after making allowance for the issues of the lands and the proceeds of the goods and chattels, Walter still owes him 8 marks and 4*s.*, which he demands against him, and of this he puts himself on an inquisition; Walter the like. Writ to the sheriff of Dublin to cause a jury to come, of whom the greater part are of the tenement of Tassagard, of the K.'s demesnes. Walter challenges the jurors from Tassagard as immediately subject to the treasurer, alleging that Richard himself was clerk to and of the household of the treasurer. The treasurer answers that every one in Ireland might be thus challenged, because all are subject to the treasurer and the Exchequer. The barons seeing the low cunning of the man, which was like that of a thief, consulted as to whether another day should be named to take the inquisition, and that meanwhile they should consider whether Walter's exception should be received or not. But the treasurer of his own proper motion, the barons not consenting, determined that the exception should not be admitted but quashed, and caused all the 12 to be sworn, Walter protesting. The latter still declaring that he would not put himself on those of Tassagard, the treasurer threatened to amerce him in 100*s.*; nothing however was exacted from Walter by summons of the Exchequer. The jurors Say that allowing for the receipts which Richard had out of the issues of lands and the proceeds of goods and chattels, Walter is bound to Richard in 8 marks 4*s.*, which the treasurer condemns Walter to pay to Richard. And as Walter refuses to pay or give security for this amount he is by order of the treasurer committed in custody to the constable of the castle of Dublin, and is amerced for unjust detinue.

As to Walter's complaint that he had after he had been adjudged to pay 8 marks 4*s.* offered security, the treasurer would not accept the security or the sureties, it appears that he never offered sufficient security to the treasurer in the presence of the barons.

As to Walter's complaint that the treasurer carried away his crops of 50 acres of wheat and oats in the autumn of a. r. 16 [1288], it appears by Walter's recognizance made in the presence of the Archbishop of Dublin and of the K.'s Council, that the sheriff of Dublin, by direction of the treasurer, sent the chief serjeant of the county to Walter's house and land, and that he there placed the attorneys of Richard Locard in seisin of the corn sown in that land, whereof a part was then being reaped by Walter, and the attorneys caused all the corn to be collected together, and carried away from that tenement to Knoklyn, where the corn remained until the arrival of Richard Locard from abroad; and he disposed thereof at his will. The treasurer says that he had ordered the corn to be so collected together and kept until Richard's arrival.

Nothing can be learnt touching the expulsion of Walter's wife.

Richard Locard, who once held the place of receiver of the Exchequer, having been questioned before the archbishop, the justices of the Common Pleas, the barons of the Exchequer, and others of the K.'s Council, whether he had perforated silver pennies of persons paying into the Exchequer and retained them to his own use as alleged by Walter de Bodenhan, acknowledges that he had so perforated several silver pennies of his receipt, retained them to his own use, and therewith caused 2 vases to be made of the value of 32*s.*, and as this specially touches the complaint of Walter de Bodenham the archbishop did not wish further to adjudicate thereon, but ordered Richard to be put into the castle of Dublin, there to be confined until the K. shall have sent his pleasure thereupon. 598. Grievances whereof the merchants of the Society of the Ricardi of Lucca complain against Sir William de Clere, then locum tenens of the treasurer of Ireland:—That the K. had by writ under the Great Seal commanded the treasurer and chamberlain of the Exchequer, Dublin, to pay to the merchants aforesaid all moneys of the new custom of Ireland and all other issues of that land, to take letters of receipt thereupon from the merchants, and to certify the K. how much had been paid; that on the 28th of Jan., a. r. 18 [1289–90] after the hour of noon William de Clere came to the house of the merchants at Dublin, together with William of Bristol, mayor of Dublin, Roger clerk of la Thounerie [the bailiwick] of Dublin, Robert of Bray, provost of Dublin, Henry Oving, William Mody, and Robert le Forester, sergeants of Dublin, William Wilde, porter of the castle of Dublin while the constable was in England, Martin clerk of the sheriff of Dublin, and others, and demanded without any warrant from the K. of Hugh Russchenpel, Reymund Rapundi, and Gerard Chimbard, merchants of the company aforesaid, 1,021 marks 13½*d.* out of a sum of 2,014*l.* 0*s.* 13½*d.* which the merchants had received from Sir William de Clere of the new custom of Ireland and other issues of that land, and whereof Sir William had their letters of receipt; that because the merchants would not give up the money, Sir William and the others who came with him attached Hugh, Reymund, and Gerard, imprisoned them in their inns, and sealed up their chests and boxes, so that they could not pay their debts or sell their merchandise, until the 1st of February following; that further Sir William de Clere commanded William of Bristol, mayor of Dublin, to keep them in good custody, and ordered Martin, clerk of the sheriff, on the K.'s behalf, to carry out the attachment as the sheriff's representative, if the mayor did not do so; that the mayor caused them to be guarded at their inn by Henry Oving and William Mody, his sergeants, for 3 nights as if they were thieves; and that the merchants could go nowhere without being followed by the sergeants, and guarded as prisoners until Feb. 1 aforesaid.

That before this attachment and without the knowledge of the merchants, Sir William de Clere sent Adam of Crumlin, clerk of the sheriff of Dublin, and Richard de Crus, chief sergeant of the county of Dublin, with an open letter under the seal of the K.'s Exchequer, to divers places in Ireland; that Adam and Richard, by Sir William's command, seized all the merchants' goods at Ross, Waterford, Youghal, and Cork, sealed up their chests there, and besides went to Limerick, inquired as to their debtors, and commanded on the K.'s part at Limerick, Cork, and Waterford that no man who owed debts to the merchants should pay them; that Adam and Richard caused William Gerarduche, keeper of the K.'s custom and associate of the merchants at Ross, to be attached; that the seneschal of Kilkenny sealed up the chamber and chests of the merchants and attached their goods at Kilkenny by Sir William's command; that in all the before-named places the goods of the merchants remain attached and ensealed, as before stated, so that for 15 days and more they have not been able to pay their debts or sell their merchandise; that all these goods and the bodies of the merchants were attached by command of Sir William de Clere, and vilely retained until they had paid him 300 marks, and he had received their open letter to pay him 200 marks within 15 days; and that the merchants made this payment and gave those letters in order to avoid loss of their property and imprisonment of their bodies.

That these attachments were made against the merchants by command of William de Clere to the loss and damage of all the company of merchants. Wherefore they pray that these matters may be inquired of, and that the K. be certified according to the command contained in the K.'s writ sent to Sir William from England. [Norman French.]

Replies of William de Clere to the complaints of the merchants of Lucca:—That the K. sent to Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, the K.'s writ dated Sept. 19, a. r. 17 [1289], commanding the treasurer to send 2,000 marks to Carnarvon; that the treasurer having previously paid to the merchants of Lucca dwelling at Dublin all the issues of Ireland of the previous year, and they having received 2,000 marks of the new custom whereof they had not rendered an account, the treasurer demanded of them the 2,000 marks aforesaid to be sent into Wales according to the K.'s mandate; that they answered that they had sent this money to their associates dwelling in London, and that they had no other money in hand; that when the treasurer came to London by the K.'s mandate before the Bishops of Bath and Winchester, the Earl of Lincoln, W. de Luda, and W. de March, deputed by the K. to answer why he had not sent the 2,000 marks to Wales, the merchants of Lucca dwelling in London avowed that their associates of Dublin had received the 2,000 marks and then had no money in hand; that the K. thereupon sent another writ to the treasurer and chamberlain of the Exchequer, Dublin, dated Kingston, Nov. 20, a. r. 18 [1289], commanding them, omitting all other payments, to cause 2,000 marks to be remitted to the chamberlain of Carnarvon; that William de Clere having after the departure of his brother for England deposited with the merchants 1,021 marks 13½*d.* of the issues of Ireland, he frequently prayed the latter to restore them in order to be sent into Wales, but they refused; that William on a Saturday after the feast of St. Hilary went to the house of the merchants with the mayor and bailiffs of Dublin, and on their refusal to restore the money ordered the mayor and bailiffs to put seals on their chests, and 2 of the K.'s sergeants to direct each mayor to sequestrate into the K.'s hand the merchants' goods in their bailiwicks until they should restore the money; that the merchants complained at Coloyn and Dublin; that at length it was agreed that the merchants should restore certain sums, and that on this being done William did not ask them for the residue, because he had otherwise fulfilled the K.'s mandate.

The merchants dwelling in London asked that 1,000 marks in the K.'s wardrobe should be allowed to them, but W. de Luda, the treasurer, answered that they should not be allowed until the 2,000 marks had been sent into Wales according to the K.'s mandate.

William de Clere, locum tenens of Nicholas de Clere, treasurer in Ireland, caused a writ dated Jan. 21, a. r. 18 [1289–90] to emanate under green wax, and by virtue thereof Richard de Crus, the K.'s sergeant, and Adam of Cromelyn, clerk of the sheriff of Dublin, caused all the goods of the merchants at Ross, Waterford, Youghal, and Cork to be attached, seals to be put to their chests, and inhibited debtors of the merchants at Limerick, Waterford, and Cork from paying their debts; they also caused William de Gerarduche, collector of the new custom at Ross, to be attached.

The merchants acknowledge that they had received from the chamberlain the 1,021 marks 13½*d.* aforesaid, with other moneys, and in the end of the term computed that they had received to the amount of 2,014*l.* 0*s.* 13½*d.*, and they gave letters to Sir William testifying that he and the chamberlain had paid that amount to them by the K.'s order; wherefore it seems to the merchants that they could not restore the money without the K.'s special order. William being asked whether the merchants had written him such letters, says that he does not know as the letters were sent in England.

All the goods of the merchants and their bodies were arrested and attached for 15 days and more until they paid to William 300 marks without warrant, and gave their letters promising to pay 200 marks within 15 days following. The merchants made this payment to escape loss of their goods and arrest of their bodies.

Inquisition taken at Dublin on Thursday next after the feast of St. Mark the Evangelist, a. r. 18 [April 27, 1290].

The jurors Say that William de Clare went to the house of Hugh le Lombard and his associates in Dublin, taking with him William of Bristol mayor of Dublin, Henry Ovinge, and William Mody, sergeants of that city, and demanded of them a sum of money; as they said they had none, William ordered the mayor and sergeants to arrest the merchants and their goods, which was done; that William having before the locum tenens of the justiciary only avowed the arrest of the merchants' goods, the mayor said that he had never been ordered to arrest their bodies. The jurors being asked why the mayor and disavowed the arrest of the merchants Say that he had done so in order to save William from blame. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 17.]

Easter. 613. Philip son and heir of Geoffrey Prendregast appeared on the 4th day against Nicholas de Athy of a plea of 1½ carucate of land in Feyarkyl. Nicholas did not come and also made default in the octaves of St. Martin last past. The Archbishop of Dublin, then justiciary of Ireland, was commanded to take the land aforesaid into the K.'s hand, and to summon Nicholas, &c. The justiciary now returns that the land was taken into the K.'s hand on Saturday next after the feast of St. Matthias the Apostle [March 3, 1289–90] by view of Roger Casse, John Fitz Elye, Walter Moor, and Richard le Juvene, and that Nicholas had been summoned by William des Aunters and John Abraham. Judgment that Philip recover seisin of the tenements aforesaid against Nicholas by default. And Nicholas is amerced. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 123, Rot. 3 dors.]

Easter. 614. The K. to the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin. In a plaint before them at Dublin by the K.'s writ between Simon le Large, plaintiff, and Richard de Paris, tenant, of 44 acres of land, &c. in Rathwilde, whereof Richard had vouched to warranty Gilbert Fitz William of Appeltrefeld, who has no lands or tenements in Ireland, the K. commands the justices to send under their seals by the quinzaine of Easter next ensuing the record and process with the original writ in this plaint.

Record of the justices sent.

Pleas and essoigns before Robert de Bagod and his associates, justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, from the quinzaine of St. Martin, a. r. 17 [Nov. 25, 1288] until the morrow of St. John the Baptist in same year [1289].

Simon le Large demands against Richard de Paris 40 acres of land and 4 acres of meadow in Rathwilde wherein Richard had not entry save by William de Appeltrefeld to whom Gilbert le Large, father of Simon aforesaid, whose heir he is, demised them while in prison. Richard vouches to warranty Gilbert Fitz William of Appeltrefeld, who has lands in England but not in Ireland. Wherefore Simon is told to follow up the K.'s writ to cause the record and process of this plaint to come before the K. in England. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 124, Rot. 15.]

Amesbury.

A similar mandate to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland, to take into the K.'s hand all the earl's lands and tenements within his bailiwick. [Pat., 18 Edw. I., m. 32; and Fine Rolls, 18 Edw. I., m. 15.]

April 17. 619. The K. to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. Having learnt that the 20*l.* which they exact by summons from the Abbot of the monastery of Sts. Peter and Paul of Clonard, for having peace on the Rolls of that Exchequer, were inrolled by ignorance, and that the abbot had made a fine with the K. of 20*l.* for the escape of Adam Brekebons, the K. commands the Treasurer and Barons to cause the 20*l.* to be expunged from the Rolls, and the abbot to be quit thereof; and if they have caused any portion of the 20*l.* for having peace to be levied, they shall cause it to be allowed to him in the amount of the fine, or his other debts. [April 23.] 622. Petitions of Ireland, delivered to Stephen de Penecestre, Peter de Campania, and Robert de Hereford, deputed for this purpose by the K. in his Parliament at Westminster in 3 weeks of Easter, a. r. 18; with replies thereto.

Petition of the Abbot of the Port of St. Mary of Dunbrody, of the Cistercian order, in Ireland, to the K. Had for 12 years prosecuted without effect against the Master of the Templars in Ireland, a plea of entry on Novel disseisin of 5 carucates of land in le Crok, before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, and before the K. and his justices assigned to hold pleas in England. The Abbot, feeling that he himself is grievously oppressed and his house reduced to the greatest poverty by procrastination of this plea in various lands, supplicates the K. to direct his justices to proceed as quickly as they can regarding it until it be judicially determined. The Abbot cannot keep hospitality or rule his convent if he is to further prosecute this plea against such powerful adversaries as the Templars. The petition is advantageous to the K., because it will save him from being vouched to warranty of the land. This plaint came by the K.'s order from Ireland to the Court of K.'s Bench in England in the octaves of Michaelmas, a. r. 15 [1287], and was deferred until the K.'s return from Gascony; it was then by his order respited until the next Parliament after Easter.

The plaint touching this petition was adjourned before the K. and his Council, and thence before G. de Thorneton and his associates to be determined. The abbot is told to keep his day there.

Petition of Philip MacGothmond, an Ostman, and Englishman of the city of Waterford. Prays remedy against persons emulous of him and greedy of his demesne in Ireland, who exact 5 marks payment when a man is killed, and also his chattels and lands, thereby usurping the K.'s liberties; and they wish to prove that Philip and others of his race, to the number of nearly 400, are Irishmen. All those of Philip's race are English and Ostmen, and not Irish, as appears by letters of the bailiffs and citizens of Waterford. As it belongs to the K. to correct that from an Englishman and an Ostman, he should be turned into an Irishman, and it is useful to the K. that there should be more English than Irish, Philip prays letters of licence to use and enjoy the liberties and customs of the English in Ireland, as other English do. Philip's ancestors had always been intentive and respondent to the K.

As Philip MacGothmond has from the commonalty of Waterford the charter which he now prays from the K., let it be shown to the K. Philip's petition is granted because the escheator testifies that this would be for the K.'s advantage.

Petition of Eudo of Guildford, Margaret his wife, Robert Vincent, and other executors of Thomas Vincent of Ireland. Having lately, by judgment of the K.'s court at Clonmel, before J[ohn] the Archbishop, locum tenens of the chief justiciary of Ireland, in the presence of the justices itinerant there, recovered against David Archbishop of Cashel 47½ marks for their corn, unjustly taken by the archbishop at Athnegamman, namely, 40 marks for their corn and 100s. for their damages, and the executors having taken to the sheriff of Tipperary a writ of judgment to levy that amount out of the goods and chattels of the archbishop, who was then living, before he could execute this writ the sheriff was commanded by the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, to take into the K.'s hand all the archbishop's goods and chattels, whereby he was prevented from executing the writ. As the will of deceased cannot be administered without recovery of this money, the executors supplicate the K. to direct the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer to cause the money to be paid to the executors out of the goods and chattels of the deceased archbishop. The K. can recover his debt at any time.

If this debt was recovered by judgment of the K.'s court before the archbishop's death, the K. grants of special grace that a writ be given to them for execution of the judgment.

Petition of Maurice Macotere, residing " at the end of the world " in Ireland. Prays for the K.'s letters patent under English seal that Maurice and his successors may enjoy English liberties in Ireland, as he and his ancestors had done. This appears by the K.'s letters patent under Irish seal. It would be more useful to the K. to have 300 Englishmen than that they should be made Irishmen by false inquisitions, against the K.'s liberty. The K. can inspect a transcript of a letter inrolled in Chancery, and granted to others in Ireland, whereby the K. gained 3,000*l.* in one day in that country.

Tenor of the K.'s writ granting to Maurice Macotere and his successors of his progeny licence to enjoy all liberties enjoyed by the English in Ireland. Given by the hand of J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, locum tenens of the chief justiciary of Ireland. Clonmel, Decr. 9, a. r. 18 [1289].

A letter of this kind was granted to others of Ireland and to Stephen Brandon. Maurice prays for a similar letter under the Great Seal.

Let letters patent be made to him in the mode aforesaid. The escheator of Ireland had testified that this would be for the K.'s advantage.

Petition of John de Cogan of Ireland. Had impleaded Sir Theobald de Verdoun at the Exchequer of Dublin for 100*l.*, and recovered that sum by judgment, but never could obtain writ of judgment; had prosecuted this suit for 4 years. Prays a writ to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer.

Let him sue out a writ to the Treasurer and Barons to have execution of the judgment. Let him sue out a writ to the barons. [Norman French.]

The K. had frequently commanded the chief justiciary, S[tephen] de Foleburne, and the justice of the Common Pleas, Sir Robert Bagot, to take an inquest regarding the suits and services demanded and the grievous distresses made by John de Barry against John de Cogan to the damage of the latter and his tenants of 2,000*l.* The K. had commanded that no distress be taken, and that restitution be made if any distress had been levied. But nothing was done.

Let him sue by writ and take what the law gives him. [Norman French.]

Petition of the burgesses of Schendone who are men of John de Cogan and Maurice of Rochfort. That owing to the citizens of Cork, who hold the vill [? Schendone] to farm, they dare not trade as they were wont to do. Pray that they be no longer disturbed, as they are much impoverished thereby.

This complaint has not been submitted to the justiciary. If they cannot obtain remedy from the latter let them come to the next Parliament, and the K. will provide a remedy.

They are directed by the Council to sue out a writ to the justiciary to hear their complaint and render them justice. [The last words cancelled.] [Norman French.]

William Barret, tenant of John de Cogan, died in the K.'s prison; the K. seized his lands; John de Cogan, as chief lord, demands the land of Grenath, which William held of him; John cannot be answered without the K., and of this he prays remedy.

Let him sue a writ to certify the K. at the next Parliament on what occasion the lands were taken into the K.'s hand, and of whom William held them [these words cancelled].

The Council directs John to sue out a writ to the justiciary to hear John's complaint and render justice to him. [Norman French.]

Petition of Gyle de Cogan in Ireland. Had taken out a writ of Mort d'Ancestor against John Fitz Thomas of 1 messuage and 3 carucates of land, &c. in Portoulhan, pleaded at the assizes, was adjourned to the last assizes, and thence to the Common Pleas, Dublin, without redress; prays a writ to the Chancellor to give her another writ and to assign justices, or to return her writ to the county of Tipperary where the land is.

Let her take out a new writ at the Chancery, or sue to cause the record to be returned if she thinks wrong has been done to her. [Norman French.]

Petition of Thomas son and heir of Lawrence Cosyn. That the K. will grant to him that he may hold a moiety of 1 carucate of land in Bothercolyn of the K.'s demesne of Tassagard, and a moiety of a mill in Tachnavemy, which Thomas's father held of the K. for his life; he prays that these may be granted at the same extent and rent as the tenant farmers of that land are wont to hold. His father had been in the K.'s service for 27 years. The justiciary and K.'s Council in Ireland had hitherto granted to him that he might hold his estate and tenancy of that land as his father had held them, and this is to be found in the Rolls of the Exchequer there.

Let him go to the justiciary, escheators, and others the K.'s ministers who deal with these letters, and let them do what is for the K.'s advantage.

Petition of Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, praying the K. to take pity on Robert le Poer, his cousin, who had been punished for his trespass for a very long time. Eustace le Poer and his kinsmen also pray the K. to take pity on Robert. Whereas Eustace had assembled his brothers and his kinsmen before Sir Walter de la Haye, then sheriff of Waterford, and all the country, and then swore to take him living or dead and to kill him; so that none of his lineage should ever be accused. For a long time they imprisoned him in divers places until Eustace had occasion to go to Dublin. He then went to Sir Walter de la Haye and said, I hear that you are making great efforts to take Robert since you learn that I am not in the country. I will leave with you all my other brothers and friends who will be intentive to all your commands; and within this time Sir Walter de la Haye took Robert prisoner.

Richard de Burgh, Eustace le Poer, and his kinsmen pray the K. to deliver the said Robert who had long endured punishment for his trespass.

The K. grants that if Robert find surety that he will loyally conduct himself, and cause no damage to those who had taken him or to others, he may be discharged. [Norman French.]

Petition of Reginald son and heir of Thomas de Dene. Regarding 5,000*l.* lent by Willian de Dene, senior, to the K. when he was Lord Edward, a. r. 45 Hen. III. [1261], it appears by a mandate of the Exchequer, Dublin, directed to Edward King of England at Beaulieu la Reine in the New Forest, on Sunday next before the Purification, a. r. 2 [Jan. 28, 1273–4] that K. Edward was bound to Thomas de Dene, son and heir of the said William de Dene, in 2,009*l.* 26*s.* 8*d.*; and nevertheless 200*l.* were demanded of the same Thomas for divers debts in which William, his father, was bound to the K. The said 200*l.* was pardoned to Thomas on the above Sunday before the Purification, a. r. 2; and were allowed to the K. in the above sum of money in which the K. was bound to Thomas. On the same Sunday in the abbey of Beaulieu la Reine a writ issued to H[ugh] Bishop of Meath, then treasurer of Ireland, restraining him from making a distraint against Thomas for the 200*l.* aforesaid, provided that Thomas acknowledged that he had received 200*l.* of the said 5,000*l.* All this can be found entered on the K.'s Great Roll of the above date. Nevertheless the treasurer of the Exchequer, Dublin, after searching his Rolls, demands from Reginald 230*l.* for divers debts and trespasses of his ancestors. Reginald prays that the K. will grant him allowance in the amount of the debt aforesaid.

Let the agreements be seen and shown to the Chancellor in order that he may certify the K.

Petition of Nicholas de Wynle, clerk and citizen of Dublin, praying that he may be the K.'s clerk in the cities of Dublin and Drogheda to receive recognizances of merchants of debts due to them, according to the statute of Acton-Burnell. Had served the K. in his bench of Dublin for 8 years with Sir Richard of Exeter and Sir Nicholas Taff, justices thereof, and had nothing for his service. Wherefore he prays the K.'s grace aforesaid according to the manner granted in London and other English cities. The grace ought to be the more willingly granted to him for love of the Archbishop of Dublin, who well knows the deeds of Nicholas. The merchants of this country are greatly in want of this clerkship and much desire that it be granted to Nicholas.

The seal has not yet arrived in Ireland; when it is sent the K. will do what ought to be done. [Norman French.]

Petition of William de Berkamstede. Had been in the K.'s service at Youghal, Ireland, as keeper of the new custom for 13 years, by compulsion of the justiciary and treasurer, and had received nothing for his service and labour, though he had been put to great expense by being obliged continually to remain at Youghal in order to deliver the merchants, and prevent them from being delayed. A companion who is placed with him in this custody, and has half the K.'s seal and half a Roll indented to control him, is paid for all his time and all his service, and allowance is made to him at the Exchequer of Dublin. Prays that return may be made for his service.

Let the person who placed him in service sue out a writ to the justiciary to make a return to him. [Norman French.]

Petition of William de Deveneys, the clerk. The K. having enfeoffed him of land in the mountain parts of Ireland, prays that the K. will enable him to recover certain Petagii, who were wont to stay there, but who, owing to the violent war prevailing, had thence fled, and were dwelling with others. William had undergone various and grave expenses in restoring that land to its pristine state.

Let the justiciary be ordered to cause William to recover the Petagii unless they are dwelling elsewhere on the K.'s land, where they hold tenure under the K.

William also prays a charter of warren in his demesne lands of Ballitened, Baliolachel, Dunders, Baliocolman, and Tagmolyn in the county of Dublin.

Warren granted to him.

He further prays that he may erect a gallows, and have judgment when the Irish, the K.'s rebels or traitors, commit a theft or other crime against the peace.

He also prays for judgment of assize of bread and beer, perquisites of his tenants and pleas.

Gallows, and judgment of assize of bread and beer not granted.

Petition of the citizens of Waterford. Pray for murage to repair the wall and gates of the city which had been twice burnt in the K.'s time. The citizens have lost their goods at sea, whereby they are much impoverished. They cannot therefore restore the city without the K.'s aid. 50 years have elapsed since they had murage. The K. had attorned them at Down Ampney by William de la Marche until this Parliament.

The K. is not advised to do this at present. When he shall know the state of the city he will do what seems good to him.

The citizens pray the K.'s letters to the justiciary of Ireland to maintain and defend them according to their charters and the customs which they used when the city was in the K.'s hand.

Let them sue out a writ to the justiciary.

They also pray terms for their debt to the K., that they may pay 20 marks a year, for they take to the Exchequer each year 100 marks, and are thereby much harassed owing to the great loss which they have had.

The K. does not take account of debt of Ireland in England. [Norman French.]

Petition of Robert de Hastings, Knight Bachelor. Had 8 years ago, at the K.'s desire, gone to Ireland with the then justiciary, Stephen de Foleburne, Bishop of Waterford, and had continually remained there at great expense and peril to carry out the K.'s advantage and to pacify the land. Robert took the new castle of Maskybiggan from the K. for a term of 20 years, rendering at the Exchequer of Dublin 40 marks, where the K. was previously wont to give 40*l.* or 60*l.* for its custody. Robert prays the K. to give him the land aforesaid in fee for 40*l.* to be yearly rendered at the Exchequer of Dublin, and also the 2½ carucates of land in fee for the rent which Thomas de Ysham was wont to give, and which he held on lease of Sir Robert de Offort, the term whereof has expired. As Robert de Hastings had no receipt out of the land he took to farm this castle which all the country around knows to be almost the strongest in Ireland; the lands were waste when he took them to farm, whereby he spent much money on them, more than the lands are worth. Wherefore Robert prays the K. to discharge him, to take back the castle into the K.'s hand, and to inquire by the K.'s ministers what amount Robert owes to the K. in Ireland.

Let the Chancellor be advised, and let him do what he shall think good for the K. [Norman French.]

Petition of John de Burgh. Holds to farm of the K. a waste in the marches in the county of Limerick where he dare not lodge or spend money because he has no term save from year to year. Wherefore he prays the K. to direct his justiciary of Ireland to cause him to have warrant of Chancery to hold this land for a term of 20 years according to its worth.

Let the justiciary be commanded to do what may be for the K.'s advantage, and thereupon sue out a writ in Chancery. [Norman French.]

Petition of John de Foleburne. Thanks the K. for his liberation in exchange for Molachelyn brother of Calwach. The Irish who imprisoned John will only deliver him if they can have the liberation of the son of their uncle or the son of their brother, who are held as hostages at Dublin. Prays the K.'s grace thereupon.

The K. will only grant what he has granted. He will not liberate those who are hostages for peace; and he wishes those who are hostages for money to be liberated in a proper manner. [Norman French.]

Petition of Henry le Marshal, citizen of Dublin. Prays confirmation of the charter of a house of "Free Guest" at Dublin, which he has of the gift of the Prior of Hospital of Jerusalem in Ireland, as is testified under the seal of the chief justiciary of Ireland.

Let it be inquired whether damage will ensue to the K., the burgesses or city of Dublin, and let Henry thereupon sue out a writ in Chancery. [Norman French.]

Petition of Peter son of Meyler de Byrmingham of Ireland, deceased. For a debt contracted in England to merchants he had been imprisoned in the K.'s castle of Dublin, his goods and chattels taken, and nothing allowed to him of the debt. Prays deliverance in order that he may come to the K., show his grievances, and do right to all those who demand it of him. As long as he is in prison he himself and his land are lost.

The company of merchants of Lucca to whom he owes the debt are in Ireland; wherefore let him account where they are and do their will. [Norman French.]

Petition of the Bishop of Waterford against Robert de Stapleton, sheriff of Waterford. Henry de Argenthehan, tenant in chief of Robert and serjeant of his fee, distrained him by taking 14 of his fat cattle, and drove them 24 miles from the bishop's manor. The bishop not having obtained their deliverance took out a writ against Robert, but could not obtain full restoration. Robert had retained 2 of the best and fattest cows from Michaelmas, a. r. 16 [1288]. He thereupon prays remedy.

Robert says that the bishop's cattle were never taken by him or his bailiffs, or by his commandment or to his knowledge, and that the 2 cows were not taken or retained. This he prays may be inquired of; the bishop the like. The latter says that he took the K.'s writ to Robert to deliver his cattle; Robert received the writ and delivered 12 beasts, but retained the 2 cows, and this he prays may be inquired of. Robert says that no writ was delivered to him; that he received no writ, and delivered no beast, and this he prays may be inquired of, as before. [Norman French.]

Petition of David Brun. Being bound to the K. in 4½ marks, a writ under green wax issued out of the Exchequer, Dublin, to Robert de Stapleton, sheriff of Waterford, to levy that money against David. Robert out of hatred to him and Reynald his brother levied out of David's goods and chattels 18½ marks for which he would not give tally or acquittance. David is still distrained for the 4½ marks, and of this he prays remedy.

Robert answers that he only levied 4½ marks which came in by the green wax before Michaelmas, a. r. 16 [1288] when he gave David good acquittance; that the latter was not distrained for 4½ marks, and that he never took 18½ marks from him. This he prays may be inquired of; the other the like. [Norman French.]

David Brun puts in his place Robert son of John son of Philip, or Reginald Brun, against Robert de Stapleton, of a plea of trespass.

Petition of Hugh son of Michael le Fleming. His father having held in capite of the K. the manor of Dunmore in the county of Waterford leased it to Robert de Stapleton, sheriff of Waterford, for a term of 20 years. Robert having seisin of the manor took a charter of feoffment from Michael to pay him and his heirs 100 marks a year, and a letter of acquittance testifying that Michael had beforehand received the rent for the term aforesaid. He did this in order to bar the K. from ward and marriage if Michael died within the term. Michael went to Dublin, leaving his attorney in the county of Waterford to do suit for him. Robert during Michael's absence caused a charter of feoffment to be read in the full county testifying that Robert and his heirs were enfeoffed by Michael and his heirs to hold the manor aforesaid for ever, paying 1 penny a year. Robert removed Michael's attorney, entered the manor as if to do suit in his name, and appropriated the fee. Michael, when he learnt his disherison, sued out a writ of Novel disseisin against Robert before justices assigned. The assize was adjourned for want of jurors and a new day was given. Brother Stephen de Foleburne by Robert's procurement then caused that assize to come before him, and on the day when Stephen de Foleburne came to those parts Michael died, and Robert held the manor and appropriated the fee. The friends of Hugh the infant having learnt that the K. had arrived in England, caused the infant to come before him at the end of the Parliament last past to state his disherison. The escheator after the infant's departure from Ireland took the manor into the K.'s hand. Robert has also obtained the farm of the manor from the K. until Hugh's age. Hugh therefore prays that these matters may be inquired into and that the K. will not allow Robert to have the manor for the extent.

Hugh further shows that Robert being indebted to Michael his father in 17 marks for the farm aforesaid, Michael impleaded Robert before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin. Having recovered the debt he sued out a writ of judgment to the sheriff of Waterford to levy it from Robert's goods and chattels. Robert being sheriff would not perform the K.'s mandate, but held it at defiance; Michael thereupon sued out a second and a third writ, but Robert would do nothing. Hugh thereupon prays remedy and maintenance until his age from the K. His lands and tenements are in ward of the K. and are held of him in capite.

As to the 1st petition Robert says that he only claims the term of the lease of Hugh's father. The escheator testifies that he has leased the land to Robert for its true value.

The escheator is directed to fully charge Robert from Michael's death.

Robert undertakes to restore to the infant's friends in the full county court of Dublin all the charters which he has touching the land aforesaid save the chirograph for 20 years.

The escheator of Ireland is thereupon desired that if Robert does not do so he shall deprive him of his term and lease it to another for the true value. And the escheator is further directed to cause the infant to have reasonable maintenance until his age, as his lands are in ward of the K.

Petition of Robert de Carru:—Robert de Stapleton, sheriff of Waterford, having arrested him on a writ of capias, and detained him in prison, Robert de Carru sued out a writ of the official of Waterford testifying that he had made satisfaction to Mother Church, but Robert de Stapleton would not liberate him on account of this letter, but detained him in prison through coveting of his land of Rosmouhan which he holds of the K. in capite. In this prison a covenant was made that Robert de Stapleton should purchase of the K. one vele of land with the appurtenances in Liskolekenir to the use of Robert de Carru, and that the latter should give to Robert de Stapleton a moiety of a vele of land with the appurtenances in Rosmouhan when he had seisin of the land with the appurtenances in Liskolekenir, and of this moiety should make him a charter of feoffment and deliver this charter to Michael the Fleming in trust that as soon as Robert de Carru should have seisin of the land in Liskolekenir Michael le Fleming should put Robert de Stapleton in seisin of the moiety of the vele of land in Rosmouhan, and surrender the charter to him. After this covenant made he liberated Robert de Carru from prison; 8 days afterwards he took the charter from Michael le Fleming, entered the land with horses and arms, ejected therefrom the bailiff of the said Robert de Carru, and disinherited him of the bailywick; and thereof he prays remedy.

Robert de Stapleton says that the covenant between them was made a long time before Robert de Karru was imprisoned. And as to the charter which was to have been delivered in trust to Michael le Fleming, he answers that the charter was never delivered in trust; but that he came and freely surrendered the charter to him. As to what Robert de Carru says that Robert de Stapleton entered the land of the former against his will, it is answered that Robert de Stapleton acquired the land by Novel disseisin. And be it remembered that the land is held of the K. in capite. [Norman French.]

Robert de Carru puts in his place Robert son of John son of Philip, or Reginald Brun, against Robert de Stapleton of a plea of trespass.

Petition of John de Ufford. Othey is a land of the K. in Ireland in the marches of Glindelury which the Irish inhabit and hold of the K. at 2*d.* an acre a. year. As the Irish often misapply and retain the K.'s rent John asks the K. to enfeoff him of the land, rendering the above rent, customs, and services.

Let the justiciary be directed to turn the land to the K.'s profit by giving it to John or another as he may think fit to be done.

The petition of Theobald le Verdun is suspended at the prayer of Theobald, the plaintiff.

Petition of Reginald Brun. That Robert de Stapleton, sheriff of Waterford, coveting his land, and in order to have it, put him in prison and detained him there until Reginald had granted for 20 marks to Robert his land, which he holds in capite of the K., and is worth 100 marks; and he took seisin thereof while Reginald was imprisoned; and when he demanded payment of the 20 marks, he again arrested him, and put him in the prison of Dungarvan and there detained him from Thursday next before the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, until the feast of St. Martin next ensuing; also that he presented him before justices of gaol delivery as a felon and a homicide by an informal inquest.

Robert answers that he was sheriff of the county, and that Reginald was indicted before him at his tourn; that he was arrested for that reason, and not through malice or because his land was coveted, and not for money due by him; and this he prays may be inquired into; Reginald the like.

Besides this Reginald says that he was unduly and maliciously arrested, for the K. wills by his statutes that [no man be taken to the sheriff's tourn unless by inquest sealed with the seals of 12 men, whereupon he is indicted, and that he was presented before the justices of gaol delivery by word of mouth and not by inquest, and since the statute thereupon made; and this he prays may be inquired into.

Robert says that he did arrest him without inquest sealed, but this was before the statute, and this he prays may be inquired of; the other the like. Writ of Venire thereupon. [Norman French.]

Reginald Brun puts in his place David Brun or Robert de Carru against Robert de Stapleton of a plea of trespass.

Petition of John Fitz Philip. A ship having been wrecked on the coast of Ireland, Robert de Stapleton accused him of having robbed the ship of 160 marks sterling. He was indicted by inquest, but only through malice, and Robert threatened to imprison him at Dublin, so that through fear of the threat and of the imprisonment he fined with him for 40 marks, whereof he paid him 20 to be on bail until the next gaol delivery.

Robert answers that he did imprison him, and this by order of the chief justiciary of Ireland, who is still living, and of this he vouches the justiciary's record; and he says that he did fine with him for 40 marks, but this was not through menaces nor fear of imprisonment.

Special pleading between Robert and John regarding the 40 marks; joinder of issue between the parties. Writ of Venire to the sheriff.

John moreover complains that Robert aforesaid, by Geoffrey Brun his clerk, caused his 4 ploughs, his cows, and his sheep to be seized, drove them out of his tenement, and retained them from Magdalen's day, a. r. 17 [July 22, 1289], until the quinzaine of Michaelmas next ensuing, and caused him to be bound to the merchants of Lucca in 6 sacks of wool and 11 marks of silver, though he owed them nothing. John thereupon went to Dublin to the merchants, and in presence of Geoffrey asked if he was bound to them in anything; they answered not, and that he had not been distrained by them, wherefore Geoffrey caused his beasts to be delivered to him. By this outrageous distress and detinue he lost a great part of his beasts and gains, to his damage of 100*l.*

Robert says that he did not take the beasts by Geoffrey or others, and if Geoffrey took them it was by his own authority, and not by Robert's order. This Robert prays may be inquired into; John the like. Venire to the sheriff. [Norman French.]

John Fitz Philip puts in his place Robert his son, or Reginald Brun, against Robert de Stapleton of a plea of trespass.

Fiat for writ to the justices of Ireland, Sir Walter de la Haye, the escheator, and Sir Robert Bagot, to view the record of complaints of persons of Ireland against Robert de Stapleton, and his answers; inquire into the truth of these matters, and according to what they find do justice to the parties.

Petition of Theobald Boteler. The K. had received his homage on St. Peter's day in Lent, a. r. 18 [Feb. 22, 1289–90], and granted him a writ to the justiciary and council in Ireland, that he should, if found of age, have seisin of his lands. It being found that he had been of age on St. Peter's day aforesaid, he had seisin of his lands. He therefore prays that he may have the Easter rents and issues of his lands of Ireland and England, in regard to which he is disturbed by the escheators.

The escheator examined thereupon answers that no writ was taken to him until after Easter, and he had therefore kept the Easter rents for the K.'s use.

The escheator delivered the castle of Dorz to William le Marshal, lord of Trinaglas, upon security that if the castle while in his custody were taken or knocked down all the lands of William aforesaid should remain to the K. until the castle was restored; the castle was taken and knocked down to the great damage and destruction of Theobald's lands. He therefore prays the K. to restore his lands which the escheator only holds to rebuild Theobald's castle. He can have no profit out of his lands until the castle is restored.

The escheator seized the lands according to the covenant contained in the petition until the castle is restored at William's cost. The K. will do his pleasure thereupon.

Theobald further prays the K.'s grace regarding prisage of wines in the K.'s cities in Ireland. His father and his ancestors were entitled to take from each ship arriving with wines 1 hogshead before and 1 hogshead behind the mast, paying to the K. 40*s.* a hogshead.

Theobald prays that he may have the position which his father and ancestors enjoyed. He and his ancestors have been butlers in fee of the K., and hence the surname.

The escheator says that Theobald's father died seised of this franchise, but he knows not by what warraut. Let it be inquired into.

Further, whereas Theobald holds of the K. land in capite named Bree [Bray], in the county of Dublin, by the service of finding an armoured horse at the gate of the castle of Dublin when the K.'s service is summoned, the treasurer of Ireland converted this service into money, that is to say, 40*s.* where no money was ever given, no demand of money made, and his ancestors had ever rendered the service in the form aforesaid. Prays that he may render the service as his ancestors were wont to render it.

Let it be learnt from the treasurer what is the reason of his demand. [Norman French.]

Mem. that an inquisition touching the society of the Ricardi of Lucca in Ireland was sent to Sir William de Vescy, with a Roll of petitions of Parliament of 1 month of Easter, a. r. 18 [1290].

Petition of William Fitz Wareyn and Richard de Penkeston for themselves and the other pledges of Calvath Conechour. They were only pledges for Calvath's fine of 1,000 marks until sureties should be delivered. The sureties were delivered, and are in the K.'s custody, having been by the K.'s grace granted for the deliverance of Sir John de Foleborne, nevertheless they are distrained; of this they put themselves on the inrolments of the then chief justiciary; pray that these Rolls be searched.

Let a writ of Chancery issue to the justiciary of Ireland, and to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, that they search the Rolls of the then chief justiciary, and give redress to the sureties according to right; and that no distress be made against the sureties until the Rolls aforesaid are searched. [Norman French.]

Petition of Reginald son of Thomas de Dene of Ireland. Shows to the K.'s Council that whereas he had while under age acquired certain lands in the counties of Cork and Waterford, worth 44 marks a year, whereof his father had never been seised, and holds other lands not of the K. in capite, but of other mesne lords, the escheator of Ireland took the same lands into the K.'s hand, receiving therefrom 44 marks, a. r. 16. Wherefore Reginald prays remedy, and that he may have restitution of that amount if he may have it by the medium of justice, or that he may of special grace recover from the K. the expenses which he had incurred while under age and in the K.'s custody, in acquiring those lands.

Let a writ issue to the chief justiciary of Ireland to call the parties before him, and cause full right to be done, so that no further complaint may come before the K. [Norman French.]

Petition of the people of the county of Tipperary. Whereas the sheriffs of Tipperary, who hold the county to farm rendering yearly a certain sum, take from each knight's fee at each of their 2 tourns ½ mark, while they were only wont to take ½ mark from each barony, and now charge the people with their maintenance to the great grievance of the latter, the people pray remedy thereupon.

As the people of the county say that this is a tortuous taking to the damage of the common people, and newly levied to the profit of the sheriffs and not of the K., let a writ issue to the justiciary of Ireland, and let the parties be summoned before him, and full right be done so that no further complaint come before the K. by default of the justiciary. [Norman French.]

Petition of the Abbot and convent of our Lady of the Rock of Cashel. Having been endowed by David Mac Kervyl archbishop of Ireland of divers lands and tenements in free alms, they are harassed and impeded by escheators, sheriffs, and other ministers of the K. against their feoffments. They thereupon pray the K. to confirm the archbishop's feoffments so that they remain in peace and be no longer harassed.

While 2 of their monks and a Brother were in their church of St. Nicholas, people of Ireland came, killed one monk before the altar, beat the other to death, drove the Brother from the church, and threw him into the water. As men of religion they cannot prosecute this trespass, and therefore pray remedy of the K.

As to confirmation the K. is not advised to confirm at present.

And as to the other complaint let a writ issue to the justiciary of Ireland to call before him the escheator and the parties, and also the justices of the K.'s Bench and others of the Council, as the death of a man is concerned, and to do full right, so that no further complaint may be made to the K.

Petition of Richard Bishop of Lismore. Stephen Bishop of Waterford having impleaded him before the justices of Ireland at Dublin of certain manors, as of the right of the church of Waterford, the controversy was appeased by the Bishop of Lismore granting to the Bishop of Waterford for his life the manor of Ardfinnan, and 50*l.* a year of rent. Subsequently the Bishop of Waterford having been postulated to the archbishopric of Tuam, whereby he became dead to the bishopric of Waterford, retained in his hand the manor of Ardfinnan; and the Bishop of Lismore kept from him the 50*l.* a year of rent. The archbishop having been impleaded by the bishop before Ralph de Hengham in England of the manor of Ardfinnan, Ralph awarded that the archbishop had no right in the manor or the rent as he was dead as regards the bishopric of Waterford. The Bishop of Lismore thereby recovered by writ of judgment seisin of the manor of Ardfinnan, and of the 50*l.* rent. After the death of the archbishop, by abetment of his executors the treasurer of Ireland demanded the 50*l.* rent from the Bishop of Lismore, and the latter was deprived thereof by reason of a debt due by the archbishop to the K. Having been distrained he prays remedy.

Let a writ issue to the justiciary of Ireland to call before him the Bishop of Waterford and the other executors of the archbishop of the one part, and the Bishop of Lismore of the other; let the parties and the writ of judgment rendered by Ralph de Hengham at Westminster, which writ remains at the Exchequer of Dublin, be examined; let justice be rendered and the distress against the Bishop of Lismore cease until these matters be decided. [Norman French.]

Petition of David Craddoc. Maurice Russel, then sheriff of Waterford, broke open the gates and doors of his castle, and with Richard Corlel took 5½ marks of his rent and gave him no tally David feeling aggrieved complained thereupon to the barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, and Maurice angered thereby imprisoned David at Waterford until he obtained from him 6 marks.

David likewise complains that 2 Irishmen told Brother William Fitz Roger, Prior of the Hospital of Ireland, then locum tenens of Brother Stephen de Foleborne, justiciary of Ireland, that David wanted to hang them by his false oath; they falsely also stated that Brother William caused him to be amerced in 20*l.*, and caused his goods and chattels to be seized until he found surety for 20*l.* The treasurer having subsequently commanded Robert de Stapleton, then sheriff of Waterford, to levy the 20*l.* out of David's chattels, the sheriff came and ordered John Carru, the K.'s sergeant, to sell David's corn. John took the corn, retained a moiety to his own use, and gave the other moiety to Stephen Pouer. David came to free his corn, but he could not get it. John also took 3 of his horses at the price of 20*s.*, and did with them what he pleased.

was guilty of the trespasses charged against him by the prior, or not; it was found that he was not guilty, whereupon a writ issued to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, that the K. on account of his poverty had pardoned to him 18 marks, and acquitted him of 18 marks, and it was so inrolled. And so the demand ceased until Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, who would not perform the K.'s mandate, distrained him. David prays remedy thereupon of the K.

Let a writ issue to the justiciary of Ireland to call the parties before him, examine the writ and inquisitions, and render justice; or let a new writ issue if there be occasion, and let the justices inquire into whose hands David's chattels have come. [Norman French.]

Petition of Adam Gaynard against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland. Adam being, as minister of the Queen in Ireland, bound to render account, Nicholas out of hatred of him caused him to be arrested under a writ of green wax, cast him into prison, and retained him there from Thursday in la Semeyne peynouse until the Nativity of our Lady [Sept. 8] next ensuing. He charged him with not rendering an account, although Adam was ready to account before any auditor, save the said Nicholas, who was his enemy. Adam for this purpose offered 24 pledges; but Nicholas refused the security, and retained him in prison from the Nativity of our Lady [Sept. 8] until the 9th day after St. Martin [Nov. 18]; While he was in prison Nicholas caused his beasts, oxen, cows, mares, hogs, and sheep, and beasts of his ploughs, to be sold, and disturbed his farm. Moreover William son of Adam aforesaid complains against the said Nicholas that he wrongfully imprisoned him among thieves for a year three weeks and 9 days, and ironed him with 2 pairs of fetters wrongfully and without judgment.

Answer of Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland. That he is not Chancellor and did not make the writ; that he did not take or sell the cattle, if they were taken or sold it was by the sheriff or other officer; as to David's arrest in Dublin he was arrested because he was indebted to the K. and Queen; and this David avows as he did not claim his release by mainprise according to law and usage of the Exchequer.

Adam says that he was not duly imprisoned, for he says that for debt of the K. no man ought to be imprisoned, save merchants, or for a trust [ne deit hum'e estre comaundé fors ke a marchans ou a la fiance]; and moreover the treasurer caused him to be put into irons, and kept in strict confinement, &c.

The treasurer says that this was by William de Dodingseles and the constable and not by him. As to the imprisonment of William son of Adam Gaynard he answers that it was proved before the Exchequer that William took the beasts out of the K.'s possession from the place where they had been put by the K.'s ministers, and for this reason he was rightly imprisoned.

William says that his father's beasts were never seized for a debt due by the latter to the K., and that he never took them out of the K.'s possession, and this he is ready to aver by record of the Exchequer.

The justiciary and the barons of the Exchequer are commanded to cause the parties to come before them and to render justice. [Norman French.]

Petition of Walter Bishop of Waterford. That Nicholos de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, after the death of the justiciary of Ireland, unjustly ejected him from his farms, namely, from a ward in Donssohelyn, worth 12*l.* a year, and from the ward of an heir called William of Finglas, also from the marriage of the heir, worth 100 marks; the bishop had entry therein by good letters from one lawfully entitled; the bishop also held of the justiciary a farm called Rath, rendering to the justiciary 40 marks a year; the treasurer ejected him from the moveables and immoveables thereof to his damage of 100 marks. The bishop also prays the K.'s grace for 60*l.* which the treasurer detains from him of his fee of the time when he was Chancellor of Ireland, namely, for 1½ year, and whereof the treasurer has three writs of Liberate. The treasurer also ejected him from 20 librates of rent out of a farm in Carrick, which farm had belonged to the bishop for 6 years; the treasurer unjustly gave these 20 librates to Reginald de Dene, patron of the church of Kells, to acquit him of a debt due to the K., with provision that Reginald, patron of that church, which is worth 50 marks a year, should expel the nephew of the bishop and present to the church William de Clere, brother of the treasurer.

As to the custody and marriage of William of Finglas and as to the farm of Rath, the treasurer says that Stephen de Foleburne was at his death bound to the K. in divers debts, and it was ascertained by an inquisition that this custody and farm were in Stephen's seisin when he died; wherefore it was ordered by the justiciary, the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, that these chattels with all Stephen's other chattels, should be seized into the K.'s hand until satisfaction should be made to the K. for those debts.

Walter the Bishop says that it was shown to the justiciary how he had been ejected from the custody and farm which were in his seisin, and whereof Stephen did not die seised under colour of the inquisition aforesaid, and the justiciary told him in reply not to meddle with anything touching the treasurer.

Let the justiciary be ordered to restore the Bishop of Waterford to his former estate if he can show good title, and to inquire whether the ward belonged at his death to Stephen de Foleburne aforesaid, and to act thereupon according to law.

As to 60*l.* fee of the bishop the treasurer says that he knows that such a writ was directed to him and the chamberlains, but he says that the bishop is bound to the K. in divers debts which much exceed the sum aforesaid, and this he is prepared to show before any persons assigned to inquire thereupon. For this reason he did not pay the money aforesaid to the bishop.

The bishop says that he owes nothing to the K. and this he is prepared to verify.

Let the Rolls of the Exchequer and Chancery be searched as to whether the bishop is held in any debt to the K., and if so, let what he owes be allowed and the residue be paid to him; or let the whole be paid to him if he owes no debt.

As to the 20*l.* of annual rent the treasurer says that the bishop was not ejected by him, but by judgment of him and of the barons of the Exchequer, and thereupon he vouches the record of the Exchequer.

Let the process be seen and the barons questioned. If right was done, let it stand; if there was error in the process or the judgment, let it be amended.

Petition of John le Juvene. That having a ship in the haven of Waterford, worth 120*l.* a year to him, laden with wares of the value of 200*l.*, the commonalty came and stole all his goods wrongfully and against the peace; that having complained of the trespass to Nicholas de Clere and the justices of Ireland, they would not do justice to him but gave him leave to go to England to complain; that on his departure for England the treasurer sent the sheriff, his men, and other persons, to the church of the Franciscans of Youghal, broke open with force and arms the door of the vestry, and took his box which was there, with his muniments, his jewels, and his treasure to the amount of 200*l.*; and that Nicholas unjustly levied from him 100*l.* by way of penalty, which is forbidden by the statute.

As to the 1st article of his complaint John is directed to sue before and have a writ to the justiciary to do him justice.

As to the 2nd article Sir Nicholas says that he did not inflict the grievances charged against him; and as to the command he demands judgment whether he ought to answer until the doers are convicted of the fact.

Let the justiciary and the Council inquire as to this and amend it.

As to the third article the treasurer admits that the sheriff did it by command of Nicholas de Clere, and he demands judgment as before.

The Council directs that the parties be sent before the justiciary and Council and that justice be done.

Trinity. 666. Record and process of a plaint between the Abbot of the Port of St. Mary [Dunbrody], plaintiff, and the Master of the Templars in Ireland, before the K.'s justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin.

Essoigns at Dublin in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, a. r. 13 [1285].

Pleas there in the octaves of Hilary, a. r. 14 [Jan. 20, 1285–6] Waterford. The Abbot of the Port of St. Mary demands against the Master of the Templars in Ireland 5 carucates of land in le Crook which he claims as the right of his church, and wherein the master had not entry save after the disseisin which Inwen Offolan made thereof against John formerly Abbot of the Port of St. Mary, the abbot's predecessor. The master comes and prays view thereof. A day is given to them at Dublin in 1 month of Easter, on which day comes the K.'s writ commanding that the justices send the record and process of the plaint to England. The mandate is executed accordingly.

Afterwards the K. sent his writ as follows:—The K. to his justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin. Whereas the Abbot of the Port of St. Mary of Dublin by a writ of entry in an undue form, not usual in England, and obtained as is said by surprise of the Irish court, had impleaded the Master of the Templars in Ireland as above, the K. had caused the record and process to come before him. Afterwards the abbot came before the K. and alleged that he had obtained that writ before the publication of the K.'s statutes in Ireland, and ought not to lose it, because it had been previously used in that country, as appears by inspection of the Rolls of the Irish Chancery. The K. therefore commands the justices that in this plaint they proceed according to right, law, and usage in Ireland. They shall summon the master to come before them at Dublin in the quinzaine of Michaelmas to do what is just. Witness, S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford, chief justiciary of Ireland. Kylketun', Aug. 25, a. r. 14 [1286].

On the morrow of St. Martin [Nov. 12] in same year the master appears and says that he is not bound to answer the abbot or the writ aforesaid, because he says that a writ called of entry after a disseisin does not apply (though a common writ of entry does) unless where the third degree of persons is exceeded; wherefore he says that this writ is vicious and ought not to be pleaded. The abbot objects that the master cannot make this objection because he appeared in court and demanded a view of the land, whereby he accepted and ratified the writ. The master maintains that he may urge the objection both before and after view, and of this he demands judgment; the abbot the like. A day is given to the parties to hear judgment at Dublin in the octaves of Hilary [Jan. 20, 1286–7].

In the quinzaine of Easter, a. r. 15 [April 20, 1287] the master appears, renounces the objection pending for judgment, and pleads that he is not bound to answer the abbot, or the writ, without the K., because he says that King Henry, great grandfather of the K., gave, granted, and by his charter confirmed the land aforesaid to the Templars, and he produces a charter of Hen. II., witnessing this, as follows:—

> Henry King of England, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, and Earl of Anjou, to archbishops, bishops, abbots, earls, barons, justices, sheriffs, and the K.'s ministers and lieges, Frank, English, and Irish, of all his land. Grant to the Brothers of the Temple to defend the Holy Land of Jerusalem, of mills on the water near Waterford, which water is called Polwaterfoure, mills on the water near Waterford, which water is called Innermictam; a vill near Dublin called Clenmthorp with its appurtenances; Crook, with 10 carucates of land; the vill near Waterford whose church is dedicated to St. Barry; a small marsh between the K.'s houses and the sea near Waterford the church of St. Aloch near Wexford, with the land belonging thereto; and Agdmile, a burgess of Waterford, with all his chattels. Witnesses, R. Archbishop of Rouen, A. Bishop Leyton', H. Bishop Bayoc', Richard Archdeacon Pyoc', Richard de Humet, constable, William de St. John, Fulk Paynel, Hugh de Cressy, Robert de Stoteville, Say de Quyncy, William de Curcy, Day Eudon' son of Ernisius, Robert de Broch', the marshal. Abryncæ.

The master also says that the King that now is confirmed to the Brothers Templars the gift and feoffment of that land by King Henry aforesaid, and produces that confirmation as follows:—

> Inspeximus and confirmation by King Edw. I. of a charter made by King Henry III., his father, whereby the latter monarch confirmed to the Brothers Templars all gifts of lands, men, and alms conferred by the K.'s predecessors or by others in the past, by the K. himself in the present, and by kings or others in the future, or otherwise acquired or to be acquired, as well in churches as in worldly things and possessions. Grant to them that they be for ever quit of all amerciaments and free of scot, geld, and aids of kings, sheriffs, and their ministers, of hidage, carvage, danegeld, hornegeld, issues of wapentake, scutages, tallage, lestage, stallage, shires and hundreds, pleas and plaints, ward, ward penny, aver penny, under penny, bordel penny, thothyn penny, and of works of castles, parks, and bridges, inclosures, carriage, sumage, naval toll, building of royal houses, and all works. Their woods shall not be seized for those works or for other uses, or their corn for supplies of castles. They may take from their woods to supply their houses without forfeiting for waste or being amerced. Quit claim to them of all their lands and of all assarts of them or of their tenants made or to be hereafter made, of waste, regard, view of foresters, and of all other customs; grant that they may without licence assart and cultivate woods within metes of the forest, without being brought to justice; they and their tenants shall for ever be quit of the lawing of their dogs, and free of toll in every fair, bridge, way, and sea, throughout the realm and throughout all the K.'s lands in which the K. can grant them liberties; all the markets of them and their tenants shall be free of toll; if any of their tenants shall commit an offence whereby they are adjudged to lose life or limb, and shall fly, not abide by judgment, or commit any other offence whereby they ought to lose their chattels, the chattels shall belong to the brothers, and they may take possession of them even where the K.'s bailiffs, if they belong to the K., ought to take them into the K.'s hand. Grant that animals called waifs found in the fee of the Templars may belong to them, unless some person shall follow them who will and can prove that they are his, and unless they are sought and followed within a reasonable time according to the custom of the country. If any tenant of the brothers aforesaid shall forfeit his fee the brothers may put themselves in seisin of that fee and possess it, although the K. has been wont to take possession of the fees of fugitives and persons condemned, for a year and day. If any of their tenants be amerced to the K. or his bailiffs for any cause, debt, or forfeiture of merchandise, the amerciaments shall be collected, carried to the Exchequer in one burse, and delivered to the brothers, saving the kingly power of justice of life and limb. The brothers shall not forfeit by lapse of time any of the liberties contained in this charter. Witnesses, W[illiam] Bishop of Salisbury, John Maunsel, Provost of Beverley, William of Kilkenny, Archdeacon of Coventry, Peter de Chacepore, Archdeacon of Wells, John de Grey, Bertram de Crieull, John de Lessington, Robert Wallerand, Roger de Turkelby, Simon de Wauton, Henry of Bath, Giles de Erdington, Henry de Wengham, William de Grey. Reading, June 12, a. r. 37 [1253]. Witnesses to the inspeximus, G[odfrey] Bishop of Worcester, R[obert] Bishop of Bath and Wells, W[illiam] Bishop of Norwich, Th[omas] Bishop of St. David's, Edmund the K.'s brother, Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, William de Valence, the K.'s uncle, John de Vesy, Robert Tipetot, Hugh Fitz Otto, Thomas de Weyland, Robert Fitz John, Richard de Bosco. Westminster, Nov. 22, a. r. 9 [1280].

The master therefore says that as the brothers hold this land by grant of Henry II. and by confirmation of the K. that now is, and have hitherto been and still are in full and peaceful seisin thereof, the master ought not and is not bound to answer to the abbot without the K.

The abbot answers and says that neither the charter of Hen. II. nor the confirmation of the K. that now is ought to hinder him, because John the Abbot aforesaid, his predecessor, was after the making of the charter aforesaid in full and peaceful seisin of the land in right of his church, until Inweyn Offolan aforesaid disseised him, as the writ says. The abbot being asked how and by what title John the Abbot was seised of the land, says by Gilbert of Essex, who gave the land to the Abbot and monks of St. Mary; and he produces a charter testifying this as follows:—

Gift, grant, and confirmation in frankalmoign by Gilbert of Essex to God, St. Mary, the Cistercian order of St. Benedict, St. Thomas, St. Christopher, St. Patrick, and the Abbot and monks of the chapel of St. Mary of Crook, in order that their land may be near to their abbey, of 5 carucates of land in fee which belonged to Hugh son of Bauderd. He also produces a grant and confirmation made by King John when he was Earl of Morton and lord of Ireland to the abbot and monks of the same land, as follows:—

John son of the King of England and lord of Ireland, to archbishops, bishops, abbots, earls, barons, justices, constables, bailiffs, and all his lieges, Frank, English, and Irish. Grant and confirmation to God and Blessed Mary, St. Benedict, and the Cistercian monks of the Port of St. Mary and their brothers, of the seat of their abbey, and of all the lands underwritten, namely:—of the gift of Hervey Montecinorenci Ardbynichy and Crosgormorgi, and a grove, together with a plain by the waterside, and so upward by the water called Cempuil to a torrent coming from the south and falling into Cempuil, beside the way from Tathunuc al Malpas, and Calatrum, Cuallath, and Rath Qui, and Tirmycaus, Lesculemen and Tirgoneran, Culescharth and Balligon, and so by the torrent east of Baligonne, and west of Drumculib, so that the torrent shall be the boundary of their land there, as the torrent descends to the water of Bawe; and thence the public way running from that water along the outside of the grove as far as Balycha is the boundary between them and the Black Monks; so that the plain which is between the way and the grove, and the grove itself in the part of those and of the other monks, shall be Dummecanan and Dunbrodeky. Two carucates of land in the island on the south, 4 haylandes near that land, and communio [commonage] of the island, with all easements; and of the gift of Gilbert de Essex, 5 carucates of land in fee which belonged to Hugh son of Baudered. Witnesses, Bertram de Verdon, Gilbert Pip', William de Wenmenal, Theobald, Walter, Alard, the donors' chamberlains; Roger de Planes, William de Turberville, Roger de la Mara, William the chaplain; William de Flamariis, Richard, clerk of the donor's chamber. Tibrach.

The abbot is prepared to verify this that from the making of Gilbert's charter to the confirmation of the Lord John, and afterwards, without interruption, he was in peaceful seisin of the land until Inweyn Offalan aforesaid unjustly disseised John Heyn, formerly Abbot of the Port of St. Mary, the abbot's predecessor, as the writ says.

The Master of the Templars says, as before, that he is not bound to and will not answer without the K. Wherefore judgment in the quinzaine of St. John.

Afterwards the K. commanded that the record and process of this plaint with everything relating thereto should be sent to him under the seal of Robert Bagot, as appears by the K.'s writ inclosed in the record. Afterwards the plaint was adjourned until the next Parliament after Easter wheresoever, &c., a. r. 18 [1290], as appears by the Roll of Hilary term in same year, and the parties appeared before the K. in that Parliament.

The master says, as before, that he ought not to answer without the K. because he holds the K.'s charter testifying that the K. gave the land as is found in the above record; and now holding according to that charter he will not allow the abbot to invalidate the gift by any verification of a jury, because it would follow therefrom that gifts and alms of the K.'s predecessors might be set aside by such inquisitions, which would be hard as well to the K. and his heirs as to the feoffees.

The abbot says, as above, that John aforesaid, his predecessor, was enfeoffed of the tenements by Gilbert of Essex, and always continued his seisin until Iwayn Offalan disseised. The abbot being asked if he can show by whom and in what manner the seisin accrued to his predecessor after the making of the charter of Hen. II., answered by Gilbert aforesaid. And being asked whether Gilbert's charter was made before or after the charter of King Henry, gave no precise answer, but said that Gilbert aforesaid, who came at the conquest of Ireland, gave the lands to his house, and that they always remained to it until the time of King John, when his predecessor was ejected.

The plaint was thereupon adjourned to the K.'s Bench, and during that adjournment the abbot disavowed Nicholas of Warwick, his advocate. Afterwards in the octaves of Trinity, during the same Parliament, the parties appeared, and the master demanded judgment, alleging that judgment had been given before the K. that he ought not to answer without the K. The abbot says that judgment before the K. had not been rendered against him, &c. A day was given to the parties in the quinzaine of Michaelmas wheresover, &c.

Afterwards, in 1 month of Easter, a. r. 19 [May 22, 1291], concord was made by licence between the Abbot of Dunbrody and the master. The latter gives 20s. for licence, and they are assigned to Richard de Bretuill, who prosecutes for the K., and is his attorney. By the concord the abbot acknowledges the tenements to be the right of the master and of his church of St. Mary of the Templars in Ireland, and he remises, releases, and quit claims them of himself, his successors, and his church of the Port of St. Mary of Dunbrody to the master and his successors for ever. For this acknowledgment, remise, quit claim, and concord the Master of Ireland aforesaid gives to the abbot 100 marks, one moiety payable at Michaelmas, a. r. 19, at his manor of Crook, in Ireland, and the other moiety at Michaelmas next ensuing. Power to the justices in Ireland to issue a Fieri facias against the lands and chattels of the master in case of non-payment.

On being answered that it was not usual to inroll protection or other letters by their transcripts, he left the transcript with the writer stating that he should search for the protection and show it to the latter. [Indorsed.] Robert Carrig pledge to prosecute for Andrew Brun.

Jordan Daubeney and Meyler le Poer pledges to answer for Geoffrey Brun. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, J.G. 11,953, m. 3.]

Sept. 17. 771. Having committed to William de Vescy during pleasure the office of justiciary of Ireland, and the land of Ireland, with the K.'s castles and other appurtenances, upon condition that he shall yearly take his fee at the Exchequer while he continues in that office, the K. wills and grants that if the K.'s enemies or rebels should raise war in those parts, or the K.'s castles should be hostilely invaded or besieged, William shall have out of the K.'s treasure his expenses as often as he shall happen to go with horses, arms, and the K.'s army to repress their malice, and to repel invasion and siege. One of the clerks of the Exchequer, Dublin, to be assigned by William and the Treasurer and Barons, shall receive the money out of the K.'s Treasury, by the hands of the treasurer and chamberlains there, and shall make out the outgoings and expenses by view of William or of a person deputed by him, and by his testimony render at that Exchequer an account thereof. New Place in Shirwood.

Mandate to the treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer, Dublin, to pay the money as often as need be and William shall give notice, and to cause a clerk to be assigned as aforesaid. The K. wills that the money be allowed to the treasurer in his account. [Pat., 18 Edw. I., m. 7.]

Sept. 18. 772. Letters of attorney for 3 years under the names of John de Vescy and William de Barneby for William de Vescy, about to depart for Ireland on the K.'s service. Rufford.

Similar letters of attorney under the names of Henry de Meauton and Alan de Lotoft for William de Thornton, about to proceed to the same parts. [Pat., 18 Edw. I., m. 10.]

[Soon after Sept. 18.] 773. The mayor and commonalty of the city of Waterford to the K. Had received on Monday before the feast of St. Matthew the Apostle [Sept. 18], a. r. 18, the K.'s writs directed to them by the burgesses of Bristol, and charging the mayor and commonalty with taking from the burgesses undue customs, to the prejudice of the liberty of the latter. The mayor and commonalty have not done so. The only customs they have received are the K.'s ancient and usual customs which the K. and his ancestors have from time immemorial taken from the burgesses, and with which the mayor and commonalty have been endowed by charter of the K.'s progenitors. The burgesses were wont freely to pay those customs, but if they now cease to do so the mayor and commonalty will no longer be able to raise the farm of their city. The mayor and commonalty therefore pray the K. to preserve their liberties and other customs unimpaired. [Chancery Files, Bundle 13.]

Sept. 21. 774. Grant to William de Vescy of 500*l.* a year for his maintenance in the office of justiciary so long as he shall continue in it. Kingsclipston in Shirwood. [Pat., 18 Edw. I., m. 7.]

Sept. 21. 775. Writ of Liberate to the treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer, Dublin, for payment to William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, of 500*l.* a year at the terms usual at the Exchequer, which the K. grants to him as his fee so long as he shall continue in the office. Kingsclipston in Shirwood. [Pat., 18 Edw. I., m. 7.]

Sept. 21. 776. The K. gives to William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, so long as he remains in that office, respite of all the ancient debts in which he is bound at the Exchequer to the K., as well debts of his father and mother as others his ancestors, and which are exacted from him by summons of the Exchequer. Mandate accordingly to the barons of the Exchequer. King's Clipston. [Memoranda, Q.R., Edw. I., No. 16, Rot. 2 dors.]

Sept. 22. 777. Brothers Henry de Hauterive and Adam le Barun, brother canons of the house of St. Thomas the Martyr of Dublin, announcing to the K. the resignation of Brother William, called the Welshman, late abbot thereof, have letters of licence to elect. Kingsclipston in Shirwood. [Pat., 18 Edw. I., m. 6.]

Michaelmas. 778. Ireland. A day in one month of Easter, wheresoever, &c. is given to the Abbot of Dunbrody, plaintiff, and the Master of the Templars in Ireland, of a plea of land, because judgment has not yet been rendered. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 126, Rot. 19.]

Michaelmas. 779. The K. had named a day for Nicholas de Clere to render his account before the barons of the Exchequer in the quinzaine of Michaelmas last past, for all the time during which he was treasurer of Ireland; and as this account could not be audited without the chamberlains of Ireland, especially as they as well as the said Nicholas are bound to answer touching all receipts and payments, the chamberlains of Ireland were commanded to be before the barons at Westminster on the day aforesaid, with Rolls, writs, and other matters touching this account in order that it may be rendered. Westminster, July 12.

Afterwards a day was given to Nicholas and the chamberlains on the morrow of the Holy Trinity, as is contained elsewhere. [Memoranda, L.T.R., Edw. I., No. 19, Rot. 33.]

Having had a grant from Walter Vured, then mayor of Dublin, and the commonalty of that city, by letters under their seal, that the house aforesaid should be their free hospital and should be for ever quit from all exactions, tallages, demands or collections of money, the Prior and Brothers grant to Henry Marshal aforesaid that he shall be their free guest in the stone house aforesaid, desiring that he and his heirs may henceforth have all liberties granted to their other free guests in Ireland. Nov. 2. 799. Letters of attorney in Ireland for 2 years, under the names of Hugh de Brigges and William de Eton, for Robert de Criketot, remaining by licence in England. King's Clipston.

Similar letters in Ireland for 3 years, under the names of Geoffrey de Bikersditch and Richard le Messager, for Agnes de Valence, remaining by licence in England. [Pat., 18 Edw. I., m. 4.]

Nov. 3. 800. Richard le Messager, essoigner of Agnes de Valence, appeared against John Fitz Geoffrey, of the following plea. On the part of Agnes de Valence, the K.'s cousin, who was the wife of Maurice Fitz Gerald, it had been shown to the K. that before Maurice married her he had by assent, will, and ordinance of the K. enfeoffed John de Verdun, deceased, of Maurice's manors of Adare, Castle Robert, Cronigth' Wyrgidy, and Green; that John afterwards by assent, will, and ordinance of the K., enfeoffed Maurice and Agnes aforesaid of those manors, to hold to them and their heirs in tail for ever; and that the same John Fitz Geoffrey, as the K. now hears, has brought a writ of right before justices itinerant in Ireland at the assizes of Limerick against Agnes of the manor of Green, to wit, of 1 messuage, 3 carucates of land, 100 acres of wood, 100 acres of pasture, and 10 librates of rent, which she claims as her right and inheritance. The K., willing to be certified regarding the record and process of the plaint, and to render justice to the parties, commanded the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland, that if Agnes was seised of the manor of Green, he should cause the plaint to be inrolled, and send the record and process thereof under his seal before the K. in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, wheresoever, &c., and summon John to be there to prosecute his plaint. The justiciary sent the record, &c. And John being called from day to day from the quinzaine of Michaelmas until the morrow of All Souls, came not. Wherefore Agnes as regards this record goes without day, and because it is not known at whose suit the writ was obtained there is no amerciament. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 126, Rot. 41.]

Nov. 3. 801. Instrument whereby John Archbishop of Dublin, lieutenant of the chief justiciary of Ireland, acknowledges to have received from Sir Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, by the hands of Peter de Balymor, chamberlain of the Exchequer, Dublin, and Thomas of London, receiver there, 250*l.* sterling, due to the Archbishop for his fee for half a year from the octaves of Michaelmas, a. r. 17 [1289]. Dublin, morrow of the Commemoration of Souls [a. r. 18]. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 19, m. 12.]

Nov. 4. 802. Of the 60 marks for which the Abbot of Wetheney made a fine with the K. for the trespass of himself and his men in harbouring the Irish of Thomond, enemies and rebels, the K. grants to the abbot that he yearly render to the K. at the Exchequer, Dublin, 5 marks, namely 2½ marks at the Exchequer of Easter next ensuing, and 2½ marks at Michaelmas following, and so on from year to year until the 60 marks aforesaid be discharged. Mandate to the Treasurer and Barons of the same Exchequer to cause the abbot to have those terms, and to cause it to be so inrolled. King's Clipston. [Fine Rolls, 18 Edw. I., m. 1.]

Nov. 6. 803. Instrument whereby Walter de Kenlegh, Chancellor of the Exchequer of Dublin, acknowledges to have received from Sir

Nicholas de Clere, the K.'s treasurer, by the hands of Geoffrey Brun, chamberlain of the same Exchequer, and Thomas of London, receiver, 100*s.* of silver for his fee for Michaelmas term, a. r. 18 [1290]. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 19, m. 13.]

Nov. 15. 804. The K. had named a day on the morrow of the Holy Trinity for Nicholas de Clare to render his account before the barons of the Exchequer, England, of all the time during which he was treasurer of Ireland, and this account could not be audited without the chamberlains of the Exchequer of Ireland, especially as the treasurer and chamberlains are bound to answer together touching all receipts and payments. Being unwilling that receipts, accounts, or other matters of the K. or of others in the kingdom of Ireland should be retarded by absence, the K. commands William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, to make in the meanwhile such provisions regarding the custody of the office of the treasurer and chamberlains, that matters may proceed and be managed there to the K.'s advantage and honour. Witness, W. de March, the K.'s treasurer. [Memoranda, L.T.R., Edw. I., No. 19, Rot. 37 dors.]

Nov. 15. 805. Mandate to the chamberlains of the Exchequer of Ireland, as above, to be before the barons at Westminster on the day aforesaid with rolls, writs, and other matters touching the account aforesaid, in order to render it with Nicholas de Clere. Witness, W. de March, the K.'s treasurer. [Memoranda, L.T.R., Edw. I., No. 19, Rot. 37 dors.]

[16–18 Edw. I.] 806. [Names of Lombard merchants]:—Nicholas le Lumbard of Lucca; Richard le Lumbard; Turgyan le Lumbard; Bartholomew le Lumbard. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, H.C.H. 3900, m. 1.]

[16–18 Edw. I.] 807. Walter, brother of William de Carrik', complains of Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, that whereas William had long ago paid to merchants of Lucca dwelling in Ireland, by order of Richard de Querle, then receiver in Ireland of Alienor the Queen Consort, 20*l.* 2*s.*, which he owed to that Queen, and had received from the merchants letters thereupon, Nicholas de Clare, after the death of William de Carrik', caused 20*l.* 2*s.* to be again levied out of William's goods and chattels, and after a while caused Walter aforesaid to come to the Exchequer and ordered him to be detained in irons in prison until he had levied for the 3rd time that amount out of William's goods and chattels.

Nicholas answers that he did not cause these moneys to be levied out of the chattels of deceased or of the said Walter, but he says that Richard de Querleghe aforesaid, before the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, by the K.'s writ against Walter aforesaid, brother and executor of William, traversed the said 20*l.* 2*s.* of William's debt by a deed thereupon made in the name of the said William to the use of the same Queen, and that by judgment of the barons the same Walter was delivered to the marshal of the Exchequer until he paid the money to Richard; Nicholas says that he only levied the money once, and ordered Walter to be imprisoned by judgment of the barons. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, H.C.H., 3900, m. 8.]

[18 Edw. I.] 808. Theobald son of Theobald le Botiler, deceased, gives to the K. 100 marks to have seisin of his lands in Ireland by the hands of the justiciary of Ireland when he shall have proved his lawful age, so that after proof of age he shall not return to England to pray and receive seisin. [Fine Rolls, 18 Edw. I., m. 18.]

[18 Edw. I.] 809. Recognizance by Ralph Patrick to Sir Robert de Haustede, knight, for 60 marks payable at Easter 1292. Ralph grants that the money if not paid may be levied out of his lands and chattels in Ireland. [Close, 18 Edw. I., m. 2.]

[18 Edw. I.] 810. [Articles touching Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland.]

Of 21*l.* respited until now, &c., and of the payment of 10*l.* only made thereupon by the treasurer.

Of an amerciament of 50 marks, where ½ mark is put; and amerciament of a surety for 40*s.*, where 40*d.* are put.

Of an amerciament of the treasurer, where nothing was taxed, and he himself wrote nothing. This is absurd and a manifest error.

Of an amerciament of 40*s.* for cloth sold against the assize, he having set down 2 marks; nevertheless he cancelled the 2 marks and in his own hand wrote 'error.'

Of the bailiffs of Dublin amerced in Chancery at 100*s.* because they did not execute the K.'s writ; in the rolls of the Exchequer 50*s.* only are written; they are cancelled and 'error' is written as before in the hand of the treasurer.

Of a K.'s writ sent to the treasurer and barons from parts beyond the sea that common pleas should be held in the Exchequer, which writ is found erased.

Of the plea between Walter de Bodenham, complainant, and Richard Locard, clerk of the treasurer, whereof 3 inrolments were made where the barons only testify 1.

Of the same Walter adjudged to prison for a foreign debt.

Of 25 marks for which goods of the church of Slane belonging to S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, deceased, were sold to Richard le Flemeng, patron of that church, with the assent of Nicholas, the treasurer. Richard drew up a bond to pay this money to the K. for the archbishop, and delivered this bond to the treasurer, who received and delivered it to Th[omas] Bishop of Meath, in the name of a sequestration which he had made of the fruits of that church; and so the treasurer delivered to the bishop the K.'s money aforesaid; and this appears by record of the barons.

As to the article wherein it is said that the treasurer opened the coffers of S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, the justiciary, deceased, and removed the contents, it is found by record of J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, now justiciary of Ireland, of the justices, and of the barons of the Exchequer, that the archbishop when by the K.'s order he had come with the justices of the Common Pleas to Dublin, whither the coffers had been conveyed by the treasurer and G. Bron', to inquire as to the premises, and had ordered the coffers to be brought before them, they did not find them sealed as they had been given up at Athlone; and 2 coffers in which vestments and ornaments of the chapel had been placed, which had previously been sealed with the seals of the archbishop, the treasurer, and others, were found sealed with the seals of the sheriff of Dublin, and of Philip the Archbishop of Dublin's chaplain. Philip being arraigned thereupon said that he came to the treasurer desiring to buy a part of the vestments, which he had heard were for sale; the chests were then opened, on seeing them Philip would buy nothing; and the vestments having been replaced in the coffers the treasurer requested him to put his seal thereto; he had previously seen that the coffers were not sealed.

The following facts also appear from the justiciary, the justices, and barons of the Exchequer, namely:—That bags, rolls, and writs previously placed in the coffers, sealed with the seals of the archbishop, the treasurer, and others, were found out of the coffers, in the custody of the chamberlains of Dublin; and it was found that rolls had been changed from one bag to another; that of the rolls aforesaid 1 containing 9 membranes is missing; from this roll estreats of fines before S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam from the feast of St. Luke the Evangelist, a. r. 15 [Oct. 18, 1287] until that of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist, a. r. 16 [June 24, 1288], and amounting by estimate to 500*l.*, ought to have been made; that a round box in which were letters patent touching the K. and others under the seal of J[ohn] the archbishop, and which had been placed in a coffer, was unsealed and some instruments placed in it removed; and that some inquisitions inclosed under the seal of the same deceased archbishop which had been in the coffers aforesaid under the seals of J[ohn] the archbishop and the treasurer aforesaid are not found.

The treasurer, the chamberlains, and Thomas of London, the treasurer's receiver, all say that neither rolls, inquisitions, or writs were alienated by them; nevertheless J[ohn] the archbishop, the justices, and barons record that the coffers were opened twice or thrice after they came to the treasurer's custody.

To each of the articles aforesaid N[icholas] de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, says that he is not bound to answer, because no complaint was made before the K. against him, and the K. did not order any inquiry to be made, and because the inquisition thereupon was made in his absence before the Archbishop of Dublin, his rival, and for certain reasons an object of great suspicion to him. The treasurer prays that the K. will send to Ireland some one in whom he confides to inspect the rolls of the Irish Exchequer and inquire in Nicholas's presence regarding the articles aforesaid and Nicholas's acts. Nicholas will then willingly submit to judgment; but he disavows that he erased the rolls, or with his own hand wrote anything improper on them. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 7 and No. 8.]

18 Edw. I. 811. Recognizance by William de Cadwelly to John of Ireland, clerk, for 20*s.* payable in the quinzaine of Michaelmas ensuing.

Philip grants that the money if not then paid may be levied out of his lands and chattels in Ireland. [Close, 18 Edw. I., m. 8 dors.]

18 Edw. I. 812. Recognizance by Walter de Lacy of Ireland to Albert de Kenlee for 30 marks payable at the feast of All Saints next ensuing. Walter grants that the money if not paid may be levied out of his lands and chattels in Ireland. [Close, 18 Edw. I., m. 9 dors.]

18 Edw. I. 813. Complaints of Walter de Bodenham and Adam de Foleborne made to the K. against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, and examination thereof made by William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland by the K.'s order, in presence of Brother William, Prior of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland, Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, the Barons and officers of the Exchequer and others, the K.'s lieges, of the K.'s Council there.

1. In regard to the petition of Walter de Bodenham respecting Nicholas de Inteburgh, sheriff of Tipperary [ante, pp. 252–254], it appears that Nicholas de Clere made no release of the debt, but that part thereof was levied and part is comprised in summonses of the Exchequer by writ of England on terms granted to Nicholas.

2. As to 50 marks being erased from the Rolls of the Exchequer it appears that the amerciament of Geoffrey de la Hulle was not taxed in the plea rolls or the estreats, but as there was a complaint for not prosecuting a writ, it appeared to the Treasurer and Barons that his amerciament was sufficiently taxed at ½ mark, and so it was entered on the roll. Afterwards came Geoffrey, who, being ignorant of the taxation, supplicated the Treasurer and Barons to enter 1 mark on the roll; an erasure was there made and 1 mark was put. And afterwards it appeared to the Barons that it would be better to put ½ mark against him and ½ mark against his 2 sureties. An erasure was again made and 1 mark was put against him and his sureties, and this in the presence of the treasurer and his associates, Barons of the Exchequer. No other erasure was made.

3. As to the amerciament of the treasurer where nothing was taxed it appears that it was always the custom in Ireland that the justiciary of Ireland should direct the K.'s writs conjointly to the Treasurer and Barons; the writ was directed to the treasurer only, which was a manifest error. The treasurer was acquitted thereof by the K.'s writ from England.

4. As to the estreats of Chancery of 40*l.* from Robert Roche and 50*s.* from the men of Dublin which the treasurer put down as Walter says, it appears that this was done by John the Archbishop [of Dublin], then chief justiciary of Ireland, and by consent of the Treasurer and Barons, because it appeared to them that they had been unjustly amerced.

5. As to Walter's imprisonment, it appears that Walter was twice imprisoned and this by judgment of the Exchequer. The term of imprisonment is not known.

6. As to the corn which Nicholas took away from Walter, it appears that the corn belonged to Richard Locard, who sowed the land on Walter's lease; that it was not Walter's corn; and that Nicholas did not cause it to be carried away.

7. As to the expulsion of Walter's wife from the Exchequer, whereby she was caused to miscarry, it appears that the treasurer did not expel her, nor is it known who did so; this Walter has acknowledged.

18 Edw. I. 812. Recognizance by Walter de Lacy of Ireland to Albert de Kenlee for 30 marks payable at the feast of All Saints next ensuing. Walter grants that the money if not paid may be levied out of his lands and chattels in Ireland. [Close, 18 Edw. I., m. 9 dors.]

18 Edw. I. 813. Complaints of Walter de Bodenham and Adam de Foleborne made to the K. against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, and examination thereof made by William de Vesey, justiciary of Ireland by the K.'s order, in presence of Brother William, Prior of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland, Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, the Barons and officers of the Exchequer and others, the K.'s lieges, of the K.'s Council there.

1. In regard to the petition of Walter de Bodenham respecting Nicholas de Inteburgh, sheriff of Tipperary [ante, pp. 252–254], it appears that Nicholas de Clere made no release of the debt, but that part thereof was levied and part is comprised in summonses of the Exchequer by writ of England on terms granted to Nicholas.

2. As to 50 marks being erased from the Rolls of the Exchequer it appears that the amerciament of Geoffrey de la Hulle was not taxed in the plea rolls or the estreats, but as there was a complaint for not prosecuting a writ, it appeared to the Treasurer and Barons that his amerciament was sufficiently taxed at ½ mark, and so it was entered on the roll. Afterwards came Geoffrey, who, being ignorant of the taxation, supplicated the Treasurer and Barons to enter 1 mark on the roll; an erasure was there made and 1 mark was put. And afterwards it appeared to the Barons that it would be better to put ½ mark against him and ½ mark against his 2 sureties. An erasure was again made and 1 mark was put against him and his sureties, and this in the presence of the treasurer and his associates, Barons of the Exchequer. No other erasure was made.

3. As to the amerciament of the treasurer where nothing was taxed it appears that it was always the custom in Ireland that the justiciary of Ireland should direct the K.'s writs conjointly to the Treasurer and Barons; the writ was directed to the treasurer only, which was a manifest error. The treasurer was acquitted thereof by the K.'s writ from England.

4. As to the estreats of Chancery of 40*l.* from Robert Roche and 50*s.* from the men of Dublin which the treasurer put down as Walter says, it appears that this was done by John the Archbishop [of Dublin], then chief justiciary of Ireland, and by consent of the Treasurer and Barons, because it appeared to them that they had been unjustly amerced.

5. As to Walter's imprisonment, it appears that Walter was twice imprisoned and this by judgment of the Exchequer. The term of imprisonment is not known.

6. As to the corn which Nicholas took away from Walter, it appears that the corn belonged to Richard Locard, who sowed the land on Walter's lease; that it was not Walter's corn; and that Nicholas did not cause it to be carried away.

7. As to the expulsion of Walter's wife from the Exchequer, whereby she was caused to miscarry, it appears that the treasurer did not expel her, nor is it known who did so; this Walter has acknowledged.

Complaints of Adam de Foleborne, with findings thereupon, abstract of No. 593. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 11.]

[16–18 Edw. I.] 815. Petition of John le Jevene to the K. Having been amerced in 100 marks a summons issued to the sheriff of the county to levy them, and John himself went to Dublin to seek a remedy from the justiciary. The latter demanded that he should pay 100*l.* and find pledges thereof. As he could not do so, the justiciary caused him to be put into prison, where he has been from the commencement of Lent until the quinzaine before Pentecost, when he was delivered by the K.'s command. While in prison 2 of his yokes of oxen, one of stock and cows, and 300 and more of his sheep were sold; likewise 7 heaps of wheat and oats, and his standing wheat were sold, his chests in his house at Cork and his doors were sealed up, so that he was prevented from reaching his property; his ship lies at Bristol rotting in the sands because he could not leave prison to go to her, and he has not wherewith to bring her over. This ship is of 210 tons burden. The day he was liberated he was committed to the marshal of the Exchequer to find pledge for 100*s.* He cannot learn the value of his property sold. By these torts and this imprisonment John has received damage to the amount of 500*l.*, whereof he prays remedy from the K. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, 531, No. 21, m. 4. Norman French.]

[About 18 Edw. I.] 816. Petition to the K. from the children of William Houlf, praying that the K. will not allow them to be disinherited. The contract had been made through coveting of a house at Clonmel. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, 531, No. 21, m. 7. Mostly decayed and illegible.]

[About 18 Edw. I.] 817. Petition from Sir William de Barry and Sir Gilbert le Waleis to the K. Having appealed Donald Og MacCarthy in the county of Cork of several robberies, and prosecuted him in due form according to law until Donald was outlawed by judgment of the county and put out of the peace, the Prior of the hospital, lieutenant of the justiciary, came and granted peace to Donald, and caused him to have the K.'s letter thereupon, without regard for those who had been prejudiced . . Of this William and Gilbert pray remedy of the K., for if such things may be law cannot avail them. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, 531, No. 21, m. 11. Norman French.]

About 18 Edw. I. 818. Petition of Philip Brun to the chief justiciary of Ireland, against Geoffrey Brun for having unjustly taken his chattels to the value of 3½ marks for a debt of Reginald Brun. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 21, m. 1. Defaced in parts.]

About 18 Edw. I. 819. Complaints of Henry de Bidilisforde:—One of his neighbours gave security in an unjust distress of Henry's cattle to the value of 12 marks 10*s.* in the county of Cork, namely, against Henry Fitz Peter, clerk, Robert de Stapleton being then sheriff of Cork. Henry being attached answered all the charges against him, and put himself upon the country. The inquisition acquitted him; nevertheless the sheriff delivered 12 marks 10*s.* of his chattels to Henry Fitz Peter, and amerced him in 40*s.*, which he paid.

Henry having killed a thief, an inquisition found that he was a thief and against the K.'s peace. Nevertheless the sheriff adjudged Henry to prison, from which he was only freed on payment of a fine of 20*s.*

The third complaint relates to the stealing of a horse.

The 4th complaint illegible. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 21, m. 2. A great part decayed.]

820. Plaint in the K.'s court at Dublin, before the Archbishop of Dublin, holding the place of chief justiciary in Ireland, between Roger and Thomas, chaplains, executors of Humphrey le Gaunter, Thomas of Coventry, mayor of the city of Dublin, and Roger Chatkok, of a messuage in that city formerly held by Richard le Blund and John le Serjeant. On account of irregular process the K. caused the record to be sent before him. Roger and Thomas the chaplains, and William Fitz Warin, who now holds the messuage, were summoned by 2 lawful men of the county of Dublin to be here on this day, and Richard and John were also summoned. Mandate to justiciary for Scire facias against William Fitz Warin who had not come, and to take the house into the K.'s hand. And be it known that the mayor and bailiffs of Dublin sent here the record had before them between Ralph le Gaunter and William Fitz Warin. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 126, Rot. 56.]

Octaves of St. Martin.

821. Nicholas Bakun had in 1 month of Easter, a. r. 17 [1289], in the K.'s court before the K. recovered against Milo de Crues, seisin of 1 carucate of land in Balimaglassan by Milo's default in 1 month of Michaelmas, a. r. 16 [1288]. Milo had thereof vouched Robert Fitz Richard de Crues to warranty in the court of Common Pleas, Dublin; and afterwards Milo in the K.'s court before the K. alleged that he could not have committed a default, because he was prevented from coming before the K. by imprisonment in Ireland, and moreover by the death of William de Beverley, late Chancellor of Ireland, from whom Milo ought to have had a writ to replevy his land. By this death the seal of Chancery in Ireland was suspended for a month, and Milo could not obtain his writ. The justiciary was commanded to certify to the K. or his lieutenant in England in 1 month of Michaelmas, a. r. 17 [1289], what impediment had caused Milo to make default, and nevertheless to take the land into the K.'s hand and to answer for the issues thereof at the K.'s mandate, and to summon Nicholas and Robert before the K. Milo was prevented by death from prosecuting his right and possession, whereby Robert was by judgment of the court discharged from his warranty, and Nicholas recovered his seisin of the land to the disherison of Thomas, Milo's son and heir. The K. again commanded the justiciary to take the land into the K.'s hand, &c., to call the parties before him and inquire regarding the time of the imprisonment, the deaths of the Chancellor and of Milo, and the suspension of the seal, and to summon the parties to be before the K. in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, wheresoever, &c. The justiciary returned that the land is in the K.'s hand, that the issues are, 2 acres of wheat worth 12*s.*, 26 acres of oats worth 4*s.* 6*d.* each acre, total 6*l.* 9*s.*; and that the issues are committed to William le Bret of Stafordiston, Thomas the clerk of Balymaglassan, Philip de Aribothan, and John Presthop. It appeared in presence of these parties that Milo le Crues was imprisoned in the prison of the castle of Dublin by order of Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, from the day of St. Catherine the Virgin, a. r. 16 [Nov. 25, 1287], until the feast of All Saints next ensuing; and that William de Beverley, late Chancellor of Ireland, died on Friday the Parascene, a. r. 17 [April 8, 1289], and Milo on Friday next after Michaelmas in the same year [Sept. 30, 1289]. As to the suspension of the seal it appeared that immediately after the death of the Chancellor the seal was closed up under the seal of Geoffrey Brun the K.'s clerk, and William de Spineto, sheriff of Louth. On Monday following the said Geoffrey and Walter of the Exchequer for Richard de Saham, went with the seal to the justiciary then, namely on Wednesday next after Easter, a. r. 17 [April 13, 1289], at Randown, and the seal was then delivered to him, and on the same day opened. Nevertheless the journey into Connaught was not then safe, owing to Irish malefactors and disturbers of the peace. Nicholas Bakun and Robert Fitz William de Crues were summoned by William le Bret of Moyachan and Nicholas Veysyn. They came not; Laurence de Hereford guardian of Thomas, Milo's son and heir, came. Wherefore William de Vessy, justiciary of Ireland, is commanded to attach the aforesaid Nicholas Bakun and Robert Fitz Richard de Crues to be before the K. in 1 month of Easter wheresoever, &c. These enemies swear that they will never liberate Gerald until the son of an Irish noble, a hostage detained in the castle of Dublin, be delivered to them. Given at the feast of St. John the Baptist. [Royal Letters, 2036, torn.]

[1287 to 1290.] 829. Acquittances by Sir John de Bono Villario, Knight, and Robert de Belvere, chamberlain of Wales, dated June 4, 1287, for 8,050 marks, May 27, 1287, for 2,000 marks, June 14, 1287, for 3,000 marks, Sept. 22, 1287, for 300*l.*, May 10, 1288, for 2,000 marks, and July 18, for 1,000 marks, paid out of the issues of Ireland by Sir Nicholas de Clare, treasurer of Ireland, or by his order, for the K.'s affairs and castles in Snowdon, and expenses and works in Wales.

Acquittances dated Dublin, March 12, 1288–9, Aug. 11, 1289, and Dec. 9, 1290, by Bendinus Panyc and Hugelinus Russehenpel, merchants of the Society of the Ricardi of Lucca, for 2,698*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.*, 1,560*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*, and 1,480*l.* 14*s.* 5¼*d.*, paid out of the new custom and other issues of Ireland by the hands of Sir Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, Peter de Balymor, chamberlain of the Exchequer, Dublin, and William de Clere, locum tenens of Sir Nicholas, treasurer.

The last acquittances cancelled because restored to the merchants aforesaid by letters patent of England. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, J.G. 41,091.]

1289 to 1290. 830. Affairs of merchants of Lucca dwelling in Ireland.

William de Clere, locum tenens of the treasurer in Ireland, caused to emanate under green wax a writ whereby the K. notified to sheriffs, seneschals, mayors, bailiffs, and others, &c., that he had constituted Richard de Cruys, chief sergeant in the county of Dublin, to explain certain affairs of the K., and they shall expedite those affairs in the mode, place, and time which he shall enjoin on behalf of the K. Sealed with the seal of the Exchequer, Jan. 21, a. r. 18 [1289–90]. By virtue of these letters Richard de Cruys, sergeant of the K., and Adam de Cromelyn, clerk of the sheriff of Dublin, caused all the goods and chattels of the merchants of the 1289–1290.

Society of the Ricardi of Lucca, and of their associates, at Ross, Waterford, Youghal, and Cork to be attached, and their chests with their treasure in the vills aforesaid to be sealed. They likewise caused debtors of the merchants at Limerick, Waterford, and Cork to be inhibited from paying to the latter any portion of their debts; they further caused William de Gerarduche, collector of the new custom at Ross, and associate of the merchants, to be attached to answer at the Exchequer for the new custom. Richard and Adam avow that they did all this by order of William de Clere. The latter moreover went to the merchants house in the city of Dublin, with William of Bristol, mayor of that city, Roger the clerk, Robert of Bray, provost of Dublin, Henry de Ovinges, William Mody, Robert le Forester, sergeant of that vill, William le Wilde, doorkeeper of the castle of Dublin, Martin, clerk of the sheriff of Dublin, and others, and demanded from Hugh Russchenpel, Reymund Rapundy, and Gerard Chinibar, of that society, 1,021 marks 13¼*d.* out of a sum of 2,014*l.* 0*s.* 13¼*d.*, which the merchants had by the K.'s order received from William aforesaid, as well of the new custom as of other issues of Ireland, and whereof William had the merchants letters. As the merchants refused without warrant from the K. to deliver to William de Clere the 1,021*l.* 0*s.* 13¼*d.* aforesaid, William and the others attached Hugh, Reymund, and Gerard, arrested them in their house, and sealed up their chests. William de Clere also directed William of Bristol the mayor to guard the merchants as prisoners, and the latter guarded them for 3 days in the merchants houses, by Henry Ovinge and William Mody, his sergeants. Thereupon the K. sent his writ commanding J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin to inquire into all these matters, to certify thereupon to the K. at the ensuing Parliament in 1 month of Easter, to issue a Scire facias to William de Clere to appear and answer at that Parliament, and to liberate the merchants and their goods if they had been attached. By virtue of this order William de Clere and William of Bristol and the others aforesaid being questioned regarding the above trespasses before the chief justiciary and the K.'s Council, William de Clere says that the K. sent his writ to Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, notifying that he wished the works commenced in Wales to be accelerated and finished as he had vivâ voce enjoined to William de Grandison, locum tenens of the justiciary in Ireland; he therefore commands the treasurer by no means to omit to send by the quinzaine of Michaelmas next ensuing to the chamberlain at Carnarvon 2,000 marks to carry out the K.'s works there; and the K. wills that this money when paid shall be allowed to the treasurer in his account. St. Edmund, Sept. 19, a. r. 17 [1289]. As the treasurer had previously delivered all the issues of Ireland of the previous year to the merchants of Lucca dwelling at Dublin, and they had received 2,000 marks of the new custom whereof they had not rendered account, the treasurer demanded of them the 2,000 marks aforesaid to be sent into Wales according to the K.'s mandate. They answered that they had sent that money to their associates dwelling in London, and that they had no other money in hand. The treasurer had come to London at the K.'s mandate to answer before the Bishops of Bath and

Winchester, the Earl of Lincoln, W. de Luda, and W. de Marche, deputed for that purpose by the K., to answer for not having paid the 2,000 marks in Wales according to the K.'s mandate; the merchants of Lucca dwelling in London avowed before the same that their associates of Dublin had received the 2,000 marks, and had then no money in hand. Wherefore the K. issued another writ again commanding the treasurer and chamberlain of the Exchequer, Dublin, to cause the 2,000 marks aforesaid, omitting all other payments in those parts, to be remitted to the chamberlain of Carnarvon for the works in Wales. The K. had commanded the justiciary of Ireland to cause this to be done together with them. Kingston, Nov. 20, a. r. 18 [1289]. The clerk of the chamberlain of Wales had conveyed those 2 writs to the Exchequer of Dublin on Monday next after the feast of St. Hilary.

William de Clere having after the departure of his brother for England received of the issues of Ireland 1,021 marks 13¼*d.*, and deposited them with the merchants, he frequently prayed the latter to restore them to be sent into Wales according to the K.'s order; but they said that if even he sent them to the castle they would not restore 1 penny to him. William wishing so far as he could to perform the K.'s mandate went on a Saturday after Hilary with the mayor and bailiffs of Dublin to the house of the merchants and in the presence of the mayor and bailiffs asked them to restore the money, or at least 200*l.* to be sent into Wales according to the K.'s mandate. The merchants having avowed that they had received the money, but refused to restore any portion of it, William ordered the mayor and bailiffs to put seals on the merchants chests in which was the K.'s treasure, until they restored the money. He likewise enjoined 2 of the K.'s sergeants who went from the common council of the justiciary and barons to attach certain sheriffs and seneschals of liberties, who would not obey the orders of the Exchequer to pay up money or render an account, that they should direct each mayor to sequestrate into the K.'s hand the goods of the merchants of the society aforesaid within their bailiwicks until they should restore the money. Little or no money had come into the Exchequer in the term of Hilary. On the same Saturday the merchants complained to the chief justiciary at Coloyne and on the morrow at Dublin in the presence of the said William. On the following Monday the merchants again made their complaints before the justiciary, R[obert] Bagod, justice of the Common Pleas, and the barons and chamberlain of the Exchequer, and at length it was agreed that the merchants should immediately restore 200*l.* of the money aforesaid, 200 marks before Easter, and the residue on the morrow of the close of Easter. The merchants having on the same Monday gratuitously restored 200*l.*, their goods were liberated; and having after the close of Easter restored 500 marks William did not ask them for the residue, because he otherwise, though with great difficulty, fulfilled the K.'s mandate.

The merchants dwelling in London having asked that the 2,000 marks in the K.'s wardrobe should be allowed to them, W. de Luda, the treasurer, answered that they should not be allowed until the 2,000 marks should be sent into Wales, as the K. had ordered. The merchants therefore ordered their associates at Dublin to restore the money aforesaid. The merchants acknowledge that they received from the chamberlain the 1,021 marks 13¼*d.* aforesaid, together with other moneys; and at the end of the term they accounted having received 2,014*l.* 0*s.* 13¼*d.*, regarding which sum they gave to William letters acknowledging payment, a transcript of which is annexed to this Roll.

William being asked whether the merchants had given him such letters answers that he knows not, as all letters had been sent into England. Being further asked whether he had ordered the merchants to be arrested by the mayor of Dublin and the others, and had prohibited the debtors of the merchants from paying their debts to them, he thereupon prays judgment whether he ought to answer touching a precept until others are convicted of the fact. Afterwards he secretly and without licence of the justiciary or council set sail for England. William of Bristol, the mayor of Dublin, Henry Ovinge, and William Mody being questioned regarding the arrest of the merchants, and whether William de Clere had ordered it, say that they neither arrested them nor had any order thereupon from William de Clere, save that by William's order they put seals on the merchants' chests; and of this they put themselves upon the country. What they say appears by the verdict under seals of the jurors annexed to this Roll.

William de Clere being questioned as to the opening rolls of the chief ingrosser of the Exchequer, and as to doing with them as he pleased, answers that having received a strict order from the K. to send 2,000 marks to England, he went to the Exchequer in the morning before the arrival of the ingrosser and barons of the Exchequer in order more quickly to fulfil the K.'s mandate; that he opened the ingrosser's bag, inspected a Roll containing the debts in which the Earl of Ulster and others were bound to the K.; that he made Canon and Frere, 2 under-doorkeepers of the Exchequer, sit with him to see that he did not tamper with the Roll, and that having inspected it he replaced it in the bag. And this he is prepared to verify by the oath of the under-doorkeepers. The day of St. Mark the Evangelist [April 25] having been appointed for proceedings thereupon, William crossed over into England before that day.

Letter which William de Clere had from the merchants on the day when he attached them, whereby Hugh Russchenpol, merchant of the Society of the Ricardi of Lucca, acknowledges in his own name and those of his associates to have received of the K.'s money as well of issues of the new custom in Ireland from the feast of all Saints, a. r. 16 [Nov. 1, 1288], until the same feast, a. r. 17 [1289], as of moneys received at the Exchequer of Michaelmas term, a. r. 17–18 [1289], 2,014*l.* 0*s.* 13¼*d.* of silver in money by tale, by the hands of W[illiam] de Clere, locum tenens of Sir N[icholas] de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, and by the hands of Peter de Balymor, chamberlain of the Exchequer of Dublin. This money was paid by the K.'s order. Dublin, Dec. 9, a. r. 18 [1289].

The K.'s writ to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. Had received a complaint from the merchants of the Society of the Ricardi of Lucca that William de Clere, brother of Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland and locum tenens of the latter, while with the K. in England, had caused some members of that society and their goods and chattels in Ireland to be attached. As the K. esteems those merchants he is bound to protect them from oppression and injury. The K. therefore commands the justiciary to inquire thereupon and to certify to him at the next Parliament in 1 month of Easter. Order for Scire facias to William to be there before the K. to answer thereupon. The justiciary shall cause the merchants and their goods to be liberated. Farringdon, March 1, a. r. 18 [1289–90].

Inquisition taken at Dublin on Thursday next after the feast of St. Mark the Evangelist, a. r. 18 [April 27, 1290], by the following jurors:—John son of Ryryth', Nicholas Frende, Luke de Bolinges, Peter de Vile, Leonard Teste, Robert of Bray, Thomas of Coventry, Adam of Hereford, Roger the clerk of Dublin, Walter le Lombard, Martin the clerk, Peter Eccard, Who Say that William de Clere, locum tenens of the treasurer of Ireland, went to the house of Hugh le Lombard and of his associates, merchants of Lucca of the Society of the Ricardi in Dublin, taking with him William of Bristol, mayor of the city of Dublin, Henry Ovyng, and William Mody, sergeants of the said city; that he demanded of the merchants a sum of money, and as they said they had none, that William ordered the mayor and sergeants to arrest the merchants and their goods; and that the mayor and sergeants arrested them. As William de Clere had previously disavowed before the locum tenens of the chief justiciary of Ireland the arrest of the merchants, and had avowed the arrest of their goods, the mayor being questioned as to this said that he never was ordered by William de Clere to arrest the merchants, but to arrest their goods; and of this he puts himself upon the jury aforesaid. The jurors being questioned as to why the mayor had disavowed the arrest of the merchants, reply that the mayor had done so through fear and in order to save William de Clere from blame.

The K.'s writ to William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland. Whereas in view of the faithful service rendered by Henry de Cumpton in the Chancery of Ireland, the K. had commanded the Archbishop of Dublin, then justiciary of Ireland, to commit to him to farm 1 carucate and 8 acres of land in Crumlin, together with pleas and perquisites of Newcastle of Lyons and Tassagard; and whereas on the men and tenants of Crumlin suggesting that this lease would tend to the K.'s manifest loss, the K. had commanded the justiciary to commit to those men and tenants the land, together with the pleas and profits aforesaid; but having now learnt that the lease aforesaid made to the said Henry tends to the K.'s advantage and not to his loss the K. commands the justiciary to inquire by oath of good and lawful men whether the lease made to Henry is injurious to the K. or not, and if he find that it is not so he shall allow Henry to hold the land with pleas and profits at a yearly rent, as he was wont to hold it before. Provided, however, that the tenants be maintained there as they have hitherto been wont to be maintained.

It appears by an extent made on May 10, a. r. 20 [1292], before the barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, by 12 lawful jurors, of the land which the K. granted to Henry de Cumpton, clerk, out of his demesnes in Crumlin, that there are there 128 acres of land, whereof 120 acres are reputed as 1 carucate, and each acre yearly pays to the K., 15*d.*

The K.'s writ to the Treasurer, or his locum tenens, and the Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. Whereas the K.'s poor tenants of the vill of Crumlin have held to farm from the time of King John, the K.'s grandfather, 1 carucate and 8 acres of land in Crumlin, yearly rendering at the Exchequer, Dublin, 15*d.* for each acre, and 20*s.* a year for the pleas and perquisites belonging to that land, and the K. being ignorant of this tenure committed to farm to Henry de Compton the land aforesaid for a term. And whereas the K. now learns that this commission would tend to the K.'s loss and the damage of his tenants the K. is unwilling that the tenants should be unjustly deprived of their farm so long ago obtained. He therefore commands the Treasurer and Barons to inquire upon oath whether the tenants held that land to farm with pleas and perquisites from the time of King John, and what damage it would cause the K. if Henry should hold the land with pleas and perquisites for the term aforesaid. They shall return the inquisition with this writ to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, chief justiciary of Ireland. Given by the hand of the justiciary aforesaid at Cashel, July 20 a. r. 18 [1290].

Inquisition taken before the barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, according to the tenor of the K.'s writ under the Great Seal of Ireland, on Thursday next after the feast of St. James the Apostle, a. r. 18 [July 27, 1290], by the underwritten, namely:—Luke the chamberlain, John Stede, William de Rath, John Cary, John Wolput, William Coleman, Peter Russell, Richard Stakony, John Ewyas, Robert le Blund, of Santry, John le Blund, of Feldrom [Feltrim], Simon Beumond, Henry Miller, Andrew Wyrhale, John Cosyn, John Reynald, John Beg, Hugh le Loche, Roger Bernard, William le Smyth, Simon de Camera, Hugh Todeman, Richard Gerveys, Gilbert le Lung, John le Blund, Walter le Deveneys, Richard Prodhome, and William le Blund, Who Say upon their oath that the K.'s tenants that now are of Crumlin and their ancestors held from a time whereof they have not memory, even from the time of King John as they believe, 1 carucate and 8 acres of land in Crumlin, rendering at the Exchequer aforesaid 15*d.* a year for each acre, and 20*s.* a year for pleas and perquisites belonging to that land. And they Say that it is more to the advantage and honour of the K. that the men of Crumlin rather than Henry de Compton or any other person should have and hold the carucate and 8 acres of land with the pleas and perquisites thereunto belonging, for the yearly rent aforesaid. They cannot, however, learn or estimate that any loss could accrue to the K. if Henry held the land, pleas, and profits for the term previously granted, for this would be in the future. Easter. 883. The K.'s writ commanding the judges of the Common Pleas, Dublin, to send before him by the octaves of the Holy Trinity the record and process in pleas by writs of right between Alice de Crombe and Philip de Crombe, of lands in Conktilin and Dermothyr, and in Selioc and Palmeri. Quennington, March 4, a. r. 18 [1289–90].

By virtue of this writ the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, sent to the K. the record and process of the pleas aforesaid, as follows:—

Louth. Alice de Crombe demands by writ of right against Philip de Crombe 1 messuage and 1 carucate of land in Knokilin, and 3 acres of land in Dermother.

Dublin. Alice aforesaid demands by another writ of right against the said Philip 5 marks and 40*d.* of rent, and 100 acres of land in Selyok and Villa Palmeri [Palmerstown], whereof Roger de Crombe, Alice's father, was seised in his demesne as of fee from the time of Henry III., taking therefrom esplees, as of rents and other issues, to the value of ½ mark and more; and from Roger the right lawfully descended to the said Agnes as daughter and heir.

Philip says that he is not bound to answer Alice, because he says that the said Roger had a son, by name Philip, to wit, himself, who was seised as of right and fee of the messuage, lands, and rents aforesaid, and he demands judgment if he ought to answer Alice, as Roger his father died seised thereof, and he, as son and heir, succeeded, and for a long time remained seised thereof.

Alice says that Roger her father never had a son to whom the messuage, lands, and rent could or ought to hereditarily descend, because Philip, although he had said that he was Roger's son, was born out of wedlock, and this she prays may be verified by the country.

Philip says that he is legitimate and born of lawful wedlock, and this he prays may be verified.

Afterwards Alice being asked whether she and Philip had one and the same mother or not, says, that her father begat her of one Isolda lawfully married to him, and that Philip was born of one Agatha de Turville, whom Ilbert le Bret had married, and after the marriage between Ilbert and Agatha, they living, and during the marriage; and so Philip was born out of wedlock as regards Roger, and this she prays may be verified by the country or otherwise. Philip acknowledges that he was born of Agatha aforesaid, but he says as before that he is legitimate and born in lawful matrimony, and this he prays may be verified.

Afterwards, in the quinzaine of Easter, a. r. 19 [1291], came as well the said Alice as the said Philip, and Alice says as before that Philip was born out of wedlock and that he is a bastard; and this she offers to verify as the court may adjudge.

Philip says as before that he succeeded to Roger as his son and heir, and that as such he is in seisin of the tenements aforesaid, and that he is legitimate; and this he offers to verify.

As cognizance of this matter belongs to the ecclesiastical court, mandate to the Archbishop of Dublin, in whose diocese, &c., to call together proper persons and inquire whether Philip is legitimate or not, and to certify the inquisition to the K. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 128, Rot. 8 dors; and 22 dors.]

1291. May 9. 885. Letters of attorney in Ireland for 2 years under the names of John Wichir and Geoffrey Russel for the Prior of Lanthony near Gloucester, remaining by licence in England. Norham. [Pat., 19 Edw. I., m. 14.]

Three weeks of Easter. 886. Ireland. Wherefore W[illiam] de Vescy, chief justiciary of Ireland, is commanded to cause the said prioress to come here at the term aforesaid, and to produce the writ aforesaid under pain of the statute. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 128, Rot. 24 dors.]

May 18. 887. Letters of protection for 2 years for Simon of Ludgate, about by licence to depart for Ireland. Norham. [Pat., 19 Edw. I., m. 14.]

May 20. 888. The K. notifies to his bailiffs, &c. in Ireland that W[illiam] Bishop of Salisbury, remaining by licence in England, had attorned before the K. Robert de Wallingford and Robert Fitz Adam in all pleas and plaints for or against the bishop in courts of Ireland. Grant that Robert and Robert may make attorneys for the bishop in the Chancery of Ireland. Norham. [Pat., 19 Edw. I., m. 14.]

May 24. 889. Letters of attorney in Ireland for 2 years under the name of Alan Russel for Richard de la Lynde. Norham. [Pat., 19 Edw. I., m. 14.]

5 weeks of Easter. 890. Ireland. A day in 3 weeks of Michaelmas is given to Laurence de Hereford, guardian of Thomas son and heir of Milo de Crowes [Cruise], complainant, and Robert de Warleye, attorney of Nicholas Bacun, and Lucian de Weston, attorney of Richard de Cruwes, defendant. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 128, Rot. 42 dors.]

5 weeks of Easter. 891. The K.'s writ commanding the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, to send before the K. in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, if judgment had been rendered, the record and process of a great assize taken before the court of Common Pleas, by writ of right of Geoffrey de Geynville, between Walter de Lascy, plaintiff, and Henry de Vernoyl, William de London, and Michael Talbot, tenants, of lands in Portlester. Witness, Edmund Earl of Cornwall, the K.'s cousin. Westminster, May 25, a. r. 16 [1288].

Record and process of plaint as above; pleas at Trim in the liberty of Sir Geoffrey de Geneville on the morrow of St. Matthew the Apostle, a. r. 14 [22 Sept. 1286]. Walter de Lacy demands by writ of right against Henry de Vernoyl 9 carucates of land in Portlester, and against Amice who was the wife of Henry de Vernoyl, 1 carucate in said vill, whereof William de Hamars, Walter's ancestor, whose heir he is, was seised in his demesne as of fee in the time of John the K.'s grandfather; from William the right descended to Roger de Harmars as son and heir, from Roger to Philip as son and heir; from Philip to Joan as daughter and heir, from Joan to Simon as son and heir, who did not expect the inheritance, and from Simon to Walter aforesaid, who now claims as brother and heir. Amice vouches to warranty of her tenure Henry de Vernoyl, who warrants, and William of London and Michael Talbot come as his parceners, and with Henry put themselves upon the great assize. Four knights are summoned to elect twelve knights. The 4 knights come, namely, Richard Fitz Richard, Walter de Leyns, Richard de Repentenye, and Henry de Derpatrick. As they could not find in the liberty any knight who was not of affinity or consanguinity to the parties, the assize was adjourned until the morrow of the Epiphany at Trim. The K. then sent a writ commanding the seneschal of Trim to cause the record and process to come before the justices at Dublin in the octaves of Hilary, and to summon the 4 knights to elect the assize. Witness, S[tephen] Bishop of Waterford, justiciary of Ireland. Clonmel, Dec. 1, a. r. 15 [1286]. Essoigns at Dublin in the octaves of Hilary, a. r. 15 [1286–7].

Pleas at Dublin in the quinzaine of Easter, a. r. 15 [1287]. Richard Fitz Richard, Richard de Repenteny, Henry de Derpatrick, and Robert de Mandeville in the room of Walter de Leyns (who is ill) the 4 knights by consent of the parties to elect 12 knights of the vesnue of Portlester, come and elect the following 12 knights to take the assize, namely, Patrick de Rochford, Geoffrey de Clahulle, Adam Gaynard, Walter Neville, Andrew Avenel, Hamund le Gras, Griffin Fitz Alan, Gilbert de Sutton, John Cas, Robert Perceval, Silvester le Erceveske, and Henry de la Roche. Writ to the sheriff to summon them to take the recognizance in the quinzaine of Michaelmas. On which day the great assize between the parties finds that Walter [de Lacy] has more right in the land than the said Henry, William, or Michael. Wherefore it is considered that Walter shall have seisin of the land. Order to the sheriff to cause the 10 carucates of land to be extended, and to cause to be assigned to Amice out of the lands of Henry, William, and Michael to the value of the aforesaid 1 carucate of land in Portlester, and similarly out of the lands and tenements of William and Michael to cause to be assigned to Henry to the value of 6 carucates in the same vill.

The K.'s writ of Certiorari to Robert Bagot and his associates, setting out the above facts, and stating that 2 of the 12 knights, namely, Griffin and Henry, having made default at the taking of the assize the justice had adjourned the cause, and subsequently went before the Irish council; and that Nicholas Taaffe, then associated as justice, resummoned the parties before him after the adjournment, and contrary to the form of the mise took the great assize by the 10 knights then present, and by Richard Fitz Richard and Stephen of Exeter, in lieu of the 2 absent knights, who were not elected by the 4 knights. All this is not mentioned in the record sent before the K. The K. therefore commands the justices to cause the omission to be recorded, and to send the record and process before the K. Kingston, Nov. 20, a. r. 18 [1289].

The justices sent the record and process herein set out in full, with a long return stating that the assize had been adjourned on default of the 2 knights, and that the latter had been distrained to come on another day to take the great assize with the other 10 knights. Afterwards Nicholas Taaffe and his associates, Robert Bagod being absent at the K.'s Council, by order of the chief justiciary, took by consent of the parties the great assize before the 10 knights then present, and Richard Fitz Richard and Stephen of Exeter in room of the 2 absent knights, the latter not having been elected by the 4 knights electors. Afterwards the justiciary of Ireland was commanded to summon Walter de Lacy to be before the K. in the octaves of Michaelmas last past; Walter was essoined de malo veniendi, and subsequently on account of the K.'s service, a day having been given in 5 weeks of Easter, Henry, Michael, and William aforesaid appear, and Nicholas Barot, Walter's attorney, against Henry only; as it appears to the court that the plea is sufficiently known to Walter, the examination of the record is proceeded with in his default, as regards William and Michael. Henry, William, and Michael say that there is error in the plaint, because Nicholas Taaffe and his associates had contrary to the form of the oath and the custom of the kingdom put on the assize 2 knights not elected by the 4 knights; wherefore they pray that the process be annulled. Walter's attorney says that he is prepared on Walter's behalf to verify that the process is right. Richard Fitz Richard was not elected but he was one of the electors, and Stephen was put on the assize by consent of the parties.

As the record of the justices sent by the K.'s writ contains the whole process, which record the justices cannot alter, it appears to the court that [a new] record is not necessary. There was error in the process in this, that after Robert Bagot and his associates adjourned to another day the parties and knights, and decreed that the absent knights should be distrained to come and take the assize, Nicholas aforesaid and his secondary associates, in the absence of Robert the chief justice, after the adjournment made by Robert and themselves while their office was in suspense, and they had not the power of judging, more especially of proceeding to final judgment, summoned the parties and proceeded to trial by 10 knights elected, and by 2 not elected who had not made a view nor been summoned, nor sworn to speak the truth. By decision of law a certain order has hitherto been observed in such trials, namely, that 4 knights should be summoned, who being sworn in the presence of the parties should elect from among themselves and others 12 knights to take the recognizance. From this order the parties ought not to depart after the election, nor while the elect are living ought others to be summoned, unless in case of necessity. The process also erred against the K.'s statute of Westminster, a. r. 13, forbidding persons to be put on assizes or juries, unless such as have been summoned by the sheriff. There was also error in the record, because the justices decided that the great assize should be taken under an uncertain form. There are only 2 forms thereupon hitherto in use, one where the tenant defends the right of the claimant and his seisin or that of his ancestor, and puts himself upon the great assize whether he has more right to hold the land as he holds it, or the plaintiff as he claims it. Sometimes he pays to have mention made of time. The other form of recognizance is where the tenant acknowledges the seisin of the plaintiff or his ancestor, and puts himself upon the great assize whether he has more right to hold the land claimed by feoffment of the plaintiff or his ancestor as he holds it, or the plaintiff as he claims it. In the process aforesaid neither form is found, and so it is against the law hitherto observed. The form of a recognizance of this kind is necessary, for if it were changed they might contradict themselves. Nor is it to be objected that the words "with consent of the parties" are to be found on the record, because although parties sometimes plead before justices against the order of law, or against the statute and law and custom of the realm, the justices ought not to permit such pernicious litigation, and chiefly where mere right is concerned, for there is a certain limit, measure, and certain bounds on either side of which right cannot exist. Wherefore it is adjudged that this process shall be annulled, that Henry, William, and Michael aforesaid shall rehave the seisin which they had before, and that Walter may, if he pleases, sue out another writ. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 128, Rot. 50–51.]

May 29. 892. Letters of attorney in Ireland under the names of Walter Fitz William and Sampson of Withlaninton, to last until the feast of Michaelmas, and thenceforth for 1 year, for John Barry, remaining by licence in England. Norham.

Similar letters of attorney in Ireland for 3 years under the names of Walter le Brun and William Balle for Richard of Paris, remaining by licence in England. Norham. [Pat., 19 Edw. I., m. 14.]

June 2. 894. Ireland. Grant to Hugh de Bruges of custody of the lands which belonged to John de Courcy, deceased, who held at his death of the K. in capite in the county of Kerry, and of custody of the lands and tenements which belonged to Thomas de Clare, deceased, who held at his death of the K. in capite at Balidochill, in the same county; to hold until the lawful age of the heirs of John and Thomas aforesaid, yearly rendering therefor at the Exchequer, Dublin, at the usual terms, the legal extent of those lands and tenements, unless the K. shall sell or give them to another. exacted from him by them for dower of Alienor formerly Countess of Leicester out of lands of the Marshalls in Ireland, that amount having been allowed to William out of debts due to him by the K. in an account audited before the Bishop of Bath and Wells, Otho de Grandison, and John de Kirkeby, then keeper of the Rolls of Chancery. Norham. [Close, 19 Edw. I., m. 6.]

June 4. 896. Whereas the K. had learnt from complaint of Theobald de Verdun that his fee of 25 marks a year, which he ought to have received and which his ancestors were wont to receive at the Exchequer of Dublin, was long in arrear, as the K. might learn from the Roll of account of Stephen de Fuleburne, formerly treasurer of Ireland, rendered before the barons, the K. desires to be certified with how many years payment of that fee the treasurer had charged himself in his account and how much is in arrear. The K. commands the barons to search the Rolls of that account and certify to the K. thereupon. Norham. [Memoranda, Q.R., Edw. I., No. 16, Rot. 14.]

June 5. 897. The K. to William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland. Whereas the K. wills that no evil, loss, or grievance by land or sea be inflicted on the subjects of the K. of France, whether from Flanders or elsewhere, by reason of the dissension which has lately arisen between the K.'s lieges and those of Flanders, but that those subjects may freely and securely pass by sea and land throughout the realm and return with their merchandise and goods until the feast of All Saints next ensuing. And whereas the K. had learnt that the justiciary had caused to be arrested in the ports of Waterford, Youghal, and Cork, by reason of that dissension, the merchandise and goods of Roger le Bugre and Arnald de la Grange and other merchants of Flanders, the K. commands the justiciary to cause to be restored to Roger, Arnald, and the other merchants the merchandise and goods arrested by reason of that dissension and not for any other reason. The justiciary shall not impede those merchants, or any other merchants of the power of the King of France, in safely and securely coming to and returning from the K.'s realm with their merchandise and goods until the feast aforesaid. Norham. [Pat., 19 Edw. I., m. 13.]

June 5. 898. The K. commands William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, to cause to be delivered to Christiana de Mariscis, or her attorney, the manor of Kilkea and a moiety of the vill of Tristeldermot leased by her for life to Alienor formerly Queen Consort, with all the issues received thereout after the feast of Michaelmas last past, into whosesoever's hands they may have fallen. Norham. [Ante, No. 835.] [Pat., 19 Edw. I., m. 13.]

June 8. 899. W[illiam] Archbishop of Tuam to the K. Had received the K.'s letters praying him to convoke the suffragans and clergy of his province and induce them to grant to the K. a tenth of their spiritualities, to exonerate the debts for necessary expenses contracted by the K. while he tarried in parts beyond the sea touching the liberation of Charles King of Sicily. The archbishop replies that he had convoked the suffragans and clergy of his province

accordingly, and fervently prayed them not to refuse the K.'s petition. The clergy having deliberated unanimously answered for their part that on account of war and poverty, and in order to preserve the liberties of their Church unimpaired, they could by no means grant that petition; and the suffragans, alleging that on account of those reasons and an appeal to the Apostolic See made by the clergy they could not differ from that answer, and so decided with the clergy in the negative. The archbishop convoked the remainder of his clergy and urgently prayed them not to refuse the K.'s petition, intimating to them as to the suffragans and their clergy that though they might feel somewhat aggrieved by granting the petition yet that they might thereby gain the gooodwill of the K.'s ministers, and that the K. himself might be induced to abolish the grievances inflicted on the Church of Ireland and on ecclesiastical persons, and perhaps restore that Church to its state of former liberty. They answered that their benefices were so small and they themselves so impoverished by Irish vassals and war that their whole year's supplies did not suffice for 6 months; being therefore totally unable to comply with the petition they recommended that the Apostolic See should be applied to; special licence from it was according to canonical statutes necessary to obtain such a grant . . . . . [Indorsed.] Roll of receipt of the time of Elias of Winchester, locum tenens of treasurer. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 26, m. 1.]

[Shortly before July 6.] 926. Petition of Gilbert Kech for himself and John his father to the K. While they were in the K.'s peace Nicholas de Clere came to the town of Tristildermot and seized and detained them in prison until Gilbert would agree to choose one of 3 alternatives, either to go to the castle of Dublin and there remain in prison, or to give a bond for 20*l.*, or to lease to Nicholas for 20 years a messuage and 1½ carucate of land. Owing to this duress they elected to make a bond for 20*l.*, and this they did not pay, and he would not let them have seisin of their land until they had made payment of 20*l.*, and the land was sold for default of payment. When the payment came to be settled, Nicholas refused to allow them anything for the 2 years' profits. Nicholas inflicted this duress and trespass on them to their damages of 100 marks. [Norman French.] [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, H.C.H. 3900, m. 4.]

July 6. 927. The K.'s writ to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer. Sends herewith inclosed a schedule containing grievances inflicted on John Keche and Gilbert his son by Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, and commands them to render justice to John and Gilbert. Goldingham. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, H.C.H. 3900, rider on m. 7.]

That Nicholas had seized them in the vill of Tristeldermot [Castle-

dermot] and detained them in prison. Reply that Nicholas ought not to answer this complaint of Ireland unless by special warrant of the K., and of this warrant he demands oyer.

If the court certifies that it has special warrant to hear the complaints of Gilbert Keche and John his father, Nicholas replies that Gilbert ought not to be answered without John his father whom he joins with him in his complaint, and to whom he is not attorney. Judgment demanded.

If it is certified that Gilbert is attorney of John his father, in regard to the complaints, the imprisonment, and other trespasses, which plaints are joint on behalf of himself and John, Nicholas answers that in such joint complaints of personal trespass they are not jointly responsible, but that John was present, because damages of trespass committed on John are not awardable to Gilbert, nor the reverse. Judgment demanded.

[Note in another hand.] Let everything be done in order that Nicholas may acquit himself regarding Gilbert's complaint. John can revive this complaint at another time.

And if it is awarded that they are jointly responsible where Gilbert complains for himself and John his father that Nicholas had seized them in the vill of Tristeldermot [Castledermot], retained them in prison, and committed other trespasses against them, Nicholas answers in regard to the trespass in the vill of Tristeldermot that this vill is within the franchise of Sir William de Vescy, of Kildare; he has his Chancery, his pleas, and full cognizance of such plaints; and as Nicholas is a free tenant of the franchise aforesaid, and Gilbert and John are likewise of this franchise, if the latter complained in the court of this franchise and not elsewhere Nicholas would be responsible, unless in case of default of the court. Nicholas therefore demands judgment if he ought to answer.

If it is awarded that Nicholas shall answer Gilbert's complaint for himself and his father which has not been heard as to the imprisonment and the other trespass, Nicholas further answers, saving his reasons aforesaid, that he did not seize Gilbert and John, nor retain them in prison, nor take 20*l.* from them, nor inflict tort or trespass on them; and this he wishes to avow before a jury of the visne.

Nicholas likewise denies the trespasses as before, and Gilbert and John's damages of 100 marks. [Norman French.]

As to Nicholas de Clere praying judgment whether he is bound to answer Gilbert's complaints on behalf of himself and his father, as the latter is not present and Gilbert is not attorney for him, Gilbert answers that the K. had by his writ commanded the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer to hear the grievances inflicted, as is said, by Nicholas on John Keche and Gilbert his son, and Gilbert's reasons for himself and his father, and to do them full and speedy justice; and the writ had further directed Nicholas to answer if he pleased the complaints of Gilbert against Nicholas on behalf of himself and his father.

Nicholas says that he is prepared to verify that he did not imprison John and Gilbert nor exact 20*l.* from them, nor take their land, as is charged against him.

Gilbert for himself and his father says that Nicholas detained them in prison until they had made a deed to him for payment of 20*l.*, and this he is prepared to verify by the clerk who made the deed, and otherwise as the court may adjudge. Therefore to judgment. [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, 531, No. 25, m. 7.]

July 10. 930. Whereas R[obert] Bishop of Bath and Wells, the K.'s Chancellor, and executor of the will of Robert de Stapleton, deceased, who when he died owed divers debts to the K. of the time when he was on the K.'s service in Ireland, had sent into that country Hugh de Eyton, clerk, and the bishop's attorney, to inquire regarding stock, corn, wool, wards, escheats, farms, and lands which Robert held for a term of years, money by tale, jewels, armour, and all Robert's goods and chattels, and regarding debts due to Robert in Ireland at his death, and to take into the K.'s hands all those goods, chattels, and debts, so that on payment of debts due to the K. the bishop might dispose of the residue, and further with Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, to extend Robert's lands and tenements in that country, the K. commands bailiffs and lieges in Ireland to be intentive, respondent, counselling, and aiding to Hugh in transacting the premises, so often as they shall be required thereto. Castrum Puellarum [Edinburgh] in Scotland. The K. therefore sends Henry le Clerk, messenger of the citizens, with the petition to the barons, commanding them that having inspected it and examined the articles therein contained, and having conferred as to what the K. can do for the advantage of the citizens without lesion of his dignity or prejudice to others, and also as to the fine to be taken for the grant, they shall certify to the K., remitting this writ. Aug. 8. 940. The K.'s writ to Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland. John Fitz Thomas had shown that whereas Amabilia sister of Juliana who was the wife of Thomas de Clare, deceased, who held of the K. in capite, and daughter and one of the heirs of Maurice Fitz Maurice, deceased, had before the justices last taking their eyre at Limerick recovered against the said Juliana, by judgment of the court, seisin of a moiety of the manor of Corkmoyst; and the said Amabilia after seisin so recovered enfeoffed John aforesaid of the said moiety. When John had by virtue of the feoffment been in peaceful seisin thereof for 1½ years, the escheator alleging that the custody of the manor ought to belong to the K. by reason of the minority of the heir of the said Thomas, who was in custody of the K., ejected John from his seisin of the moiety, and took it into the K.'s hand. As it is not just that John should be so removed from his free tenement without judgment, the K. commands that if John was enfeoffed by charter or otherwise, and if the moiety was taken into the K.'s hand for the reason aforesaid, the escheator shall replevy it to John until further orders. If the escheator can assign reasons why the moiety should be taken into the K.'s hand, he shall certify to the

K. thereupon by the morrow of All Souls, remitting to the K. a transcript of this writ. Berwick-upon-Tweed.

The K.'s writ to Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland. John Fitz Thomas had shown that whereas Amabilia daughter and one of the heirs of Maurice Fitz Maurice, heretofore deceased, had enfeoffed the said John of lands in Lochmesk and Kynsale, of her purparty of the inheritance of Maurice aforesaid, the escheator had after seisin so given and continued ejected John from the lands, and taken them into the K.'s hand, by reason of a writ commanding the escheator that he should permit Emelina who was the wife of Maurice aforesaid, to hold the land assigned to her in dower by the escheator, and that as to the other lands which belonged to Maurice aforesaid, and which are bound to warranty to the heir of Thomas de Clare (a minor in the K.'s custody), as well of that dower as of 2 parts of Maurice's lands, they should remain in the K.'s hand subject to the value of the dower during the custody. And whereas John aforesaid asserts that these or the other lands, whereof he had been enfeoffed by Amabilia aforesaid of Maurice's inheritance, are not bound to that warranty and there was no judgment binding Amabilia aforesaid to it, John had prayed the K. to restore the lands to him. The K. therefore commands the escheator that if he had taken the lands into the K.'s hand for the reason aforesaid, he should replevy them to John to hold until further orders; and that if there was any reason why the lands should be retaken into the K.'s hand and remain there on account of the custody, he should certify it to the K. on the morrow of All Souls, remitting a transcript of this writ. Berwick-upon-Tweed.

Mem. of the reason why W[alter] de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, took into the K.'s hand the manor of Corkemoyd, whereof John Fitz Thomas claims to be enfeoffed by Amabilia daughter and one of the heirs of Maurice Fitz Maurice, heretofore deceased, together with a moiety of the lands of Lochmeske and Kynsal, of said Maurice's inheritance, namely:—whereas the said escheator immediately after the death of Thomas de Clare, who held of the K. in capite, caused the said manors to be seized into the K.'s hand, together with all Thomas' other lands, the said Juliana who was the wife of Thomas and one of Maurice's heirs came before S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, the chief justiciary, and the K.'s Council in Ireland, showing that the said manor of Corkemoyd was her free marriage, the said justiciary at Juliana's instance took an inquisition thereupon in the presence of the escheator. Juliana came and said that Maurice aforesaid gave in free marriage to the said Thomas with Juliana the manor aforesaid wherefore judgment was given that Juliana should recover her seisin and so she recovered the manor. This done Amabilia daughter and other heir of Maurice aforesaid came before the justices itinerant in the co. of Limerick, and impleaded her sister of a moiety of that manor as her purparty of the inheritance of Maurice her father. By judgment of the K.'s court she recovered a moiety of that manor, and after seisin had thereof she enfeoffed John Fitz Thomas; but pending the plea the attorney of the escheator came before the justices itinerant, and claimed that they should not proceed to judgment, protesting that Thomas de Clare aforesaid was fully seised by the said

Maurice of the manor aforesaid for his homage and service, and that Maurice's custody ought to belong to the K. The justices notwithstanding proceeded to judgment, and adjudged her purparty to Amabilia. After this Juliana came and showed to the escheator where the charter which Maurice granted to Thomas of this manor was preserved. The escheator obtained this charter, caused it to be inrolled on the Rolls of the justices itinerant at Waterford, and sends a transcript thereof.

Transcript of charter of Maurice Fitz Maurice whereby he gives, grants, and confirms to Sir Thomas de Clare, for his homage and service, the manor of Corkemoyhyd, with its appurtenances, to have and to hold to Sir Thomas and his heirs as it had been chartered to Maurice by Sir Richard Fitz William. Sept. 12. 953. The K.'s writ to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. Whereas Henry le Marshall, citizen and merchant of Dublin, holds of the K. four score and 3 acres of land in le Rath in the tenement of Newcastle of Lyons, yearly rendering at the Exchequer, Dublin, 4*l.* 3*s.*, and the said Henry had expended much money on that land, and had always been looked on with favour by the K. and his family, the K. wishes to gratify his request that the K. should enfeoff him in fee of that land, if this can be done without inconvenience or loss to the K. Mandate therefore to the Treasurer and Barons to take an inquisition by the oath of good and lawful men of those parts whether it would be to the K.'s advantage that he should commit to Henry the land aforesaid to hold in fee farm for the above rent. They shall send to the K. the inquisition thereupon under their seals and the seals of those who shall take it, together with this writ. Amesbury.

Inquisition taken before the Treasurer and the Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, on Oct. 11, a. r. 19 [1291], by writ of England hereunto annexed, by the undersigned, namely:—Geoffrey Harald, Simon de Camerâ, John White, John Cosyn, William Smith, Roger de Mesynton, Richard Gerveys, Philip Fitz Elye, John de la Sale, John Fraunceys, Richard le Reve, Richard Dolfyn, and Roger Alwyne, Who Say upon their oath that it would be to the K.'s advantage that four score and 5 acres in le Rath in the tenement of Newcastle of Lyons, which

Henry le Marshall holds at the K.'s will, yearly rendering at the Exchequer of Dublin 12*d.* for each acre, should be committed in fee to Henry, yearly rendering the rent aforesaid, because if Henry is so enfeoffed the K. will have ward and marriage of Henry's other lands, which much exceed the value of the four score and five acres, and he can always answer promptly for his rent. They Say moreover that there would be security in the neighbouring country if he were enfeoffed thereof, by the dwellings which he desires to build in that land. They further Say that there would be loss to the K. if the land should not be so committed to Henry, for if other farmers held that land it might happen in process of time that it might be left waste and uncultivated, whereby the K. would lose his rent, as sometimes happens in the K.'s lands elsewhere in the same co. of Dublin. Michaelmas. 961. Nicholas Bacun having recovered in the Court of King's Bench against Milo de Crues in Easter, a. r. 17 [1289], seisin of 1 carucate of land in Ballymaglassan by default of Milo in Michaelmas, a. r. 16 [1288], Milo alleged that he could not have made default because he was prevented from coming by being in prison; and, moreover, by the death of William de Beverley, then Chancellor of Ireland, he was prevented from having a writ to replevy the land. J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, chief justiciary of Ireland, was therefore commanded to certify to the K. in Michaelmas, a. r. 17 [1289], why Milo could not be present when he made default. Milo was prevented by death before this term from curing his default, whereby Nicholas recovered as above to the disherison of Thomas Milo's son and heir. The justiciary was therefore commanded to take the land into the K.'s hand, &c., inquire as to the imprisonment, and summon Nicholas to appear in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, a. r. 18 [1290]. The justiciary certified that the land had been taken into the K.'s hand, and that Milo de Crues had been imprisoned at Dublin from St. Catherine's day, a. r. 16 [Nov. 25, 1287], until the feast of All Saints [Nov. 1] following; that William de Beverley, the Chancellor, died on Friday the Parasceve, a. r. 17 [8th April 1289], and that Milo died on Friday next after the feast of St. Michael [30th Sept.] in the same year. On the above day Thomas de Crues came by Laurence of Hereford, his guardian, and Nicholas aforesaid by Robert of Ireland, his attorney; and the suit having been continued until this day, namely, 3 weeks of Michaelmas, Thomas was asked whether he could cure his father's default in 1 month of Easter, a. r. 17; he answered nothing, but went away in contempt of the court. Wherefore W[illiam] de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, is commanded to relax the caption of the land into the K.'s hand, and to permit Nicholas to have his seisin, &c. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 130, Rot. 27 dors.]

Michaelmas. 963. Complaint of Margery wife of Roger de Penbrok, of Ireland, against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Dublin. That whereas Nicholas committed Roger to prison for arrears due when the latter was sheriff of Tipperary, Margery took to Nicholas the K.'s writ under the Great Seal of England to liberate Roger on mainprise, and produced as mainpernors Stephen le Erecdiakene and John Fuleburne, Knights, Roger de Penbrok, junr., Roger Fitz William, Peter de Byford, and John de Baddok, but Nicholas would not admit the mainpernors, alledging that they were insufficient; and afterwards sold at his will all Roger's goods and chattels; so that Roger could not have his maintenance in prison and Margery his chattels.

That whereas Roger had produced before Nicholas and the Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, in discharge of his account of the farm of the county aforesaid, certain allowances made to him by writ of that Exchequer, as, for instance, to William de Cerney for works of the K.'s minery of Ireland, 18*l.*; by writ of Irish Chancery to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, 38*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.*; by like writ to Walter l'Enfaunt, for his fee for custody of the castle of Athlone, 20*l.*; by like writ to the justices itinerant in same county, in part payment of their debts, 56*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; and to John de Coventry, clerk of the Crown, in part payment of his fee, 8*l.*, Nicholas would not admit those allowances; and that whereas Roger had delivered to Nicholas a writ under the Great Seal of England commanding him to make due allowances on those writs, Nicholas would not fulfil the K.'s commands; that whereas Roger had taken the county to farm for 100*l.* a year with all profits thereunto belonging, as fully as other sheriffs had held them, and Roger had not on account of the justiciary's prohibition received within that county attachments of malefactors and amerciaments of those summoned and not coming at the K.'s mandate to level passes there, all which other sheriffs had been wont to receive; and whereas Nicholas received the K.'s writ under the Great Seal of England commanding him, if other sheriffs had received in aid of their farm profits out of the attachments and amerciaments aforesaid, that then he should allow in his account to Roger as much as he might have received if the prohibition had not been made, yet Nicholas would make no allowance to Roger.

Nicholas acknowledges that he caused Roger to be arrested on his account of the farm of the county aforesaid for 154*l.* which he owed to the K. for arrears of that farm, for which he would find no security, and he therefore remained in prison; Nicholas says that no writ came to him, as Margery charges, to liberate Roger on mainprise; but he believes that he received a writ commanding him to liberate Roger on his giving sufficient security to pay the arrears of the farm to the K. As he did not find sufficient security he was not liberated.

As to the allowances under the writs produced by Roger on his account, Nicholas says that such writs were produced, but that Roger was asked if he had letters from those who received the money aforesaid, and he said not, on which he was several times told to obtain the letters and the allowances would be made. As he neglected to do this the allowances were not made. [Exchequer of Pleas, Placita, Edw. I., No. 17, Rot. 8.]

Michaelmas. 964. Articles whereof Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, was convicted on his account rendered at the Exchequer, in the term of Michaelmas, a. r. 19–20.

Whereas Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Irelend, swore on the Holy Evangelists, before the Treasurer and Barons, that he should render faithful account and faithfully charge and discharge himself of all things touching his office during his whole time, upon being required to produce before the Treasurer and Barons the Rolls whereby he wished to render his account, Nicholas said that he had no such Rolls unless the Rolls which Geoffrey Brun, now chamberlain of the Exchequer, Dublin, produced in his name and the names of Peter de Balymor and Henry le Ponte, former chamberlains of the Exchequer aforesaid, and delivered to the chamberlain and barons under Geoffrey's seal. On the 2nd day following, however, after Nicholas had been many times admonished by the Treasurer and Barons that he should produce before them and deliver to them as is the custom his own proper Rolls touching his account, Nicholas distinctly said that he had no other Rolls save those which Geoffrey the chamberlain had produced. At length Henry de Ponte, late chamberlain, charged Nicholas with having other Rolls of all receipts, issues, and payments during his time, principal Rolls of the Exchequer, as it were, and Henry, in presence of Nicholas, placed those Rolls in a coffer with other Rolls of chamberlains when they came to England to render their account. Nicholas answers that he does not recollect whether he has such Rolls; but that if he has any Rolls they are transcripts of Rolls of the chamberlains aforesaid. Nicholas was therefore directed that he bring those Rolls on the morrow before the Treasurer and Barons, and that without them they would not, could not, and ought not to proceed to audit his account. On the third day following however Nicholas brought his Rolls of receipts, issues, and payments of all his time, admitted those Rolls by word of mouth, proposed them as those by which he wished to account, affirmed all things contained in them, and avowed them to be certain and legal. Nicholas being asked by the treasurer whether the Rolls which he brought with him are principal Rolls of the Exchequer and written in the Exchequer day by day [per dietas] as is the custom, or whether they are transcripts of Rolls, or e converso, Nicholas says that the Rolls are principal Rolls and written in the Exchequer day by day as they ought to be, and that the Rolls which Geoffrey had brought were written subsequently to his Rolls as is the custom. As Nicholas after pledging his oath that he should render a faithful account had denied that he had any Rolls of his own unless the Rolls of the chamberlains aforesaid, and subsequently after a long examination had, against his oath and his denial, produced his own proper Rolls, avowed them as principals by which he wished to account, and had elsewhere said that if he had any Rolls they were transcripts of Rolls which Geoffrey had produced, and now contradicts himself by asserting that the Rolls which he produces are principal Rolls and not transcripts, it is adjudged that Nicholas go to prison.

Henry le Ponte, late receiver of the Exchequer, Dublin, by the K.'s writ under the Great Seal of England, and who had a key of the K.'s Treasury of that Exchequer, appears and says that Nicholas on his first arrival in Ireland to assume the office of treasurer there, without any warrant, but of his own will, removed Henry from that office, took away the key from him, and by his own authority substituted Richard Locard, his clerk, in place of Henry, and delivered the key to him. Richard was afterwards convicted of breach of faith and negligence, and by judgment of court committed to prison; Nicholas could not deny this before the Treasurer and Barons, but avowed it. Wherefore it is adjudged that he be at the K.'s pleasure.

It moreover appears by examination that whereas the treasurer in times past was wont to deposit [treasure] in the Treasury, under keys of the treasurer and chamberlain, Nicholas on his first arrival in Ireland removed the treasure from the Treasury, kept the treasure in his custody, and placed it in a chest in his chamber at the foot of his bed; so that neither Peter de Balimor, whom on his arrival he found chamberlain appointed by the K., nor those who succeeded him, ever had from that time the key or custody of the treasure, but the whole remained in custody of Nicholas, he assuming the office and charge of chamberlain. The K. understood that there was always a chamberlain there (who testified receipts and payments and had custody and a key of the treasure), and always wrote to the treasurer and chamberlain regarding payments to be made. As there can be no chamberlain unless he has custody and a key to the treasure, it manifestly appears that Nicholas contrary to the custom of the Exchequer and in deceit of the K. assumed this office to himself, so that receipts and payments were made without the testimony of the chamberlain, as for the reasons aforesaid there could not be a chamberlain there. Wherefore it is adjudged that Nicholas be at the K.'s pleasure.

Moreover whereas Joan who was the wife of John de Baskerville, deceased, had brought to Nicholas a writ of Mandamus dated Forde, Jan. 12, a. r. 14 [1285–6] to pay to her 40 marks in which the K. was bound to John for arreas of his fee for the custody of the castle of Dungarvan, Nicholas did not execute the writ. Joan therefore obtained a writ of Liberate under date of Paris, June 12, a. r. 14 [1286] to pay to merchants of Lucca dwelling in Ireland 40 marks to the use of Joan. Nicholas on that writ of Liberate paid 40 marks to the merchants, received an acquittance from them, and caused that payment to be inrolled on the rolls of Liberate of a. r. 16. Afterwards while the writ of Mandamus aforesaid was hanging on the file a writ of Allocate was obtained under date of Oleron in Gascony, July 11, a. r. 16 [1288], directed to the auditors of Nicholas' account to allow the 40 marks to Nicholas, at which time William de Clare brother of Nicholas, was in Gascony. This writ of Allocate was attached to the writ of Mandamus, by which means Nicholas caused it to be inrolled on the Rolls of Liberate in Easter term, a. r. 17 [1289], that he had caused the 40 marks to be paid to Joan by the hands of Geoffrey Brun, and the latter granted to Nicholas letters of receipt thereof.

Whereas Nicholas at the end of the term of St. John the Baptist, a. r. 16 [1288] prayed to be allowed 75*l.* for part of the fee of S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, justiciary of Ireland, it appeared that Nicholas paid to Simon de Malvern 35*l.* of this amount to the use of the justiciary by Simon's letters dated the octaves of Hilary, a. r. 14 [Jan. 20, 1285–6] to acquit wages of Welsh and English retainers, and 40*l.* of this amount to Henry de Ponte to the use of the justiciary, by letter of the said Henry, without warrant. Nicholas caused this amount of 75*l.* to be entered on his Roll after the death of the archbishop and to be allowed against the archbishop's fee. It sufficiently appears that Nicholas after the death of deceased took his goods and chattels into the K.'s hands, out of which he might have levied the amount, but he did not do so, but after the death of the archbishop falsely wished to have them allowed on account of his fee. He thus fraudulently subtracted this money from the K.'s treasure, and falsely demanded allowance thereof. It is adjudged that Nicholas be thereof at the K.'s pleasure.

Nicholas having prayed to have allowed to him 40*l.* for the fee of John de Malton, justice for holding pleas following the chief justiciary of Ireland, from Michaelmas, a. r. 18 [1290] until Michaelmas next ensuing, a whole year, it appeared that 20*l.* were allowed to Nicholas for the fee of Walter l'Enfaunt who was justice, for holding those pleas from the same term of Michaelmas, a. r. 18, until Easter next ensuing, within the year aforesaid. And as Nicholas prayed to have allowed to him the amount of 40*l.* for John's fee for the whole year, and it appears that 20*l.* are allowed to Nicholas for Walter l'Enfaunt's fee for the ½ year, and John did not assume the office of justiciary until the feast of Hilary [Jan. 13] within the year aforesaid, it follows that Nicholas had caused to be allowed to himself 20*l.* for the fee of Walter as justice for ½ a year, and that nevertheless he prayed allowance of 40*l.* for John's fee for the whole year. He thus falsely and fraudulently prays a double allowance of 20*l.* for a fee of one and the same year. It is adjudged that no allowance be made to him for the 20*l.*

Nicholas had prayed to have allowed to him 97*l.* paid to Henry de Ponte for the expenses of William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, regarding the restoration of the hostages of the King of Connaught marching with an armed force, and also 60*l.* paid to the same Henry for the expenses of the justiciary in a war against Malachy. Henry avowed that the justiciary did not go there with horses and arms but only with his retinue, regarding the restoration of hostages, and not against Malachy; and so Nicholas paid this money out of the K.'s treasure to the justiciary contrary to the form limited to him in the K.'s writ under the Great Seal of England, that he ought not to make such payments unless for the justiciary's fee or when it was necessary to march with an armed force against rebels and enemies, or for provisioning castles. It is therefore adjudged that no allowance be made to him.

Moreover Nicholas prays allowance of 100*l.* paid to William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, for his expenses in going to the K. in England. It appears that he paid this money to the justiciary against the form limited to him in the writ aforesaid. Wherefore it is adjudged that no allowance be made to him thereupon.

Nicholas prayed allowance of 158*l.* 9*s.* 10*d.* paid to J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin for part of his fee from Michaelmas at the end of a. r. 18 [1290], until Easter next ensuing, and also of 250*l.* for the fee of William de Vescy aforesaid at 500*l.* a year, from Sept. 20, a. r. 18 [1290], until March 22 next ensuing, namely, for ½ year. It appears that William first landed in Ireland in order to assume the office of justiciary on St. Martin's day, a. r. 18 [Nov. 11, 1290], and so Nicholas prays a double allowance for 7 weeks and 2 days for the fee of William the justiciary, before his arrival in Ireland, for which time the archbishop, the other justiciary, had been satisfied before William's arrival. Wherefore it is adjudged that no allowance be made to Nicholas unless pro rata for each justiciary.

Whereas moreover Nicholas had allowance of 200*l.* which by the K.'s command he ought to have paid to Peter de Bermyngham and John Fitz Thomas, marching with an army against the K.'s enemies, it appears that Nicholas paid to Peter and John 160*l.* only, and that he did not pay the 40*l.* residue until after the allowance of 200*l.*, and this from fear that John should complain thereof to the Treasurer and Barons. Thus Nicholas falsely caused 200*l.* to be allowed to him, where he had paid before the allowance 160*l.* only. Wherefore it is adjudged that Nicholas go before a jury.

[Rider.] Allowances which yet remain to be made to Nicholas de Clare in his account of the time when he was treasurer of Ireland, so far as can be remembered, without the view of the Rolls, and which he prays to be allowed to him, together with others which may be found in the account.

967. The K.'s writ to William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland. Had been informed by the Dominican friars of Ireland, that having by grant of the K. so far as he could grant, and by protection [tuitio-riaria] of the sheriff of Limerick, entered a piece of land in the vill of Kilmallock given to them by a burgess of that vill to dwell in, they were ejected therefrom and their house destroyed by the clerks and servants of the Bishop of Limerick, chief lord of that vill, and by his orders. The K. therefore commands the justiciary to inquire by the oath of 12 men of that vill and its neighbourhood by whom and by whose authority the friars had been expelled, whether the land owes any rent or service to the lord of the fee, and whether the residence of the brothers there would tend to the prejudice of the K., of the lord of the fee, or any other person. The justiciary shall certify the inquisition to the K. under his seal and the seals of those by whom it shall have been taken, together with this writ. Bristol.

Nov. 11. 993. The K.'s writ commanding the barons of the Exchequer to cause John de Valle, detained in the Fleet prison for arrears of his account when he was bailiff in Ireland of Agnes de Valence, to be discharged on his giving mainprise. John was delivered to Geoffrey de Genevile, William de Doddyngeseles, Thomas de Saunford, and John Fitz Thomas, who gave mainprise that he should be before the Treasurer and Barons at Westminster in the quinzaine of St. Martin. The account having been audited before William de Carleton and Walter de Castello, as auditors, of the time when John was bailiff of John de Aveynes, deceased, who was husband of Agnes, and when he was bailiff in Ireland of Agnes herself, it appeared that the receipts and issues amounted to 5,313*l.* 2*s.* 12¼*d.*, whereof the auditors previously assigned by Agnes allowed to John 3,811*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.* The auditors put in view 1,023*l.* 6*s.* 11*d.* paid to merchants for debts, but this amount was not allowed because John did not produce letters of acquittance thereupon; they also put in view 23*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for the value of 36 crannocks of wheat and 43 crannocks of oats which John said he had delivered to William de Loges, Agnes's clerk, at the manor of Ramore [Rathmore], which the auditors did not allow because John did not produce William's letters proving the delivery; and so John owed 426*l.* [sic] clear, for which he was committed to the Fleet prison. As the auditors appointed by the Treasurer and Barons could not have sufficient cognizance of the expenses incurred in Ireland without consulting men of that country, the matter was adjourned from Hilary term, there being then no treasurer in Ireland. On the morrow of the clause of Easter the parties agreed to the then treasurer of Ireland, and Robert Bagot, justice of the Common Pleas, being so consulted. Agnes was directed to prosecute the K.'s writ before these persons. John alleged that he could not prove before the treasurer of Ireland and Robert Bagot the payments made to merchants, because some of them were from England, some from Lombardy, some from Hainault, Brabant, and other countries, wherefore he prays time to search for the acquittances. Agnes agreed, provided that if John did not appear on the day named he should be charged with the whole amount of 1,023*l.* 6*s.* 11*d.* John having agreed he was ordered to find new mainpernors and to appear on the morrow of Hilary with the acquittances. John found as new mainpernors, John Fitz Thomas, Walter son of Walter l'Enfaunt, James Ketyng, and John de Fulburne, Knights, Walter de Bodynton, and John Punchardun. Agnes appeared on the above and following days, but John came not. Wherefore William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, was commanded to cause Geoffrey de Genevyle and the Nov. 12. 994. The K.'s writ commanding William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, to replevy to the Prior and convent of Athassel until the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist next ensuing, one messuage and one carucate of land in Athassel which they had lately bought from William de Columbariis, who held them immediately of the prior and convent, and which the justiciary had taken into the K.'s hand, because the prior and convent had entered them without licence, contrary to the statute of mortmain. The justiciary shall meanwhile take an inquisition as to whether it would or would not be to the damage of the K. or others that the K. should grant them licence to hold the messuage and land in fee according to the form of the feoffment, and whether William de Columbariis held them immediately of the prior and convent, and if so by what service, and how much they are yearly worth. The justiciary shall without delay send the inquisition to the K. under his seal and the seals of those by whom it shall be taken, with this writ. Wigorn.

Elias White and John de Cogan, Knights, Thomas Fitz Nicholas, John Geoffrey, Richard Clement, John Fitz William, Henry de Aucke, Ralph de Venur, Walter Stykehar, Henry Ewyas, William de la Sale, and Richard Leynath, Who upon their oath Say that it would not be to the damage of the K. or others if the K. should grant to the Prior and convent of Athassel one messuage and one carucate of land in Athassel which they had purchased in fee of William de Columbariis. They also Say that William held that messuage and land immediately of the prior and convent by the service of rendering to them 39*s.* a year. They Say that the messuage and land are worth 4 marks and 12*d.* a year, saving the service aforesaid. And they Say that William held the messuage and land of the prior and convent by rendering suit at their court from quinzaine to quinzaine. [Inq. P.M., 19 Edw. I., No. 62.]

Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to allow Henry to hold the land in the form aforesaid.

A similar mandate to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. [Pat., 19 Edw. I., m. 1.]

[18–19 Edw. I.] 997. Complaints of John de Folebourne, Knight Bachelor, to the K., of the injuries done to him by Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, in contempt of the K.'s command.

When John was with the K. in Gascony, a. r. 16, news came to him that S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, his uncle, was dead, and that John's lands and chattels had been seized by Thomas de Lynham, sent by the treasurer without the knowledge or assent of the justiciary or the barons of the Exchequer, and without any warrant save the treasurer's seal.

John having represented to the K. and Council that his lands and chattels had been seized, the K. commanded the justiciary and barons of the Exchequer that they should deliver John's lands and chattels to him, and that he should not be punished on account of the death of the archbishop.

The justiciary and barons promised to perform the K.'s commandment, but the treasurer through his bad will, his hatred of John's uncle, and his coveting of John's lands, thwarted the execution of the K.'s writ, entered by his own authority without warrant into John's manors at Dunbro and Kilresk, and caused to be levied out of stock laden in waggons, wheat on the land and wheat in granaries, oxen, cows, sheep, and other articles, 136*l.* 19*s.* 3½*d.*, which he caused to be valued at his will by the said Thomas de Lynham, to John's damage of 200 marks and more.

John prayed the justiciary and the K.'s Council to give counsel to the treasurer to allow the K.'s commandment to be performed, but he would not allow John to have seisin of his land, and through mere malice allowed it to remain uncultivated in a. r. 17, to John's damage of 200*l.*

The treasurer so oppressed John that he had not wherewith to maintain himself, but the Archbishop of Dublin retained him of the K.'s household when he went against the Irish. John was taken prisoner, but he was ransomed by the K. and the archbishop.

John sued out other writs to the justiciary and treasurer to deliver his lands and chattels to him, but the treasurer kept him out of possession until he agreed that he would not prosecute under white wax the writs he had sued out to recover seisin, but that he should take seisin from the treasurer under green wax. The treasurer thus got seisin of part of John's lands, but nothing of his chattels.

After he had thus obtained seisin a clerk of the Queen, Walter de Morle by name, came to Ireland, and the treasurer prevailed on him to disseise John for debt due to the Queen, though he owed her nothing. They kept him out of possession and destroyed what they found on the land, sequestered what they pleased, and left his land bare and destroyed. But the Queen, on a complaint made to her of Walter, who acknowledged that it was done by the act of the treasurer and not by his act, caused 10*l.* to be restored to John by the hand of Richard de Geyton, her clerk, which he received from that land by the sheriff of Dublin.

The treasurer moreover took away from John at Donbreu and Grenath 1,300 ewes, which Walter de Scholdham, William de St. Aubin, and Thomasin de la Sale, the treasurer's valet, bought with the lambs and all the wool.

The treasurer also took away from John the custody of the land of Reginald de Dene, which he had of the gift of his uncle, until Reginald's age, in the manor of Kilcrone, for the reason that Sir Thomas de la Roche, who had married Reginald's mother, had given to the treasurer the marriage of his eldest son, so that he allowed Reginald, still under age, and himself to enter the manor without John's will, and thereby John lost 63 acres of wheat, 25 acres of oats, 1 acre of beans, 4 acres of peas, 4 acres of barley, 24 oxen, 1 cow, 1 beast of the plough, 40 hogs, old corn in a heap which was not valued, 24 stone of wool, 50*s.* 2¼*d.* Michaelmas rent, and 50*s.* 2¼*d.* Easter rent, 5 sows, 22 hogs, and all the issues of the manor for 2 years next ensuing, which manor is worth by extent 40*l.* a year. [Norman French.] [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 25, m. 9.]

[18–19 Edw. I.] 998. Complaints of John de Folebourne, Knight Bachelor, to the K. and his Council, of the torts and grievances inflicted on him by Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland, in contempt of the K.'s commandment. The K. had commanded S[tephen] de Foleborne, Bishop of Waterford, then justiciary of Ireland, and the said Nicholas de Clere to find safe conduct and reasonable expenses for the Welshmen chosen to go to Ireland to maintain the peace against the Irish. The justiciary sent John to Wales to bring the Welsh over according to the K.'s command. John conducted them to Ireland and found their wages for a time, as appears by the account which he rendered before the said Treasurer and the Barons of the Exchequer of Ireland, the total whereof amounts with the freight of 2 ships to 48*l.* 2*s.* 4*d.* The date and particulars of account are witnessed by writs of payment to John which issued out of the Chancery of Ireland to the Treasurer and Barons. But the treasurer would never do anything, for which reason on John's remonstrance the K. by writs under his seal from England, France, and Gascony frequently commanded the Treasurer and Barons to allow and pay to John the reasonable expenses he had incurred by the K.'s command. But the treasurer despising the command would do nothing.

John in the voyage lost 2 horses, the one worth 20*l.* and the other 100*s.*; the K. commanded the treasurer to make allowance, but the latter would do nothing.

Moreover the Common Council of the K. at Kilkenny had awarded that John should take 10*l.* for expenses of himself and his household incurred by the K.'s command in conducting the Welshmen aforesaid; a writ thereupon issued to the Treasurer and Barons, but the treasurer would do nothing. This wrong the treasurer did to John to his damage of 100*l.* [Norman French.] [Q.R., Irish Exchequer, Bundle 531, No. 25, m. 10.]

[19 E. I.] 999. Complaint of Roger de Penbrok to the K. against Nicholas de Clere, treasurer of Ireland. The latter had delivered to Roger the county of Tipperary to farm, rendering to the K. 100*l.* a year. He was, like other sheriffs before him, to deliver those attached by mainprise, giving to them the bad passes of the country to cut down [pour leur donaunt a couper les mauveys pas du pays]; to cause the people of the county to be summoned to the passes; and to amerce those who did not come. The justiciary of Ireland had forbidden those attachments and amerciaments. When Roger rendered his account he prayed that these matters might be allowed to him, and he has a writ of allowance thereupon. The treasurer having charged Roger on his account with 609*l.* 5*s* 8*d.*, Roger said that he had writs of Liberate to the Archbishop of Dublin, then justiciary of Ireland, for 38*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*, to the justices of eyre of Clomhil for 56*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, to John of Coventry, clerk of the Crown, for 8*l.*, to Walter l'Enfaunt for 20*l.*, and to William Cerny for 18*l.* by writ patent of the Exchequer. Wherefore he claimed the allowances from the quinzaine of Michaelmas, a. r. 18, until Trinity of this year, when he sued out the K.'s writ allowing him payments and acquittances to the amount of 40*l.*, whereof the treasurer would not give allowances or acquittances. The K. had commanded the treasurer to inquire how much less the farm would be worth than it was worth in the time of other sheriffs by reason of the prohibition of the justices regarding attachments and amerciaments, and to allow him in his account what it was found to be worth less. But the treasurer would not take this inquisition, nor allow him anything, but charged him with 125*l.* for 1¼ year. Moreover he has the K.'s writ to the treasurer to levy his fees and amerciaments and his debts of the green wax; but the treasurer would levy nothing, and despising the K.'s commands had sold his goods and chattels, for which Roger can have no allowance.

Petition of Margery wife of Roger de Penbrok to the K. on behalf of her husband. The latter had come with the K.'s writ to liberate himself from prison and his goods and chattels which had been taken into the K.'s hand for arrears of his account when he was sheriff of Tipperary, wherewith he says he is wrongly charged. He had offered as mainpernors before the treasurer—Sir Silvester Archdeacon and Sir John de Fulburne, knights, Roger de Penbroc, the younger, Roger his son, William Peres of Biford, and John Madoch. The treasurer said that the mainpernors were insufficient, although Sir Silvester can spend 300*l.* a year, and had bound all his land to the K. as security. But the treasurer despising the K.'s mandate still detains Roger's person and has sold his goods and chattels in order that Roger may not come to show the mischief which the treasurer has done to the K., to Roger, and to the people, and that his wife, who is in England, may not have the means of prosecuting her complaint before the K. Wherefore she prays remedy and damages of 200*l.*

Further complaint of Margery on behalf of her said husband. That the said Nicholas de Clere took a carucate of land, &c. in Rosfyntenan and 40*s.* of rent in Kinsale, in order that Roger might have from year to year fully and entirely the farm of the county aforesaid with the amerciaments, which other sheriffs had before him, and to save him from damage. He altogether failed therein to Roger's damage of 400*l.* He subsequently caused the Lady Juliana de Clere to implead him of this carucate of land and of the 40*s.* rent aforesaid, and he vouched Roger to warranty in order to recover the extent thereof in better soil.

That William de Clere, locum tenens of the treasurer, while the latter was in England before the K.'s Council answering the plaintiffs, caused Roger to come before the Exchequer of Dublin with all the K.'s money which he had received, and to pay 300 marks into the Exchequer; and when he had done this William kept him in the custody of the marshal for 40 days, though he had not accounted and was condemned in no debt, and from this custody he could not escape until he had given to William his charger worth 20*l.* Of this outrage she prays remedy.

Pleas of Nicholas de Clere to complaints of Margery wife of Roger de Penbrok:—That she ought not to be answered because she is not a party to the plaint; that her husband could revive the plaint at his will, and of this he prays judgment.

That the writ charging Roger came to the Treasurer and Barons and remains in the Exchequer of Dublin in the custody of the marshal; that Roger tendered to the Exchequer before the justiciary, Treasurer and Barons, mainprise for his delivery; that this having been deemed insufficient his body and his chattels were at his request tendered to the seneschal of the liberty of Kilkenny where his lands are; that the treasurer led him thither, but the seneschal would not undertake the charge; that Roger obtained a writ to the seneschal, who took the surety and returned it into the Exchequer; that it was not so returned before Nicholas' departure for England; that this is so is averred by the record of the chief justiciary and the barons of the Exchequer, Dublin; that those whom he produced as his mainpernors said that they would not be sureties before the K. for any debt.

That the county of Tipperary was let to the said Roger in full Exchequer at 100*l.* a year; that a commission thereupon was made to him under the K.'s seal, simply giving to him the issues of the county without condition; that he can show this commission if Roger wishes, and that if not he demands judgment; that if statute or justice does not allow such issues to be taken neither the K. nor Nicholas would be bound; that he ought to show the writ granting him allowance of the issues and he will then he answered if the treasurer can answer without the barons; that as to the justices having forbidden him to have the issues, he ought not to charge himself or answer, and the K. ought not to receive damage of his own act; and he demands judgment.

That the writs of Liberate were directed to the treasurer and chamberlains and not to Roger de Penbrok; that Roger took upon himself the office of treasurer and chamberlain, and says that he caused payments of the K.'s money to be made while Nicholas was in England; that as the treasurer and chamberlains cannot know whether he paid those to whom the writs of Liberate issued without their acknowledgment or letters patent, there was only for him in the view of allowance the sum contained in the Liberates until they were certified as aforesaid; that afterwards by certificate of letter of receipt they received allowance; that Roger was never arrested and his chattels sold by reason of the moneys contained in the writs of Liberate, but over and above these moneys the arrears of Roger's account amount to 354*l.*;

That if he will show the tenour of the writ of inquiry and allowance he will be answered if the treasurer ought to and can answer without the barons;

That Nicholas did not and could not charge Roger, for when the latter accounted the former was in England.

In regard to the 20*l.* which he is said to have paid to Walter l'Enfaunt, if Roger will show the reason and form of the writ he shall be answered.

As to the K. having sent his writ to the Treasurer and Barons to inquire how much less the farm of the county would be worth by reason of the justiciary having forbidden the attachments and amerciaments, Nicholas prays that he will show the writ.

As to the writ which he says came to Nicholas to cause Roger's fees, amerciaments, and debts to be levied, Nicholas says that no such writ came to him, and this he wishes to be verified by record of the barons.

As to Margery's allegation that Nicholas took from him land and rent in order that Roger might have the farm of the county fully and entirely, Nicholas prays that she or her husband will show what covenant they have, and he will be ready to give testimony regarding purchase and payment made of every land and rent which they allege against him.

As to her charge that William de Clere took from Roger a horse worth 20*l.*, Nicholas says that he ought not and cannot answer.

Replications of Margery de Penebrok to pleas of Nicholas de Clere:—As to his praying judgment whether he is bound to answer her as she is not a party, she says that the K. by his writ commanded that she should be answered, and besides the K. commanded him to come and answer. He has moreover answered and is still pleading; wherefore he cannot now object.

Nicholas again says that Roger was never wrongfully charged by him. Margery says that he was. While Nicholas was in England Roger was summoned regarding his account before Elias of Winchester, locum tenens of Nicholas. Roger rendered his account, but Elias would not allow him his reasonable allowances. Until then the treasurer or Elias had not attached his body or taken his goods into the K.'s hands, and so put the whole account in view, until the coming of the treasurer; he then caused Roger to come before him and charged him with the whole charge which Elias had put in view, and committed him to prison.

As to Nicholas's answer that the K.'s writ came to him, and that this writ remains in custody of the marshal, but what was its form he cannot record without his barons, Margery says that he ought to know the tenor of the writ; the K. now commanded him by another writ to come prepared to answer her complaint; and of this she prays judgment.

As to what Nicholas says that Roger tendered before the chief justiciary mainprise to the Treasurer and Barons for his release, which mainprise was deemed insufficient, Margery answers that the K.'s writ did not go to the chief justiciary nor to the commonalty, but to Nicholas himself, as he has acknowledged; that the mainprise was sufficient; this she is ready to aver by record of the Archbishop of Dublin, who is chief of the K.'s Council in Ireland, and by the oaths of the chamberlains of the Exchequer of Dublin.

As to what Nicholas says that at Roger's suit he granted a writ to the seneschal of the liberty of Kilkenny to take sufficient surety from him according to the K.'s command, Margery says that by this answer Nicholas grants that Roger's body and chattels should be subject to mainprise by the K.'s writ, which Nicholas acknowledges to have received. Wherefore she demands judgment, unless he can excuse his wrong by showing a mandate for wrongful detention of Roger in prison.

Nicholas says that the county of Tipperary had been let to Roger to farm at 100*l.* a year, and that a commission thereupon was made to him under the K.'s seal giving him the simple issues of the county without the condition mentioned. Margery replies that she knows nothing of a commission. Nicholas says that if a statute or justice do not allow Roger to take these issues the K. or Roger are not bound.

To this Margery answers that the K. sent his writ from England that if other sheriffs at all times before him enjoyed these issues, so much as they amounted to should be allowed to him in his farm. Wherefore she demands judgment whether by colour of a statute or by order of justice Nicholas can excuse himself against the special commandment of the K.

Nicholas says that when Roger brought the writs of Liberate to the treasurer and chamberlains, Nicholas would not make allowance because Roger had no letters of testimony from those to whom he had made payment; to this Margery replies that Roger brought letters from those to whom he had made payment with the writs of Liberate, but Nicholas would allow him nothing; Margery thereupon complained of this hardship to the Archbishop of Dublin, then justiciary of Ireland; the archbishop himself came into the Exchequer and avowed the orders of payment, and commanded the treasurer to allow the amounts to Roger; the treasurer would not allow them and detained the writs of Liberate disallowed. Margery was therefore obliged to pass into England; to follow the K.'s court into Scotland with great labour and expense; and she sued out a writ commanding that allowance be made to her.

As to the 20*l.* which ought to have been paid to Sir Walter L'Enfaunt, Margery says that she complained to the Archbishop of Dublin regarding this sum as well as the other Liberates; the archbishop commanded in full Exchequer that all the Liberates should be allowed to her.

As to Nicholas not answering for William his brother, regarding a horse, Margery says that he ought to answer, because he had put William in his place as treasurer. The latter imprisoned Roger until he had given the horse which was worth 20*l.*

Octaves of Hilary. 1028. Ireland. The K. had commanded his justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, that they should proceed to judgment regarding a plaint between Emelina who was the wife of Maurice Fitz Maurice, plaintiff, and Thomas Fitz Maurice, tenant, of the manor of Kyllorglan, excepting the advowson of the church of that manor; and that if there were any difficulty preventing them from proceeding to judgment without consulting the K., they should send before the K. the record and process in the plaint, with this writ, &c.

Pleas at Limerick on the morrow of the Epiphany, a. r. 18 [7 Jan. 1289–90], before William de Barry and his associates, justices in eyre.

Kerry. Emelina who was the wife of Maurice Fitz Maurice demands against Thomas Fitz Maurice the manor of Kyllorgelan (excepting the advowson of the church of that manor), which she claims to be her right of the gift of Christiana de Mariscis, who thereof enfeoffed Maurice and Emelina aforesaid, and into which Thomas had not entry save by Thomas de Clare to whom Maurice had demised it. Thomas [Fitz Maurice] comes and says that Emelina ought not to be answered because the writ is defective. A day was given to the parties to hear judgment thereupon on the morrow of the Purification [Feb. 3]; on which day the K. by writ, tested by J[ohn] Archbishop of Dublin, locum tenens of the justiciary, at Colfyn, 25 Jan., a. r. 18 [1289–90], commanded the justices in eyre at Limerick to proceed in the plea notwithstanding the allegation against the writ; whereupon it was adjudged that Thomas [Fitz Maurice] should answer further. Thomas thereupon by aid of court vouches to warranty Gilbert son and heir under age of Thomas de Clare, and produces a charter whereby Thomas de Clare gives to Thomas Fitz Maurice and his heirs his castle of Kyllorgelan and all his lands in the vill of Kyllargelan, the cantreds of Moyconchyn and Orathath, the island of Darfry and the other islands to those cantreds belonging, as freely as he had held them of Sir Maurice Fitz Maurice, with all liberties and free customs thereunto belonging; to have and to hold to the said Thomas Fitz Maurice and his heirs for ever, yearly rendering at the feast of Pentecost a jer-falcon soar and trained, and at the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist [24 June], a soar-hawk; and rendering to the chief lords of the fee the foreign military services due thereupon. Warranty by Thomas de Clare to Thomas Fitz Maurice and his heirs of the castle and lands in Kyllorgelan and in the cantreds and islands aforesaid, for 50 librates of land.

Long pleading between the parties. A day for judgment is given at Limerick on the morrow of the clause of Easter [April 10]. Afterwards the K. by writ commanded the justices in eyre to cause the record and process of the plaint to come before the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, in one month of Easter.

Pleas at Dublin in one month of Easter in the year aforesaid [May 1, 1290].

Judgment in the plaint between Emelina, plaintiff, and Thomas Fitz Maurice of the manor of Kyllorglan is respited until the quinzaine of St. John the Baptist, &c. [July 8], on account of diversity of opinion regarding that process and plaint. Afterwards the justiciary of Ireland was commanded to summon Thomas to be before the K. in 1 month of Easter, a. r. 19 [May 21, 1291], on which day Thomas was essoined; a day was given on the morrow of All Souls and subsequently in the octaves of Hilary [Jan. 20], further pleading between the parties on the latter day. A day was given for judgment in 5 weeks of Easter, wheresoever. Afterwards in 3 weeks of Easter, a. r. 21 [April 20, 1293], the process being continued, the parties appeared and Emelina prayed that certain reasons written on a Roll preserved among the records of Michaelmas term, a. r. 19 [1291], should be allowed to her, which was granted. A day for judgment was thereupon given to the parties in the quinzaine of Trinity wheresoever, &c. Afterwards a day was given on the morrow of All Souls, and subsequently on the quinzaine of the Holy Trinity. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 131, Rot. 11.]

April 5. 1075. The K.'s writ to the justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin. Geoffrey de Geynville and Matilda his wife had shown that whereas the K. ought not to have cognizance of pleas of trespasses in churches within their liberty of Meath, because not one of them is incrociata [appropriate] to the abbey of St. Thomas, Dublin, or other dignity, and because Geoffrey and Matilda ought to have that cognizance by charter of Henry son of the Empress [Hen. II.], and they and Matilda's ancestors were always wont to have it from the making of the charter, yet the justices of their own proper authority without the K.'s mandate had caused to be attached John le Petyt to answer before them why he had contrary to ecclesiastical liberty and the charter aforesaid taken away from the church of Moyclare an Irishman who had fled thither as a felon. As the plea of this attachment belongs to Geoffrey and Matilda by reason of their liberty, and not to the K. by reason of incrociacio [appropriation], the K. commands the justices to summon before them Geoffrey and Matilda and other persons interested, to hear their allegations, and having taken an inquisition upon the oaths of knights and other free and liege men, to certify thereupon to the K. by the quinzaine of St. John the Baptist [July 7] next ensuing. They also Say that in vacancies of that abbey the ministers of the K., to wit, the K.'s escheator, at divers times intervened on the K.'s behalf in regard to matters touching the church of Moyclare, believing that church to be as fully incroceata [appropriate] as the church of the monastery of St. Thomas aforesaid. The jurors nevertheless Say that the church of Moyclare never was incroccata [appropriate], and that the K.'s ministers during vacancy of the abbey intervened on the K.'s behalf by taking possession of it. They moreover Say that Geoffrey and Matilda always caused custodies of felons flying to the church of Moyclare to be maintained by men of their liberty, and were also wont to have abjurations of those felons, with escapes of felons. [20 Edw. I.]	1085. The burgesses and commonalty of Ross, Ireland, to Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford. The franchise of Leinster is much injured by reason of the K. having, to the disherison of the Earl and his parceners, forbidden ships from coming to Ross unless they and their goods are of that town, or of the franchise of Leinster. The earl's tenants are much impoverished thereby. Wherefore they pray the earl to prevail on the K. that ships may as freely come to Ross as they were wont to do in the time of the Earl's ancestors. [Royal Letters, 3073.]

[20 Edw. I. ?] 1086. William de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, to the K. The burgesses of Ross in Ireland had requested him to pray the K. that ships might without disturbance from the K.'s men and bailiffs freely go to Ross as they were wont to do in the time of the Marshalls. The burgesses of Waterford had lately hindered the ships from going thither on a suggestion made to the K.'s court. As this turns to the damage of his franchise of Wexford, the Earl prays the K. to allow the ships to go without disturbance to Ross, as they were wont to do in the time of the Marshalls, saving to the K. his prisage and customs, to be taken at a place to be assigned by him from all ships going to Ross. He prays that this grant may be confirmed by letters patent; had heard that the K. had commanded this by letters close, and nothing was done thereupon. [Royal Letters, 1352].

1292. April 15. 1087. The K.'s writ to the sheriff of Dublin. Whereas heretofore the K. had for his own advantage and for the improvement of the city of Waterford prohibited on pain of forfeiture merchants and masters of ships, who were not of the land of the heirs of Walter Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, from passing by the port of Waterford and touching at Rosponte [New Ross], or Hervey's Island, to trade with wines or merchandise, whereby the K. might be deprived of his rights and customs; and whereas a ship called the Alice of Harwich, which does not belong to any person in the land of the heirs of the above earl in Leinster, had by authority and force of the mayor and commonalty of Rosponte, and by consent of Thomas Ballard, master of that ship, Thomas Kempe, Robert Mangaunt, Thomas Coytyf, Solomon le Minister, John of Harwich, and Patrick valet of Vitalis Castener, having wines and merchandise therein, passed by the port of Waterford and touched at Rosponte, against the K.'s prohibition; the K. commands the sheriff to put by gage and safe pledges the mayor and bailiffs of Rosponte with 6 of its most influential and richest inhabitants, and Thomas aforesaid, the ship's master, Thomas, Robert, Solomon, John, and Patrick, to come before William de Vescy, chief justiciary of Ireland, and the K.'s Council at Dublin to answer in 1 month of Easter last past [May 5], to the K. in the premises; and to cause the wines and merchandise to be arrested and safely kept until further orders. Witness, William de Vescy, chief justiciary of Ireland. Waterford.

Further mandate to the justiciary and escheator to certify to the K. regarding the arrest. Berwick-upon-Tweed, Nov. 13, a. r. 20 [1292].

the merchants of Normandy were attached and came before the K.'s Council at Dublin in the quinzaine of Michaelmas; no one prosecuted them, and no one knew the cause of the attachment. They therefore were acquitted. The return of this writ was made to Walter de la Haye, the escheator, touching the replevin of ships, goods, and merchandise.

Pleas at Dublin before William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland, in 1 month of Easter, a. r. 20 [April 28, 1292]. William Seinde, mayor, and the bailiffs and commonalty of Rosponte, Thomas Ballard, master of the Alice of Harwich, Thomas Kemp, Robert Maniant, Thomas Coitif, Solomon le Minister, John de Crewes, and Patrick valet of Vitalis Castenere, were attached to answer the K. and the citizens of Waterford that whereas the K. had prohibited on pain of forfeiture merchants or masters of ships who were not of the land of the heirs of Walter Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, in Leinster, from passing by the port of Waterford and touching at Rosponte or Hervey's island to trade there, nevertheless the mayor and commonalty aforesaid, Thomas, Thomas, and the others passing by the port of Waterford took a ship which does not belong to any of the earl's heirs in Leinster to Rosponte against the K.'s prohibition and to the loss of the citizens of Waterford. The said mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty, Thomas, Thomas, and the others come and defend the injury, &c., and say that the ship aforesaid is of the land of the heirs of Walter Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, that the wines laden in that ship belong to the burgesses of Rosponte. and that the effects of the men of the heirs of Walter Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, in whatever ship laden were always free in times past to come to Rosponte although the ship did not belong to the heirs.

The mayor and citizens of Waterford come and say that the ship aforesaid is not from the land of the heirs of the said Marshall in Leinster, and pray judgment thereupon. They further say that the wines laden in the ship do not belong to the burgesses of Rosponte, but 20 hogsheads thereof belong to Bidald Castiner, 20 hogsheads to Thomas Ballard, and 21 hogsheads to their sailors, who are not of the land of Marshall's heirs in Leinster, and this they pray may be inquired of.

The mayor, bailiffs, and commonalty of Rosponte, Thomas, Thomas, and the others say that Bidald is a burgess of Ross, and that the 21 hogsheads of wine aforesaid are of portage, and do not belong to any foreign merchant, and they pray that this may be inquired of.

The mayor and citizens of Waterford say that Bidald aforesaid is not a burgess of Ross, nor of the tenure of the heirs of the Earl Marshall in Leinster, and this they pray may be inquired of. The mayor and burgesses of Ross as before.

The escheator of Ireland is commanded to take an inquisition touching the premises, to certify it to the chief justiciary or his locum tenens under his seal and the seals of those by whom it shall have been taken; to cause the ship and its freight to be valued, and to be delivered to lawful men, who shall answer therefor to the K. A day in the quinzaine of Michaelmas is given to the parties.

vill of Leighlin which is of the tenure of the Earl Marshal in Leinster, and he is a burgess in that vill; that 5 hogsheads belong to Bernard de Sealers, who is of the same earl's liberty in Leinster; that [20] hogsheads of wine belong to Thomas Ballard, and 21 hogsheads belong to his sailors and not to foreign merchants; that the said ship, which is without a mast, and is valued with its apparel at . . . . is delivered with 112 hogsheads of wine to William Seinde, William . . . . . Bole, John Kempe, and John Tailpas, burgesses of Ross, to answer to the K. when required for the value and profit thereof, 21 hogsheads of portage . . . . . by order of the K.'s Council of Ireland. The residue of the wines . . . . . as appears in the inquisition aforesaid.

The parties come in the quinzaine of Michaelmas aforesaid; a day in the quinzaine of Hilary at Dublin, and subsequently a further day, is given to them. [Inq. P.M., 20 Edw. I., No. 120.]

K. in 1 month of Easter to hear judgment in a plaint before the K.'s justices at Dublin between Simon le Large, plaintiff, and the said Richard, tenant, of 40 acres of land and 4 acres of meadow in Rathewyld. The K. had caused the record and process of this plaint to come before him for error, the plaint to be in the same state as it was in before the justices aforesaid at Dublin on the morow of St. John the Baptist, a. r. 17 [June 25, 1289]. The plaint then remained without day because Richard had thereupon vouched to warranty Gilbert son and heir of William de Appeltrefeld who has lands and tenements in England but not in Ireland. And Richard does not come. Judgment that the land be taken into the K.'s hand in name of distraint; and Richard is summoned to be before the K. wheresoever, &c., in 3 weeks of Michaelmas. If he does not then come the K. will deliver seisin of the tenements to Simon aforesaid. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 132, Rot. 27.]

3 weeks of Easter. 1093. Ireland. A day is given to Emelina who was the wife of Maurice Fitz Maurice, plaintiff, and Thomas Fitz Maurice, tenant, of a plea of land, in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, before the K. wheresoever, to hear judgment. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 132, Rot. 31.]

Trinity. 1094. Ireland. The K.'s writ to the justiciary of Ireland and his locum tenens. Whereas Simon de Campeleye had complained to the K. of error in the record and process of the plaint before Robert Bagot and his associates, justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin, between the said Simon, plaintiff, and William Wafre, tenant, of 1 messuage and 59 acres in Corbally, the K. commands the justiciary to summon the parties before the justices, and cause the error to be corrected; otherwise to send the record and process before the K. Westminster, July 15, a. r. 18 [1290].

Essoign de malo veniendi at Dublin in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, a. r. 17 [1289], before R[obert] Bagot and his associates, justices of the Common Pleas, Dublin. William de la Rosele against Simon Campeleye, of a plea of land, by Robert le Waleys, Nicholas Abbot of the house of St. Mary of Duleek against the same, of the same, by Peter of Coolock.

Pleas there in 1 month of Michaelmas in the year aforesaid [1289].

Simon de Campeleye demands against the Abbot of the house of St. Mary of Duleek 1 messuage and 50 acres of land in Corbally; and against William de la Rosele 9 acres of land in the said vill; which he claims as his inheritance, and wherein the abbot and William had not entry save after disseisin unjustly wrought by Ralph le Wafere against Alice le Wafere, mother of the said Simon, whose heir he is. William comes and of his tenure vouches to warranty the abbot aforesaid, who warrants. And the abbot as well of his own proper tenure as that which he warrants to William, vouches William le Wafere to warranty. Let him appear at Dublin on the morrow of St. Martin in the year aforesaid, by aid of court.

Continuance of plaint.

Pleas at Dublin in the octaves of Hilary [1289–90]. Simon comes and claims against the abbot and William de la Rosele, who vouches the abbot, who vouches William le Wafre, as before. And the abbot says that he is not bound to answer Simon aforesaid in this matter because Ralph le Wafre gave to Alice 9 acres in Killeglelan for her right in the messuage and land; Alice died seised of those 9 acres and long after her death Simon held them, and afterwards sold them to Henry Wafre, and of this he puts himself upon the country.

Simon says that Alice aforesaid never changed her estate in the said messuage and 50 acres of land until Ralph disseised her, as the writ says; and of this he puts himself upon the country. A jury is summoned at Dublin in the quinzaine of Easter [1290].

Further adjournment until the quinzaine of Trinity [1290].

The inquisition comes and says that Ralph gave to Alice aforesaid and her husband 9 acres for her right and claim in the messuage and land; Alice held the 9 acres after the death of her husband, and Simon likewise held them after the death of his mother, and sold them. Wherefore it is considered that Simon shall take nothing by this writ, but shall be amerced for a false action.

Afterwards before the K. here, by authority of the writ aforesaid and the record sent, William de Vesey, chief justiciary of Ireland, was commanded at Simon's suit to summon the said William to be here on that day. The said Simon and likewise the said William come, and as it is found in the record that Simon had not answered what had been alleged against him, he is told to answer.

William says that Simon cannot claim anything in the premises, because one Thomas and Alice his wife, mother of the said Simon, whose heir he is, claiming that the said Alice had right in the tenements aforesaid, demanded them against one Ralph grandfather of the said William, whose heir he is, and Ralph granted and gave to Thomas and Alice 9 acres of land in Keleglan to have and to hold to Thomas and Alice and the heirs of Alice as an exchange for her right in the tenements aforesaid. And Thomas and Alice held these 9 acres during the life of Thomas. Alice survived him, held the land and died seised thereof in her demesne as of her fee. After her death Simon entered therein as Alice's son and heir, held them, and afterwards sold them. And that this is so he is prepared to verify. Simon says that Thomas and Alice never received from Ralph as an exchange for Alicia's right the 9 acres of land. And this, &c. Afterwards Simon did not prosecute his record. Wherefore William is without day. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 133, Rot. 30.]

[Indorsed.] Gerald Fitz Maurice by John de Ponchardon, his attorney, on the 1st of March, a. r. 14 [1285–6], put in his claim to the manor and vill aforesaid.

The K.'s writ to Geoffrey de Genville, Robert Bagot, and Thomas Cantok, Chancellor of Ireland. Adam de Cretinge and Juliana his wife had shown that whereas Maurice Fitz Maurice had by his charter conjointly enfeoffed Thomas the Clare, formerly Juliana's husband, and Juliana herself, of the manor of Inchecoyn [Inchiquin], and the vill of Youghal, and they had peaceably held their seisin, Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, asserting that the custody of this manor and vill belonged to the K. by virtue of a fine heretofore levied in the K.'s court before justices itinerant at Cork, and by virtue of the custody of Thomas's heir under age, took the manor and vill into the K.'s hand, and still retains them to the loss and grievance of Adam and Juliana, and the disherison of the latter. Wherefore the K. commands Geoffrey, Robert, and Thomas to summon before them the escheator of Ireland and the said Adam and Juliana and the friends of Thomas's heir, to examine the charters and muniments touching the manor and vill, the record and process of a plaint between Thomas and Maurice, the fine and writ by which it was levied, and having taken an inquisition to certify thereupon to the K. in the quinzaine of St. John the Baptist, wheresoever, &c. Westminster [April] 6, a. r. 20 [1292.]

The K.'s writ dated Westminster, April 6, a. r. 20 [1292], as above, commanding Geoffrey de Geneville, Robert Bagod, and Thomas Cantok, Chancellor of Ireland, to certify to the K. in the quinzaine of Michaelmas. By virtue of this writ the treasurer and chamberlains of the Exchequer, Dublin, were commanded to cause the record and process of the plaint, the writ whereby the fine was levied, and the fine aforesaid, to come before them at Dublin on Monday the morrow of St. Lawrence next ensuing [Aug. 11, 1292]. The sheriffs of Cork and Dublin, and the seneschals of the liberties of Kildare, Carlow, and Wexford, were also commanded to summon jurors, the said Adam and Juliana, and the friends of the heir. On that day came the said Adam in person, the said Juliana by her attorney, the escheator for the K. and the heir aforesaid; the sheriffs of Cork and Dublin returned that they had summoned Adam, Juliana, and the friends of the heir to appear on the day mentioned in the writ; and the treasurer and chamberlains aforesaid sent the record and process of the plaint aforesaid in these words:—Essoigns and pleas of common assizes at Cork on the morrow of St. Hilary, a. r. 3 [Jan. 14, 1274–5], as above.

They also sent the fine levied in the K.'s court at Cork in 5 weeks of St. Hilary, a. r. 3 [Feb. 18, 1274–5], between Thomas de Clare, complainant, and Maurice Fitz Maurice, deforciant [as above].

The treasurer and chamberlains aforesaid certified that the writ aforesaid whereby the fine was levied had not been found.

The escheator being asked why he ejected Juliana aforesaid from the manor and vill (whereof she had been seised after the death of Thomas aforesaid, her husband), and took that manor and vill into the K.'s hand and refuses to deliver them to the said Adam and Juliana, the escheator answers because of the fine between the said Thomas and the said Maurice. And Adam and Juliana, being asked if they had the charter of feoffment made to Thomas and Juliana of the said manor and vill, answer that a charter was made thereupon by Maurice to Thomas and Juliana, but that they do not know where it is; . . . . they believe that the charter was removed by Thomas's friends or burnt in Castle Conewy in Thomond at the time of the burning of that castle. And they pray that an inquisition might be taken regarding the premises.

Because neither the charter aforesaid nor other muniments were produced before the said Geoffrey, Robert, and Master Thomas whereby they might be certified in the premises, by consent of Adam and Juliana aforesaid, and of the escheator who was present, answered for the K. and the heir, and removed and chose jurors as he pleased, the inquisition was taken in the form underwritten.

Inquisition taken at Dublin on Tuesday next after the feast of St. Lawrence, a. r. 20 [Aug. 12, 1292], before Sir Geoffrey de Genevylle, Sir Robert Bagod, and Master Thomas, Chancellor of Ireland, by the K.'s writ to them directed to enquire whether Thomas de Clare and Juliana his wife were conjointly enfeoffed by Maurice Fitz Maurice, Juliana's father, of the manor of Hynchechoyn [Inchequin] and the vill de le Yochyll [Youghal], by the underwritten Jurors:—Thomas de la Roche, William le Bret, John de Hauterive, John le Veel, Milo de Rochefort, Wolfran de Berneval, John de Bryngesham, Robert Perseval, Walter de Penrys, Robert Dullard, Henry de Rydyryford, and William de Cantilupe, all knights, Who Say upon their oath that Sir Maurice Fitz Maurice enfeoffed Sir Thomas de Clare and Juliana his wife, daughter of the said Maurice, conjointly of the manor of Inchiquin and the vill of Youghal aforesaid, to hold to them and the heirs male of the said Thomas and Juliana begotten; that afterwards the said Thomas and Juliana granted the said manor and vill to the said Maurice to hold for his life; that on Maurice's death Thomas and Juliana conjointly entered the lands aforesaid and held them peaceably until Thomas's death; and that then Juliana entered the manor and vill, and held them until Walter de la Haye, escheator of Ireland, removed Juliana and took seisin of the lands to the K.'s use, by authority of a fine levied at Cork before the justices itinerant there between the said Maurice and Thomas, which fine is found in the K.'s Treasury at Dublin. Quinzaine of Michaelmas.

1150. Ireland. A day in the quinzaine of Hilary, wheresoever, &c., is given for judgment to Emelina who was the wife of Maurice Fitz Maurice, plaintiff, and to Thomas Fitz Maurice, tenant, of a plea of land. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 135, Rot. 16.]

Quinzaine of Michaelmas.

1151. The K.'s writ to William de Vescy, justiciary of Ireland. William de Prene had complained that whereas no one in the K.'s realm or in Ireland ought to be arrested or imprisoned for felony without presentment of 12 men upon articles to be presented in the justices' eyres, and no inquisitions of such felonies ought to be taken save by the men of the county where they were committed, nevertheless the justices itinerant in the co. of Dublin had caused William to be arrested and imprisoned at Dublin because certain persons had presented to them a bill accusing William of having feloniously taken 60*s.* worth of nails bought by the K.'s money for works of the castle of Roscommon in the county of Connaught, and 20*l.* of wages of the K.'s carpenters of that castle, and of having maintained a common servant there, who did little or no work, in lieu of a carpenter, and of having committed other transgressions in that county and the county of Dublin. The justices by an inquisition taken by men of the county of Dublin, upon which William did not put himself save for transgressions alleged to have been committed in that county, would have adjudged him to be hanged [suspendi adjudicassent] if William had not made with them a fine of 200*l.* The K. therefore commands the justiciary that having associated with himself Geoffrey de Geneville, Robert Bagot, and Master Thomas Cantok, Chancellor of Ireland, and other members of the K.'s Council, he cause the record, process, and inquisition in this matter to come before him; that in presence of William he diligently examine them; and that if the proceedings were irregular he cause them to be amended, and due justice to be rendered to William. If any difficulty should prevent him from doing so without consulting the K. he shall then send before the K. under his seal the record and process in this matter with the tenour of the bill presented, and this writ. Berwick-upon-Tweed, June 6, a. r. 20 [1292].

Pleas before William de Vescy, Geoffrey de Genevile, Robert Bagot, Master Thomas Cantok, Chancellor of Ireland, and other members of the K.'s Council at Dublin, on Monday morrow of the feast of St. Lawrence, a. r. 20 [Aug. 11, 1292].

The K. having sent his writ concerning William de Prene, as above, Brother William Fitz Roger and his associates, justices itinerant at Dublin, were commanded to be before the justiciary and the others at Dublin on the above day, and to have there the record and process of this matter together with the tenour of the bill aforesaid; William was also summoned. The justices came and produced the process, record, and tenour of the bill which they say is contained in their process as appears below. William de Prene comes and complains that he had been grievously injured by the justices, as is contained in a schedule intitled "Grievances of William de Prene." The justices itinerant reply that there is no error in the record and process, and that William was not injured by either the bill or the inquisition, because they say that though they might have pleaded the bill, they did not do so until they had presented it to 12 jurors of the county of Dublin, who found that they could by no means acquit William of the charges contained in the bill. The justices then for the first time caused William to be attached; and having challenged 60 [names] and more he put himself upon the inquisition. William says that the bill was never delivered to the jurors, or examined by them; that he never put himself upon the jury save regarding facts occurring in Dublin, and demands that another inquisition be taken.

The justices say that the iron nails were sold at Dublin, and it therefore seemed to them that the inquisition might be taken there.

As it is not usual to supersede the record of justices by an inquisition, and as William has made with the K. a fine of 200*l.* the justiciary and those associated with him would not proceed in the premises until further orders.

Process and record before Brother William Fitz Roger, Prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland, and his associates, justices itinerant, at Dublin, a. r. 20 [1291-2]. William de Prene, carpenter, was attached and charged that whereas he was keeper of the K.'s work at Roscommon he stole of the K.'s iron wherewith he bound a cart; afterwards he loaded the cart with iron nails, to wit spikinges, caused them to be furtively carried to Dublin, and sold them to his own use; that whereas he was keeper and master-carpenter throughout Ireland, he frequently rendered account of more workmen than he employed, so embezzling the moneys of the K. and Queen to their damage of 300*l.*; that whereas he ought to have been at Glincyy [? Glincry, Glencree] and Newcastle looking after the Queen's workmen, he attended to his own works and hired other workmen at the K.'s expense at 8*d.* a day, so cheating the K. to the amount of 10*l.*; that whereas he had bought a salmon at the river Liffey, he subsequently sent Philip son of John Say to the fishermen who had sold it, to tell them to send a quarter of salmon [quarterium salmonis], and because a portion was longer than the rest he charged Philip with stealing part of the quarter. Philip not avowing this William bound fast Philip's finger [digitum suum constrinxit] in a door for a day, from one o'clock until evening, so that Philip nearly lost his finger. William subsequently imprisoned Philip for 2 days against the K.'s peace; and that whereas William took 20*l.* of the K.'s money to build a bridge at Limerick, through his faulty work 80 men were drowned. William denies all these charges and thereof puts himself upon an inquisition of 12 men.

On Thursday next before the Purification [Jan. 31, 1291–2] the jurors come, namely:—John son of Ririth and Richard de Repenteny, Knights, Henry Mape, Thomas de Isham, Walter de Belinges, John de Morton, Robert de Balincogan, John Clement, of Bray, Nicholas Andrew, Walter de Lindesaye, Adam Hertford, John Giffard, and Nicholas the clerk, Who Say that William is not guilty of stealing the iron for binding a cart; and if he hired persons to superintend in his place the K.'s workmen, he paid their wages out of his own money; he is therefore acquitted thereof. As to the stolen nails they Say that he caused them to be carried away and sold to the value of 60*s.*, and this furtively; they find nevertheless that he was thereof indicted and convicted before S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam, then justiciary of Ireland; that William having hired workmen to execute the K.'s works he appropriated to his own use the wages he received according to custom on Saturdays; that William had a servant who kept his horse, and to him he daily gave out of the K.'s moneys the wages of a carpenter; this servant however attended more frequently to William's affairs than to the K.'s works, thus embezzling the K.'s moneys; and that William imprisoned Philip son of John de Say and bound fast his finger as aforesaid. Therefore judgment thereupon.

As to the articles aforesaid whereof he was convicted by the jury William comes and makes a fine of 200*l.* with the K. to have peace. As to the article touching the bridge of Limerick it is respited before the chief justiciary when he shall go to those parts. And it is considered that William be adjudged out of the K.'s service from now until he shall obtain grace in the premises; that William's lands, tenements, and chattels be taken into the K.'s hand, and that his body be committed to prison until he find sufficient pledges of the money aforesaid. The justices however wishing to be certified as to William having been charged and convicted before S[tephen] Archbishop of Tuam sent to the Exchequer for the record and process thereof; they were sent as follows:—

William the K.'s carpenter, taken and imprisoned for levelling and carrying away oak trees in the K.'s wood at Newcastle McKinegan, and for not well and faithfully conducting himself at Randown and Roscommon regarding the K.'s works and for causing waste of wood and timber, comes and gives 20*l.* for having peace in the premises, and for visne released.

Afterwards William de Prene comes and finds pledges for his fine of 200*l.* aforesaid, namely, Master Richard, of Ashbourne for 10*l.*; Master Geoffrey de Bath, 100*s.*; William Burnel, 20*l.*; Adam de Clare, 4*l.*; Roger de Stapleton, 10*l.*; Thomas Fitz Reginald, 4*l.*; John le Waleys, 5 marks; Albert de Kenleye, 100*s.*; Simon de Malvern, 40*s.*; Roger de Mesington, 40*s.*; Robert le Marshal, 80*s.*; Simon de Camerâ, 20*s.*; John le White, mayor of Limerick, 100*s.*; Richard of Oxford, sheriff of Roscommon, 20*l.*; Geoffrey Miller, of Castleknock, 1 mark; Richard Turbervile, of Roscommon, 40*s.*; Richard de Crus, 40*s.*; Nicholas Passelewe, 1 mark; Adam Cromelin the clerk, 40*s.*; John Wodelok, 10 marks; Nicholas Skybras, 20*s.*; Andrew Tyrel, 20*s.*; Richard Teling, 20*s.*; Nicholas de Crus, 20*s.*; Bertram Abbot, 20*s.*; Thomas le Venur, 20*s.*; John le Messenger, 1 mark; Nicholas Smith, 1 mark; Henry Wilton, 1 mark; Hugh Fitz Reginald, 1 mark; Hugh son of Thomas Sibilye, 1 mark; Thomas Mestayl, 1 mark; John Fitz Peter de la More, 1 mark; Eustace de Fonte, 1 mark; John Tyrel, 20*s.*; Thomas de Coventry, 40*s.*; Roger de Ashbourne, 40*s.*; John de Strattone, 20*s.*; and for all the residue of the money aforesaid Richard of Oxford, Geoffrey de Bath, William de Morton, and John Baret. Wherefore it is considered that William be acquitted of all the charges aforesaid, and again have his lands and chattels.

Replies of the justices [Norman French].

Grievances of William de Prene [Norman French].

Afterwards on the quinzaine of Michaelmas in this year [1292] William de Prene came, and prayed for justice in the premises here before the K., but no one came to prosecute on the K.'s behalf, and the suit could not therefore proceed. But it would be more expedient to the K. that the felonies should be heard and determined in Ireland in the county where they were perpetrated. Wherefore the whole record was remitted to William de Vescy, the chief justiciary. The record having been inspected it is found that there is error in the reply of the justices, because they say that they might have put William on his trial for life and limb both orally and by the bill presented by Nigel le Brun against William for sedition touching the K., although he had not been judged by 12 men. It is also found that 12 men convicted him of part of the felonies, but they do not say of what felony he is guilty. It is further found in the justices' reply that they wished only to proceed against William aforesaid for the felonies committed in the co. of Dublin, while William had put himself on the inquisition regarding the felonies committed as well within as without that county. This is not lawful because each one ought to stand his trial in the county where his offence had been committed. It is further found in the record that the suit against William was at first not a criminal one, because 300*l.* were laid as damages of the K. and Queen, and for this no one can be sentenced to the last punishment. Wherefore there is error in these articles, or in some of them, and it appears that the record ought to be annulled. William de Vescy, chief justiciary of Ireland, is therefore commanded as before to associate with himself Geoffrey de Geneville, Robert Bagot, Master Thomas de Cantok, Chancellor of Ireland, and other members of the K.'s Council in that country, and examine and amend the record, having regard as to whether William aforesaid made the fine by reason of fear of death. The justiciary shall take from William security to stand his trial in the county in which the offence was committed, and having summoned those whom he ought to summon he shall put William on a fair and proper trial, if any one will charge him according to law. In the meanwhile he shall deliver to William upon mainprise his goods and chattels, lands, tenements, and farms. Justice shall be rendered to William touching the chattels taken from him while he was in the K.'s prison, and touching the issues received therefrom in the meanwhile.

Afterwards in the octaves of Hilary next ensuing the said William de Prene came and said that William de Vescy, chief justiciary of Ireland, had not rendered him justice according to the K.'s mandates. Wherefore William de Vescy is commanded to associate with him the persons before mentioned with the treasurer of Ireland, excepting Brother William aforesaid and his associates, justices itinerant, and to examine the record aforesaid and do justice to William. He shall certify to the K. wheresoever, &c., in the quinzaine of the feast of St. John the Baptist, what he shall do thereupon. [Coram Rege, Edw. I., No. 135, Rot. 27–28.]

1292. [Before Oct. 26.] 1156. Brother T. de Anna, the monk, to R[obert] Bishop of Bath and Wells. The administration of the property in Ireland belonging to the bishop and the church of Bath having been committed to him, he should have laboured in vain unless sustained by the bishop's powerful aid. Fears that there is danger to the bishop and his church in the plea of which he had often both written and spoken. This plea although frequently dormant had been revived by writ of England before the justices of Ireland. Sends the process and record of that plea together with the writ aforesaid, in order that the bishop may provide a remedy for the danger. [Royal Letters, 2679.]

Jurors:—Andrew Avenel, Robert de Mandeville, John son of Ryrid, Wolfran de Bernevalle, David de la Roche, Edmund le Gras, John son of Robert le Power, William le Butiller, Walter Purcel, Henry Langeport, Philip Christopher, John de Kerdif, of Collin, John Russel, of Athboy, Who Say that there would accrue great loss to the K. and great damage to the city of Waterford if ships should pass by that city to touch at Ross; that before 1292. and after the coming of the English the latter port was wont to be called the port of Waterford and not the port of Ross; that ships were always wont to touch at Waterford until the marshals of Leinster built the vill of Ross; that when that vill began to get rich, the shipping left Waterford and transferred itself to Ross; and that the citizens of Waterford perceiving that they were aggrieved thereby, had recourse to the K.'s court in the time when Robert de Ufford was justiciary of Ireland, and recovered their former position.

[Indorsed.] Nothing, because it would be to the K.'s damage on account of the oath [the earl] had taken to the Crown. [Inq. P.M., 20 Edw. I., No. 62.]

Nov. 23. 1168. Whereas the debts in which Theobald le Botiller, deceased, was bound to the K. were attermined at 100 marks a year payable at the Exchequer of Dublin until the debts should be discharged (as Theobald son and heir of the said Theobald had certified), the K. grants of special grace to Theobald [the son] that he may pay at the above Exchequer 100 marks a year for the debts aforesaid, 1 moiety at Easter and the other moiety at Michaelmas, until the whole shall be discharged. Mandate to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, to search the Rolls there, and if the debts of Theobald [the father] were attermined at 100 marks a year they shall cause Theobald the son to have those terms, and cause it to be so inrolled. Nov. 23. 1169. The K. to the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, Dublin. Although the K. had lately committed to Henry de Cumpton, clerk, the K.'s demesne lands of Crumlin for a term not yet expired, to hold of the K. to farm for a yearly sum of money to be rendered at that Exchequer, nevertheless as it appears by inquisition taken by the K.'s order in that Exchequer, and returned to England, that the present tenants of Crumlin and their ancestors had held that land for a time whereof there is no memory for an annual farm, and that it would be more to the K.'s advantage and honour that the tenants rather than Henry aforesaid or any other person should hold that land with pleas and perquisites for an annual rent, the K. of special grace commands the Treasurer and Barons to commit to the tenants the land aforesaid with pleas and perquisites to hold as before. Wark-upon-Tweed. [Close, 21 Edw. I., m. 10.]

[1275–1292.] 1170. Baruncinus Walteri, citizen and merchant of Lucca, to R[obert] Bishop of Bath and Wells, praying the bishop to give counsel and aid regarding his affairs to Walter doorkeeper of the Exchequer, Dublin. [Royal Letters, 2300.]

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1174. Petition to the K. from Hugh Kent, of Ireland, liege burgess of Galuy [Galway], praying letters patent enabling him and his children to use in life and in death English law in Ireland. It would be for the K.'s profit that this grant should be made to all those who demand it. The K. commanded his great Parliament lately held at London that this should be so, for his Council showed to him that it would be greatly for his advantage. [Chancery Files, Bundle 13. Norman French.]

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1175. Whereas it is difficult to the Abbot of St. Thomas, Dublin, to come frequently to the court of England to seek remedies of oppressions, the K. commands J. de Kirkeby and W. de Odiham to consider the petitions of the canons of that house, and cause them to have such a remedy as may seem consonant to right and grace of the court. [Royal Letters, 2032.]

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1176. The Abbot and convent of St. Thomas near Dublin pray a writ of limits between the barony of their abbey, which they hold of the K. in capite, and the common of the city of Dublin; so that a settlement may be for once and for all made regarding the trespasses and usurpations caused by the citizens in that barony to the manifest disherison of the abbot and convent. [Royal Letters, 2031.]

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1177. Writ commanding the sheriff of Limerick to levy out of the goods and chattels of Agnes de Valence 259*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*, and to have this money before the barons of the Exchequer, Dublin, in the octaves of St. Martin, to be delivered to the attorney of Sir Thomas de Clare. [Chancery Files, Bundle 7.]

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1178. Memorandum of instructions by the K. to the Chancellor of Ireland:—

Not to give or make commissions of wards and marriages or other profits in Ireland without the like command. [Royal Letters, 3573. Norman French.

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1179. From [ ] to [the Chancellor]. By the charter of King Hen. III., the K.'s father, the burgesses of Kilmidan enjoyed the franchise of Bristol; this charter having by mischance been eaten by a hog the writer prays that the petition of the burgesses may be shown to the K. and that they may be aided in obtaining another charter. [Royal Letters, 2052. Norman French.]

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1180. Brother John, Prior, and the convent of the canons of St. Mary of Trim, Meath, of the Arroasian order of St. Augustin, to the K. Brother Milo their late Abbot being deceased they send to the K. Simon their brother canon, bearer of these presents, praying that licence to elect may be granted to them, and that the K. will order his justiciary or escheator of Ireland to restore their poor temporalities after the elect shall have been confirmed. [Temp. Edw. I.] 1181. Thomas de Clare to R[obert] Bishop of Bath and Wells, Chancellor of England, praying him to expedite the affairs of Walter of Worcester, doorkeeper of the K.'s Exchequer in Ireland. [Royal Letters, 2018.]

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1182. The Abbess de Bello Portu of St. Mary [Kilcleeheen] near Waterford and the convent thereof to the K. Having by special grace obtained from the K. licence to elect an abbess, they pray restitution of their poor temporalities, which had remained in the K.'s hand for 1½ year. [Royal Letters, 3090.]

[Temp. Edw. I.] 1183. The K. to the justiciary and treasurer of Ireland. Whereas the K. had committed to Henry de Corham [Gorham] the K.'s manor of Chapelizod to hold for a term of 5 years at an annual rent, and Henry was prevented from holding it to the end of the term, whereby he sustained grave loss, the K. commands the justiciary and treasurer to commit the manor to Henry for a term of 5 years, he to render yearly therefor at the Exchequer of Dublin as much as the Bishop of Meath and William de Lyndesy were wont to render. [Royal Letters, 3701.]

[1266–1296.] 1184. Benedict by the title of St. Martin, cardinal priest, to the Chancellor of England. Had heard that as John Bishop of Clonfert, about to journey to the Apostolic See, could not fully inform the K.'s officials of the amount of the money of the tenth in Ireland collected by him, or of how much remained to be collected, and in whose hands the money lay (although he had several years previously sent instruments and writings to Rome in order to account), he was and still is detained by the officials in England. As it does not become the kingly honour to subject this prelate to loss while engaged in such a business, the cardinal prays the Chancellor so to assist the bishop with the K. that he may not be impeded in freely prosecuting his journey to Rome. Rome, 10th of the calends of June [May 23]. [Royal Letters, 3312.]

[1292–1302.] 1185. J[ohn] of Kent to John de Langton. The office of Chancellor of the Exchequer, Dublin, being vacant, and custody of its seal having been committed to him by the justiciary and council until further provision shall have been made by the K., prays that that custody although small may be granted to him by letters patent during the K.'s pleasure. It seems to him that the long service he had rendered to the K. entitles him to greater grace. [Royal Letters, 2017.]

[1292–1302.] 1186. Geoffrey de Geynville to John de Langton, Chancellor of England. The Chancellor of Ireland troubles and molests him by Chancery writs against his franchise and the charter of first feoffment of his wife's ancestors, and against his usage and the commands of the K.'s writs. Prays him to command the Chancellor of Ireland to act and write in such a case in the same way as the English Chancellor writes in similar franchises. He cannot take an example from the franchises of Ireland because there are none like those in England. [Royal Letters, 2013.]

[? 1292–1302.] 1187. The Abbot and convent de Sury [Inislounagh] of Ireland to the K. King John had enfeoffed them in frankalmoign of a meadow in their tenement of Glannewaydan; one of their abbots had leased this meadow to Sir John le Poer and his heir srendering to the abbey 4*s.* a year, with reversion to the abbot and convent, as appears by chirograph. Peter le Poer, the next heir of Sir John, was in seisin of the meadow when he died, but the escheator of Ireland will not deliver possession of it to the abbot without special order of the K. Wherefore the abbot and convent pray the K. that they may have their meadow in peace according to the tenor of the chirograph. [Royal Letters, 3170. Norman French.]

[1292–1302.] 1188. William le Brun to John de Langton, Chancellor of England, praying him to aid Thomas de Maundeville his friend, a valet of Ireland, of the K.'s service, in conducting business relating to William. [Royal Letters, 2056.]

1282–1306. 1189. William Bishop of Emly to the K. praying licence to make attorneys in England and Ireland in all pleas. [Royal Letters, 2887.]
